POETRY.

For "The Constitutionalist."

THOUGHTS ON THE DEATH OF GEORGE MILLER.

Now we daily move unthinking,
  That grim death is hovering 'round,
That some genial friend among us,
  Soon shall lay beneath the ground.

And amid a happy household,
  Deepest gloom a monarch reign;
Hearts to-day all full of gladness,
  Soon be crushed and full of pain.

Thus we write, as we sit thinking
  Of a genial form laid low;
Smitten by the cruel reaper,
  Death; to all a foe.

We remember all his goodness,
  All the nobleness of heart,
And we know the bitter anguish,
  Loved ones suffered thus to part.

And yet after all our pondering,
  O'er bereavements sorely vexed,
Comes to us this solemn question—
  Which friend shall be gathered next?

—Mrs. M. A. Brittin.

BRAZOS PETE.

"Say! 'fore you start another dance
  Just let me speak a word,
For when the music's goin'
  I mightn't p'r'aps be heard.
A sick gal's lyin' in this house
  With fever;—awful bad;
And when you swing them hoofs around
  The noise 'most drives her mad.

"I heard you tell her mother
  'Stuff cotton in her ears'
And lots of other drunken gab;
  Besides, I saw her tears
When she told me that the doctor says
  The gal must be kept still,
Or else what she's a sufferin'
  Is pretty sure to kill!

"So I thought I'd come myself this time
  And hint to you galoots,
That if that fiddle squawks agin
  Or cornet howls its toots,
And you go prancin' round this room
  Like frightened Texan steers
When first they feel the lasso fall,
  Why, then, it just appears—

"I'll hev to jine the orchestra;
  I'll hev to lead the band;
I play a one-keyed piccolo
  With any in the land;
And, if I sound its gamut while
  I stand beside the door,
You'll recognize old Brazos Pete,
  If you never did afore!"

MISCELLANEOUS READING.

AN OLD MAN'S WIFE.

"I am afraid it isn't right, Mr. Ridgeland, for me to accept your kind offer. I——"

Somehow little Diana Mary was very much confused, and she dropped her sweet flower-face away from the old gentleman who was standing beside her, looking so kindly down on her.

"Afraid to marry me because I am such an old man, Diana?" "Or do you think it impossible for me to love you because I am so old? What is the reason, little one?"

Diana looked quickly up, her lovely eyes all piteous in their sweet truthfulness.

"I was only thinking of myself. I—I am quite sure I am not in love with you. I think it would be wrong to marry you because you are generous enough and kind enough to want to give me a home and care. There is no other reason why you should want me, sir."

Mr. Ridgeland smiled in her gray eyes.

"Innocent little girlie! But you will believe me when I tell you that, although I could not endure to see such a child as yourself left to battle with the world alone, although I certainly do believe you have no warmer feeling for me than friendliness and esteem, still, Diana, I love you truly, for all there is a difference of nearly fifty years in our ages. I love you for your sweet, gracious ways, that are such a charming combination of girlishness and womanliness. I love you because I see what a noble, lovely woman you will make. You are modest and very beautiful, Diana, and I want you to be my wife. Diana, shall it be so?"

The girl knew his offer was what the world calls a splendid one, only she did not love him. And it had not been so very long since she had cried night after night, when no one knew it, because Ned Furness had cooled in his devotion to her—handsome Ned, with the smiling face, and a way with him that had appealed so strongly to her heart.

But Ned Furness, his beauty, and his way were of no avail.

He had hardly spoken to her of late, and she had heard more than once or twice that there was a pair of pretty grey eyes that had conquered him.

So when Mr. Ridgeland had asked her if she would be his wife she had thought it her first duty to tell him that she did not love him as she supposed he desired to be loved, as he certainly deserved to be loved in consideration of all the great kindness he was showing her.

Then, when Mr. Ridgeland had so calmly, gravely, decidedly put the question, Diana looked at him, her sweet blue eyes wistful and pleading.

"If you think I can suit you, sir, I will try to please you, indeed I will Mr. Ridgeland, for you are my kindest, truest friend."

Then he lifted her face by her little dimple chin and kissed her.

"I will always be your truest, kindest friend, Diana, dear. The time shall never come when you will regret having given yourself to my keeping, and the time shall come when you will love me, despite my white head, Diana."

And she thought him the most courtly, dignified gentleman she had ever seen as he spoke, and she smiled and blushed so prettily that Mr. Ridgeland congratulated himself that it would not be long before his prophecy came true.

Not long after that they were married, and the fairy-tale life of Diana Ridgeland began just as she had expected and went on just as she had anticipated; and she was so happy and proud, and so shyly sweet and graceful, that people said Mrs. Ridgeland was an idol, if ever yet a young, beautiful wife was an old man's idol.

People called her "an old man's darling," and many a girl and woman envied her, while more than one of Mr. Ridgeland's friends openly expressed their admiration of his charming young wife.

And one, a crusty old bachelor, who had been among the first to deride Mr. Ridgeland for assuming the yoke of married life, has ventured to say that other gentlemen admired young Mrs. Diana, too—gentlemen who had no special business to.

"You see, she's so young and pretty, and had such a bright, girlish vivacity, that it attracts people—gentlemen—especially those near her own age, who are naturally companionable for her. There's Ned Furness, for instance."

Mr. Ridgeland found himself strangely provoked by his friend's tone.

He looked up quickly.

"Yes, Mr. Furness is a visitor at my house, and an old acquaintance of my wife. Well?"

"It is to be hoped it is well, Ridgeland; but—don't be mad, old fellow—but people do say he is there quite often. He's one of your handsome, dashing sort, you know—just the style to captivate a woman, and he was a beau of your wife long before you were."

The stern white brows lowered angrily at this remark.

"If you have anything to say, say it, and don't insinuate it. People talk, do they, of my wife and young Furness? Let me assure you, it is my wish that my wife receive young company, suited, as you say, to her years."

And from the haughtily decided way he used, it was evident Mr. Ridgeland considered the subject dismissed? Dismissed from conversation, but not from mind. How could such a subject be dismissed? And Mr. Ridgeland found it intruding with distasteful pertinacity a dozen times that day as he was busy in his private office.

He went home an hour earlier than usual that afternoon—why, he could not have said, certainly not from what his over-zealous friend had said, and yet, it struck him with peculiarly startling and unpleasant force when the footman told him, in answer to his customary inquiry if Mrs. Ridgeland was in, that he would find her in her own sitting-room, with Mr. Furness.

For one moment the temptation was strong upon him to go direct to his wife's room and inform her visitor that he must come no more. For one moment, it seemed as if jealousy, distrust and anger had taken complete possession of him—then with a dignity worthy himself, he passed in and went to the library—far enough away from where the servant had told him, his wife and her guest—her admirer, once her lover—were, to prove how effectually he had routed the evil feeling that had possessed him.

His library was a charming room, the very ideal of what a library should be—a long, narrow room, with walls hung in green fluted silk, and divided from the back drawing-room by sliding glass doors that were draped on both sides with silk.

And the glass doors were just enough ajar for him to hear voices the moment he entered the room—enough ajar to enable him to know that the footman had made a mistake—that Mrs. Ridgeland and Mr. Furness were not in the lady's own room but in the drawing-room.

The thrill of gratification that he experienced did not lessen as he stood in the centre of his library and heard, without listening, first his wife's clear, indignant voice.

"I will not permit you to speak so to me. You shall not forget I am Mrs. Ridgeland's wife." Then Furness' voice, eager, impassioned.

"There is no danger of my forgetting the accursed fact, Diana. Notwithstanding, I believe you love me yet, as you once did. I love you, Diana, dearly, dearly, and you all know it."

"I tell you I will not have such insolence! You shall be corrected of your mistake in supposing I ever loved you, and then you shall leave the house, or I will call the servants to assist you out. I never cared for you—I never cared for anyone but my dear noble husband, the best man ever a woman had to love and care for her. I will not have him or his name, or his house, disgraced by such a one as you, who dare speak such words to his wife—the wife who honors and loves him."

Furness laughed.

"Love him—sixty-eight years old! That's likely, Diana! Love him—no you don't!" he sneered.

Then Diana's voice, like clear, cold steel, was heard:

"Leave this room, this house, sir, in which you are not fit to be. Leave it instantly, and never dare to enter it again, you ungentlemanly rascal, to presume upon such insulting language to a wife!"

And Mr. Ridgeland heard his wife's dress rustle rapidly over the carpet and out in the hall and ascending the stairs; and he saw Mr. Furness get his hat, cane and gloves, and take himself off very like a whipped cur.

Then he followed his true-hearted little wife to her room where he found her pale, excited, and still indignant.

"My little darling! I never loved you so in all my life! Diana, I heard it all, every word, Diana, my little love!"

The next day he sent Mr. Furness his official congé and that gentleman had ample reason to malign his unlucky stars that ever his awkward foolishness had shut the doors of the Ridgeland house against him, while master and mistress never thought of him again, scarcely, and certainly not fair Diana, when, a few years afterwards, she donned her sombre weeks on the occasion of her husband's death, that left her sole, unconditional inheritress of his immense wealth.

She did not think of him, nor of anyone, despite the gratuitous advice on all sides to marry again, despite the well spread rumors that she surely would marry again.

She did not marry, nor ever will.

Nor will she ever entirely lay aside the mourning robes she wears as an honest, loving token of the memory of the husband she so loved and revered, and to whom she will be ever real and true.

A BIG CHECK.

The paying teller of a Griswold street bank was busy with his greenbacks the other day, when an individual handed up a paper reading: "Pay this personage the sum of $1,000, and charge to the account of Smith."

The cashier shook his head and sighed, and told the personage to go away and sober up. Personage wouldn't do it. He argued and reasoned and raised a row, and he didn't stop until he had been under lock and key for an hour.

"Henry Cross, you may explain the matter if you can," remarked His Honor.

"What matter?"

"Why; your being drunk and raising a row in a bank."

"Never was drunk in my life."

"What! never!"

"Never was in a bank in my life, either. Never had a dollar to put in the bank, and no bank ever had a dollar for me. Must be some mistake here."

"Why, sir, you were intoxicated sure enough, and your conduct raised the rate of interest in no time at all. Where do you live?"

"Oh, out here a ways."

"What were you doing in the city?"

"Oh, kinder looking around."

"Have you any money?"

"I don't need any."

"Well, you can't travel any further on your check just now. I'm going to send you up for thirty days."

"You can't do it."

But he did. Bijah said he was the toughest old man he ever got hold of, and it took a strain of a hundred and seventy pounds to the square inch to get him back into his cell, but he was put there.—Detroit Free Press.

A naturalist has discovered that monkeys may be taught to dance. Taught to dance, indeed! We have seen them dance a hundred times at parties in the fawney [illegible].

A DISORDERLY TIME.

"I want to make a complaint against a disorderly house," explained an excited individual as he rushed up to a policeman on Michigan Avenue yesterday.

"Where is it?"

"It's a saloon on the next block."

"What can you prove?"

"Prove? Why, I went in there and asked for a drink."

"Well?"

"And I got it."

"Yes."

"But when I went to pay for it I found that I had lost my wallet. I told him I'd go out and borrow the money, but he got mad and went for me."

"Well, is that all your proof?"

"All! Not by a long shot! I've had my left eye disordered. I've had my front teeth disordered. My nose is disordered half an inch out of line, and this $24 suit of clothes wouldn't bring 40 at an auction. We disordered the stove and two chairs, and if you can't make a disorderly house out of all this you'd better get out of that uniform."—Detroit Free Press.

Flatterers do not shoot their rubbish into your ears.

Your are saved many a debt, many a deception, many a headache.

And lastly if you have a true friend in the world, you are sure, in a very short space of time to learn it.

HE STOOD THE TEST FOR A FREE PASS.

The other morning a young man of affable manners presented himself at the box office of a variety show at Petaluma, and requested a press pass.

"You don't claim to be a journalist, do you?" asked the manager, glancing suspiciously at the good clothes and innocent expression of the applicant.

"Yes I do, though; I'm on the Flea-town Snapper."

"Hum! What is your department?" growled the manager.

"I do the 'Answers to Correspondents,'" asserted the youth.

"Do, eh? Lemme see. What was the fastest mile ever skated backwards for money in the United States?"

"The question is always signed 'Nimrod,'" said the young man, promptly, "and the answer is, 'Died in Brazil, 1446.'"

"Correct," said the manager. "When was Cleopatra hung?"

"Trim with deep ruching and bake before a quick fire."

"Did Oliver Cromwell have a blue wart on his chin?"

"B takes the trick, of course."

"Was Queen Elizabeth bandy-legged, or only bandied in one leg? and how do you take ink stains out of marble?"

"Inquire at any hardware store. Patagonia was discovered by Benjamin Franklin in 1293."

"That settles it," said the manager, promptly shelling out a private box check; "I see you've got 'em all by heart. Pass right in."

WHERE'S CONGRESS?

"Where's congress? I am looking for congress," said a tall, one-eyed woman, peering through one the doors of the House of Representatives, the other morning. "Is that fellow with a bald head Congress?"

"What do you want with Congress, any how?" demanded a deputy door keeper gruffly. "Hold on, you can't go in there!"

"I came from Bucks county, Pa., to see Congress, and if you've got it on draught anywhere around here, I want some! What's the reason I can't go in there?"

"Cause you can't. Nobody allowed here but members."

"That red-headed man with a squint a member?"

"No; he's one of the members' secretaries. He has a right on the floor."

"Is that lop-sided chap with a wig one of the secretaries?"

"No; he's a friend of a member. Had a pass."

"What's that bare-legged boy falling over the back of a chair? Has he got any friends?"

"He's one of the pages."

"Who is that red-nosed artist, with a sore ear? Did he have a pass?"

"That's a messenger. He don't need a pass."

"What's that fellow with his legs on a desk? Is he one of the bosses?"

"He is one of the clerks."

"Any of them fellows pay any taxes?"

"I think not. Don't know," said the door-keeper indifferently.

"Now, young feller, you want to hunt for room to stand in while I bust through this door. Don't fool with me, or your friends will think you've been doing business with a steam grinding stone. I pay taxes on three acres and eight pigs up in Bucks county, and I'm going through this 'ere Congress like a contribution box through a congregation. You just crawl out of sight, if you don't want your spine to change places with the next town site!"

"Where's the Congress from Bucks county? Show me the Bucks county Congress, and if he don't get a bill through this town to send that hair-lipped old sky-rocket, who wants to foreclose a mortgage on my place, to the penitentiary, he'll wish he'd been borne a tree cut down and burned up when he was young. Point out the Congress from Bucks county before I have you inside out, to see how you're put together. Tell me I can't go in among a lot of clerks, passes and pages! If there's a square foot of Congress left by the time I reach it, it'll wish it was covered with hair that comes out without hurting."

They induced her to leave by telling that the "Congress from Bucks county" held its sessions in the patent office, and she departed, threatening to get the bill disposing of her mortgage through before she left town, or make the Bucks county member think a powder barrel had busted under him just as a shot tower fell on top of him."

THE OLD GENTLEMAN'S SON MISTAKEN.

When you get two or three old fellows of sixty or so, together they are fond of telling stories about the pranks they played in their youthful days and laughing proudly over their misdeeds. But this isn't always a safe thing to do. Old Judge Jones indulged in this kind of recreation the other night in the presence of his son, aged fourteen. The old man told of quantities of tricks he had played upon his father, and chuckled gleefully over them. It aroused the young Boss' ambition, and the next night when the judge went home he had an awful time of it. There was a pail of water suspended over the front door that tipped as he entered and deluged him. He was both surprised and annoyed at that, and walked into the entry with oaths upon his lips, and immediately his feet caught a cord across the hall from the balusters to the hat-rack, and it tripped him up and pulled the hat-rack over on top of him. He was skinned in several places, and by the time he disengaged himself he was awfully mad. He started up stairs, and part of the way up a cord stretched across at the right height caught him suddenly under the chin and threw him backward down the stairs. Then he started to crawl up stairs, and part way up discovered a rope lying on the stairs and coming from the top. He pulled it and hauled a barrel down upon himself that bounced him down stairs again. He was nearly delirious with rage as he rose to his feet that time, and utterly unable to understand the cause of all these contrivances being in his way. Once more he essayed to go up, and that time succeeded. On reaching the head of the stairs, he thought he heard a snicker and investigation showed his son peeping from his chamber and laughing. On being taxed by the Judge with fixing the traps, the boy owned up. "What in the name of heaven have I done that made you do it?" yelled the Judge, aghast at the boy's wickedness and coolness. "Why, I heard you say you played these pranks on your father." "Yes, and he licked me like blazes for it, just as I'll lick you," roared the infuriated judge. "You didn't say anything about being licked when you told the stories," cried the now frightened boy. This was a strong argument, but the judge wasn't in a frame of mind to appreciate it. The boy's yells were heard in the next ward, and he had resolved, as soon as his raw spots got well, to run away to some place where they'll tell him the whole facts of the case. And the Judge thinks he has learned to be careful what he says before that boy.

WELL PREPARED FOR A PLAGUE.

Bright an early yesterday morning a middle-aged man of anxious look and much corporosity called at the City Hall and went for the chief of police with:—

"Haf ve some shmall pox in Detroit?"

"I believe we have a sporadic case or two," was the reply.

"Un dose somepody haf to get waccinated to keep him avay?"

"Every citizen should protect himself."

"How many dimes was I get waccinated to keep dot shmallpox out of mein house und saloon?"

"Oh, I guess once will do."

"Vonce? Great shiminly! no more as dot! Shust wait a minute!"

He jerked off his coat and pushed up his shirt sleeves and pointed to four spots on his left arm and five on his right, and said:—

"Four and five makes nine times dot I was waccinated in four days."

"How's that?"

"How ish dot? Dat's vhat I lides myself to know! "It vhas shust two hours more as a man comes in und says he vas sent to waccinate me on de odder arm, und I pays him two shillings und a class of beer."

"Before night a man mit spectacles comes in und says he was sent by the healthy Board too, see oof I was waccinated. I show him two blaces, but he shaken his headt und says 'Dot waccination am no high oop, und von vhill git der schmallpox in der hands.' "Yes."

"Vhell, so de course of four days six more men comes around to waccinate me bo order of der Mayor, der Gufernor, der Bresident, der Poard of Bublic Vorks, and I don' know vhat else, und efery time I pays two shillings und class of beer. "Why, you haven't really been vaccinated at all."

"N-o!"

"No, and you'd better be vaccinated again."

"Waccinated again! Waccinated den dimes! Never! Pefor I was waccinated den dimes I catches der shmallpox und goes to bed mit him all summer! Dot's some close pins like I am."—Free Press.

AMBITION.

There is such a thing as laudable ambition, a desire for excellence, and its cultivation will ever produce a harvest of sweet and wholesome fruit.

But there is an opposite kind of ambition, most generally practised, always producing rank and noxious weeds, and which may be appropriately termed depraved.

Laudable ambition strives to better and benefit. It aims to raise humanity into the enjoyment of true happiness. It makes its possessor great by generously conferring good upon others, and however rich and powerful such an ambitious man may become, his country and fellow beings are ennobled thereby.

That kind of ambition cannot be too abundant, the misfortune is its comparative scarcity at the present time works both public and private detriment.

The world has been scourged throughout the ages with depraved ambition. Flashing on the blades of military usurpers, it has blighted and blood drenched the fairest lands, and rankling in the breasts of despotic rulers and aspirants, the chains of political servitude have been forged by it and the way to freedom barred.

That species of ambition remains to be a curse, selfish and abhorrent.

Not so the other.

Were the public men of America more thoroughly ambitious for the right, however widely they might differ in mere sentiment, the honor of country and the prosperity of people would never be jeopardized to secure partisan ascendency.

Then the whole Union, from sea to sea, and every interest within its broad limits would be equitably cared for, and national glory be the goal of political effort and its reward.

WARFARE.

There is a lively political contest at Albany, caused by the resignation of Senators Conkling and Platt and their anxiety to be re-elected.

The Conkling stalwarts are assembling in crowds, determined to put things through to suit their chieftian, and the Blaine half-breeds are no less energetic on behalf of their noble leader.

It is a quarrel in which the Democrats have no particular interest, and we hope they will stand respectfully aside and allow the happy Republicans to scratch and fight to the bitter end. All that the Democratic members should do is to nominate two first class candidates for the vacant seats in the Senate and then vote steadily for them.

The re-election of Conkling and Platt by the present Legislature will not reflect public sentiment, and whether elected or defeated, hostility within their party cannot be appeased.

If the election could be postponed until next January, the State of New York would likely be represented at Washington, as it ought to be, by two dignified and patriotic Democratic Senators.

The annual re-union of the survivors of Andersonville will be held in New York city on the 30th of May. The object of this re-union is two-fold: First, to renew old friendships and associations, and second, to take measures to secure their rights under the pension laws, from the benefit of which they are now excluded, because of the impossibility consequent of their imprisonment in a rebel prison of furnishing the medical evidence required under the laws. The difficulties raised by the pension laws are practically insurmountable, and operate to shut out a very large majority of the most needy and deserving cases.

The corruptions in the Treasury Department are at last beginning to come under the public scrutiny. They appear to be small comparatively so far, but they bid fair to develop larger and larger rascalities as the investigation proceeds. Carpeting to the amount of 20,000 yards for the Treasury Department alone, and the purchase of large amounts of supplies of retail dealers, without advertising for bids, are promising samples of what is to come. Considering that the Department was under John Sherman for four years, it is no wonder that it has become a foul nest.

The United States Senate has adjourned after a continued session of over two and one-half months, although called together by the President merely for the purpose of transacting executive business. This has probably been the longest strictly Senate session since the adoption of the Federal Constitution. Mahone, Gorham and Riddleberger are out in the cold, with a chance of being badly frozen.

Col. Thomas Alexander Scott, the great railroad king, died at his residence near Philadelphia, at ten minutes past nine on Saturday evening. The event was not unexpected, as he had been prostrated for some days with a relapse from a series of paralytic attacks, occurring at intervals during the past three years. Col. Thos. A. Scott was born in Loudon, Franklin County, Pa., in 1824.

Henry Watterson is hard on Archibald Forbes, who, he says, has gone to London to have a surgical operation performed. "The papers don't say what it is, but it may be he is going to have the conceit taken out of him." This isn't true. It was all taken out of him in this country.

Secretary Windom is about to withdraw the one and two dollar bills, and their place will be supplied by gold eagles, half eagles, silver dollars and other small change. In other words, our currency for retail trade will be gold and silver, instead of paper.

"I see," says Mr. R. B. Hayes, "I see a great deal in the papers about Star Routes. Who can stop to think about Star Routes when so many of our fellow creatures are being dragged down to their graves by hard cider?"

Considering the character of the people who bum about Conkling and beg permission to lick the dust from his boots, it isn't strange that he has a profound contempt for mankind, at least of the Republican variety.

James A. Hedden, late cashier of the defunct First National Bank of Newark, has been sentenced by Judge Dixon to seven years confinement at hard labor in the state prison at Trenton.

Bob Ingersoll has made $20,000 out of his lecture on "Hell." If there is no such place, Robert has made a good deal of money out of nothing, and if there is, he will wish he hadn't.

The Monmouth Democrat says it is a common remark that New Jersey never votes for the successful candidates for the Presidency. The facts are as follows:

New Jersey voted for the following successful candidates: Washington, both terms, John Adams in '96, Jefferson, Madison and Monroe, both terms, Jackson in '32, Harrison in '40, Taylor, Pierce, Buchanan, Grant in '72, and Tilden.

For the following unsuccessful candidates: John Adams in 1800, DeWitt Clinton in '12, John Quincy Adams in '28, Harrison in '36, Clay in '44, McClellan, Seymour and Hancock.

In 1824 the election went to the House of Representatives and Adams was elected—a majority of the popular vote of New Jersey was given for Jackson. In 1860 New Jersey gave 4 electoral votes for Lincoln and 3 for Douglas. A majority of the popular vote was Democratic.

Twenty-four Presidential elections have been held, in which New Jersey voted 14 times for the successful candidate, 8 times for the defeated candidate, in 1824 for Jackson, who had a plurality of the electoral college and a plurality of the popular vote, and in 1860 the electoral vote was divided.

Score New Jersey as twice for the successful candidate to once for the defeated one.

U. S. Senator Jones has caused to be published a letter from General Grant now in Mexico, in which he comments on the New York nominations and the consequent breach in the party. The letter is dated April 29th. Grant says he was delighted when he heard of the "first batch" (sic.) of nominations. He thought Garfield had determined to recognize the "party and not a faction." When he heard of the nomination of Robertson, then his sensations of delight were turned into feelings of extreme disgust. He regarded it as a deep laid scheme to punish men for being friendly to him. He believed it was not the policy of Garfield himself, but thought he ought to correct the mistake. "When he selects the most offensive men," wrote Grant, alluding to Robertson, "it becomes an insult that ought to be resented to the bitter end." What purpose Senator Jones had in permitting this letter to get into print, is not very apparent. It is not calculated to elevate Grant in the estimation of anyone. It can hardly aid the Stalwart cause. And it makes it very plain to discerning minds that, while Grant is in another country, he is in league with the anti-administrationists here with an eye to a future candidacy at their hands.—True American.

Connecticut has struck a blow at itinerant quack doctors by demanding that henceforth they shall pay the same license as a circus; that is $20 a day for every day they hold forth in a town. The Monmouth Democrat thinks that if New Jersey had a similar law and made to apply to the swarm of irregular physicians that settle down upon our summer resorts during the season, it would be a benefit to the public health as well as to the public funds.

In New York, truancy agents have been appointed, and they take the names of all the children absent from school each day. They visit parents and learn the causes of the absence, and, if the young people have begun telling stories and persist in running away, they are brought before a magistrate and sent to a reform school, or otherwise punished in due and legal form.

Two million copies of the revision of the New Testament have already been sold in England. The Chicago Times on Saturday, the 21st, published 83,715 words of the revised edition, giving twenty-eight chapters of St. Matthew, sixteen of St. Mark, seven of St. Luke and five of St. John. This formed one telegraph dispatch from New York.

Piscataway claims to have found the relics of Capt. Kidd. A sunken vessel of Dutch build has been found at the mouth of Walker's creek, and all manner of wild stories are afloat as to the amount of treasure which it is expected will be found there.

Two big black snakes, six feet and over in length, came down into the Central yard at Phillipsburg, on a Lehigh and Susquehanna coal train. The wily serpent rarely ventures of his own accord to take passage on public railroads.

The new railroad from Whiting to Point Pleasant is now completed, and the grading will be followed by the laying of the steel rails for the opening as anticipated, June 15. The bridge across Barnegat bay is about two-thirds finished.

The Directors and officers of the Somerset Farmers and Manufacturers' Association have decided to hold the Fair this year on Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday, Oct. 4, 5 and 6.

The Albany Argus says the difference between a Half-breed Republican and a Stalwart Republican is the difference between the head and the tail—of a counterfeit coin.

On its death bed, the Corry Daily Press exclaimed: "You might as well try to drive a railroad spike with a tack hammer as to run a nonpareil newspaper in a small pica town."

Gustave Seide, the reporter of the Jersey City Journal, by whose aid the detectives captured the Hoboken murderer, was on Friday presented with $250 by his employers.

The energy with which Conkling insists that Platt shall be sent back if he goes, is suggestive by its superfluous emphasis. Really, Roscoe, when do you propose to drop him?

The Republican leaders went into an alliance with Senator Mahone to "divide the solid South." It seems that they are dividing their own organization pretty well.

Chandler fails to see why Matthews was taken and he was kicked out, when both were tarred by the same stick and neither fit for the office he was named for.

If the Republican craft had taken an infernal machine on board with Garfield, it couldn't have been blown into fragments in a shorter time.

Democratic Senators have shown Attorney-General MacVeagh more consideration than Garfield and Blaine or their Republican supporters.

Glenni W. Scofield was a Credit Mobilierite, and, very naturally, Garfield has appointed him to be a Judge of the Court of Claims.

The row in the Republican party still goes on.

Alexander III., the new Russian Emperor, is in the habit of working in his study at night. He prefers candles on account of the softness of the light they give. Among those placed there were some which, like the bonbons forwarded to Alexander II. a short time before his death, contained an explosive substance. The Prefect of Police got scent of this, and at once repaired to the Palace, where his Majesty was engaged, as usual, in his study. Rushing into the room he blew out all the candles, and then ordered lamps to be brought. The Czar naturally looked amazed, and thought the Prefect had gone mad, but the cause of his strange conduct was soon explained. The candles were conveyed to the laboratory of the Prefecture, where they were examined, and half a dozen of them were found to conceal poisonous and explosive matter.

The Guttenberg Murder.

Martin Kankowsky, the alleged murderer of the woman Mina Muller, in the vicinity of Guttenberg, was brought to Hoboken on Friday of last week to appear at the coroner's inquest. When the investigation was adjourned Kankowsky was taken out under a guard of police officers. The street was densely crowded for two blocks and the prisoner was greeted with cries of "kill him," and "lynch him." He was subsequently taken out of the station by a rear door and sent to the Hudson county jail in a coach. He was committed, however, only as a witness.

Regina Hertfelder, a young German girl who was claimed that she was assaulted by a man in a house in Charles street, identified Kankowsky as her assailant. He visited her twice at her house in Jersey City, she said, and gave her a gold watch with a chain and a finger ring, but she refused to keep them because of her brothers objection. When she went to the Charles street house, May 8, she saw the trunks which were subsequently identified as the property of Mrs. Muller. She last saw Kankowsky at her house Wednesday evening, May 18, the night before his arrest. He talked in a pleasant manner, and for her edification read an account of the murder and the efforts being made to arrest the murderer. While she was relating the particulars of the assault Kankowsky laughed in a nervous manner. The girl identified Mrs. Muller's watch as the one the prisoner gave her. As this young woman was leaving the witness stand Mrs. Kankowsky entered the hall. She screamed at the sight of the prisoner and fainted.

No greater improvement for the convenience of trade, has ever been made in this city than that lately accomplished by D. Boehm & Bro., at No. 7 West Front street. LAST Saturday, a strange setter dog, supposed to be mad, bit a valuable pointer dog belonging to Mr. Halsey Compton, as he ran past that gentleman's residence on Front street, near Evona. AFTER the improvements that have recently been made in the premises, Mr. John M. Schorb, Jr., again occupies his old store remodelled, refitted and otherwise made additionally convenient. He continues to carry a most complete assortment of desirable suitings which he is making up in a most stylish and durable manner.

THE Christian Weekly tells of a church that has relied largely on fairs and festivals for aid. The pastor asked all the people, men, women and children, to carefully consider how much each one was willing to give or spend at such affairs, and to enclose the same in an envelope and put it on the plate the next Sunday. The result was astonishing and largely exceeded the profit of any entertainment, as there was neither expense or trouble. The Weekly commends this plan to other churches.

DURING a heavy storm some months ago, it was feared that a large plate of glass in one of the lower windows of Messrs. Schepflin, Baldwin & Tweedy's building would be blown in by the high wind. In bracing it—as it was thought necessary—either too much pressure was brought to bear or the plate was accidently struck, for the glass was cracked completely across one corner. On Wednesday the New Jersey Plate Glass Co., (D. D. Vermeule, agent) replaced the broken plate with another, fortunately without an accident. It measured 145½ x 85 inches, and weighed about 400 pounds.

WE have received a copy of "Summer Announcements" published by Edsall & Price of this city; one of the prettiest and most unique specimens of artistic advertising that has yet come under our notice. It contains valuable information relative to the dry and fancy goods trade, as well as other useful matter including a church, city government and post office directory, practical recipes, etc. It is in keeping with other projects of this enterprising firm, and will add to their increasing popularity. It is for free distribution and well worthy the attention, especially of those who wish to secure advantages in the line of goods represented therein.

Black Bass Fishing.

Much just complaint is made by New Jersey sportsmen in consequence of the variance of the game and fish laws of New York and Pennsylvania with those of this State. The waters of Greenwood Lake are partially in New York and partially in New Jersey. According to law a man can take black bass in Greenwood Lake on June 1st, if in the New York portion, but not not until July 1st in New Jersey. The same rule obtains in the Delaware River; they can be taken June 1st on the Pennsylvania side, but not on the New Jersey shore until July. It is the opinion of those well informed that the New Jersey law is the best, as bass have been taken by them in June which had not yet spawned.

Music at Social Entertainments.

Appreciating the fact that one of the essential features of select entertainments is fine music judiciously chosen and harmoniously rendered, the managers of the coming Festival at the Park Avenue Baptist church have engaged Prof. Felix I. Eben and his orchestra of talented artists to discourse sweet melodies upon the occasion referred to—the evenings of June 1st and 2d. Not long ago it used to be considered that perfect quiet, was the only condition for the proper rendering of a programme, and to provide music for an entertainment where sociability with its accompanying hub-bub of conversation and confusion was indulged in, was unheard of, except for dancing. Later, it was deemed the proper thing to have music at suppers, receptions and the like, but now, music is introduced upon all occasions and has become almost indispensible at fairs, festivals, excursions and picnics. Good orchestral music is enjoyable under most any circumstances to people of musical taste, and to many the din of a crowded assemblage is an added attraction, the hum of many voices in conversation renders the tones sweeter by contrast, and adds a peculiar charm not unlike the effect produced by the musical accompaniment to a recitation.

The subjects for the essays to be written for the Brown Prize in composition at the High School, have been announced and are as follows:

Criticism—Its use and abuse.

A Few Brave Ones Remaining.

Mr. Edward Willis Jr., of Netherwood, has the honor of being one of the few surviving veterans of the gallant Anderson Zouaves that left New York city twenty years ago, twelve hundred strong, to help crush out the rebellion. A meeting of those still alive was announced for last Saturday, but only brought together a hand full of the noble number that had risked their lives for their country. These were subsequently favored with a bountiful dinner at the Astor House, given by a daughter of their former Colonel who had fallen at the battle of Fair Oaks.

"Out Behind."

Stealing a ride on a C. R. R., freight train, was found to be an expensive pleasure by a member of the tramp fraternity, on Tuesday afternoon. He was seen by a brakeman and ordered off at a point between Netherwood and this city; and in his haste (assisted, he claims, with a shove by the train official) fell on his face and hands with such force as to considerably bruise and disfigure himself. Dr. Stillman attended the case, and the afflicted one left the city on a passenger train for New York, rich in experience as to the drawbacks of hastily alighting from moving cars.

Our Athletes at Elizabeth.

The athletes of this city had been exceedingly confident for the past month, over the prospects of victory that might possibly be achieved, respectively by Messrs. Murray, Foster and Gavett who had entered for competition in the Annual Spring Games of the Elizabeth Athletic Club, held on Saturday last. But the hope that springs eternal was, as is usual, blasted upon the occasion spoken of. Mr. Murray, who had registered his name as a competitor for the Club Championship Medal, was in Boston at the time; Mr. Foster after a hard struggle only gained third place in a mile run in which three competed; and Mr. Gavett, although pluckily contending against insufficient training, a strange bicycle and an unfortunate header, was denied a medal he undoubtedly won, but which through a peculiar system of award of the referee, was given to the third man.

Hide Stealing.

Through the efficient labors of Captain Dodd, the thief who for a long time has been purloining green hides from Lewis' slaughter house, is brought to justice. The deed was traced to the accused, "Duck" Wilson, and he was arrested on Monday last after a short chase by the officer, which was ended upon Wilson's running into the arms of Henry Bundy on Somerset street.

On Tuesday, 24th inst, the accused was taken before Justice McLoughlin at Blatz's Hotel, to answer a written complaint preferred by Mr. Israel Lewis. Craig A. Marsh Esq., appeared for the prosecutor, and John H. Jackson, Esq., for the accused. Messrs. Lewis, Hammond and Laing were offered by the prosecution, and proved that both burglary and larceny had been committed by some one. The circumstantial evidence implicating the accused was merely that he had sold some of the stolen property, viz: (that which was the subject of the larceny) under the false name of Theodore Little, and that on the day following the burglary, he also sold other hides of the general description of those taken from Mr. Lewis, but of which there could be no proof of identity, since the hides were mingled with hundreds of others.

The examination of witnesses, and remarks of counsel occupied the afternoon up to 5:30 o'clock, when the justice held the accused for larceny, and fixed the bail at $500 with two responsible Freeholders. The bail not being forthcoming, Officer Dodd escorted the accused to the Somerville Jail.

The Seventh-Days' Sociable.

Another of those very pleasant and enjoyable evenings of entertainment and sociality, for which the society of the Seventh Day Baptist Church is so noted, occurred on Tuesday evening. That these interesting occasions are generally commended, is proven by the number of friends of other denominations that attend them; and the parlors of the Church were filled on Tuesday evening, with an assortment of sexes and sects that was overwhelming in its applause and appreciation. The programme of entertain*ment which had been arranged, owed its* selection and construction to the earnest efforts and efficient taste of Miss Florence Potter—commanding (the programme) wrapt attention and favorable consideration throughout. It was opened with a recitation given by Miss Jennie Freeman in a manner that proved either an apt scholar or a capable teacher. Miss Nettie Potter followed with a vocal solo that was one of the most pleasing features of the affair. She declined, however, to reply to the enthusiastic encore with another song, but later in the evening took up the customary collection, with—if possible—still greater success. A very pretty recitation taken part in by three little maidens "sweet and fair," received flattering applause, as did also the tableaux, "A tap at the window" and "Century plants." A sort of opera on a small scale (although rich in tragic emotion) was rendered by Mrs. Mosher and Mr. Art. Titsworth with all the eclat of a Gerster and a Campanini; and quotations from favorite authors were read by Elder Lewis, Mrs. Dr. Tomlinson, Mrs. E. Randolph, Miss Nettie Potter and Mr. Art. Titsworth, in a most attractive way.

At the close of the feast of reason, a flow of lemonade and cake was circulated by the committee on refreshments, consisting of Miss Emma Ayres and Miss Jessie Utter, to the intense delight of the many young folks present who had been trying to keep awake the entire evening in anticipation. Social intercourse closed the evening's diversions, and already the next affair of the kind is being longingly looked forward to.

The Crescent Ave. Church Sociable.

The closing sociable of its season, given by the Young Peoples' Association of the Crescent avenue Church, on Friday evening of last week, was not only the best of the series but also far surpassed in its attractions average occasions of like nature. Mr. Wm. W. Howland the chairman of the Entertainment Committee, and his fellow members of that body, were remarkably successful in securing the assistance of artists variously gifted with unusual talents, towards combining a programme of thorough excellence.

The evening's enjoyment was begun by a piano solo—"The Last Smile"—executed by Miss Lillie Newman with a precision and beauty of expression that demanded the sincere applause of the large gathering of our city's best society that filled the parlors of the Church. In the vocal duett that followed—"The Sailor Sighs"—Miss Josie Holcombe and Mr. Wm. W. Howland, afforded their hearers a treat that is seldom experienced even at more pretentious affairs. We have been called upon to speak favorably of the lady's abilities as displayed in this city upon a previous occasion, and can only reiterate our admiration of the clear, pure and very true soprano voice she has been blessed with. Its evenness and sympathetic power are also notable features that give an enviable intensity to the passages. Mr. Howland's basso is full and rich, showing excellent training and a complete knowledge by its possessor, of its capabilities. Not expecting the enthusiastic encore that was accorded, additional music had not been brought, but later in the evening another duett was given with a like success. Miss Holcombe also sang as solos, "The Lotus Flower" and "When the heart is Young"—given in reply to a recall, "Cherry Ripe."

A Mr. Underhill of New York, a young elocutionist about starting upon a professional career as a delineator of sentiment, character and dialect, furnished the amusement and a large portion of the entertainment of the evening. In the "Water Mill" and "Sim's little girl" his reading was most effective, while in "Dundreary's Letter from his Brother Sam," and a representation of the afflictions of a stuttering lover and an unfortunate German was shown his power to portray overdrawn scenes and incidents. The gentleman must, however, before receiving the praise of such critics as he will meet in public, appreciate fully the fact that exaggeration—although productive of mirth among those less discerning—frequently blemishes what would otherwise be an admirable representation.

Miss Angie Perry and Mrs. Holmes were most favorably received in their instrumental solos—the former playing Mill's "Recollections of Home" with much beauty and the latter executing a more classical selection with ease and ability. At the close of the programme which occupied fully two hours, frozen cream was lavishly circulated to the inward refreshing of the assemblage; succeeded by the gradual retirement of all with pleasant recollections of the evening's enjoyment.

Johnson Sentenced.

On Tuesday, at Elizabeth, in the Union County Court of Oyer and Terminer, John Johnson—whose conviction of murder of the second degree, in the killing of Sam'l Williams, was published in last week's CONSTITUTIONALIST ahead of all other newspapers—was sentenced to 20 years imprisonment, the extreme penalty of the law. If any one is dissatisfied with the result of this, the second trial, it is not the prisoner. His counsel, Mr. Lindabury, upon a visit to him since the last verdict, casually remarked that he intended to apply for a reopening of the case, and was greatly amused at Johnson's expostulations and prayers that nothing of the sort should be done. "I am perfectly satisfied," remarked the prisoner; "don't give me any more trials. I've had all I want." He also has confessed to Mr. Lindabury that he has already served over fifteen years, at different periods, in the New York State Prison; so it is natural to suppose that dungeon walls have not the same terror for him as for those inexperienced.

Personalia.

Dr. J. H. Vincent was in Plainfield on business, during Monday last.

Late advices from Mr. Auguste Saltzman to his family in this city, report him as in excellent health.

We are informed of the death of Mr. John E. Walker, a former well-known resident of this city.

Judge Benoit Van Sickle, of the Union County Courts, paid a flying visit to our city on Wednesday last.

The thanks of the Senior is tendered his old friend Thos. Greenfield of Carlisle, Pa., for a mess of delicious trout.

The ever-pleasant and genial countenance of ex-Senator Canfield, beamed upon us in our sanctum on Monday last.

Mr. and Mrs. J. K. Myers have returned to this city, and are again occupy*ing their summer residence on Seventh* street.

Mr. George Vincent has been confined to his residence in North Plainfield during the past week, by a severe attack of mumps.

Mayor Randolph is looking after the interests of his railroad in the West, and President Whiton is the head of the city's management, pro tem.

Ex-Councilman John Cameron, who has the contract for constructing a railroad in Warren county, was home in our city for a few hours on Monday.

Mr. and Mrs. John H. Doane have returned from their wedding trip, and during the present honeymoon are "at home" receiving the congratulations they deserve.

Mr. Clark W. Evans is engaged, almost daily, in training the amateur performers that under his leadership will dispense orchestral music, "sweet and low," to the promenading patrons of the Muhlenberg Bazaar.

Chas. B. Place, of North Plainfield, has been appointed Registrar of the new 4½ per cent. loan of the Pennsylvania Company. Office, No. 21 Courtlandt street, New York, room No. 65.

Mr. David Thoms, a "native" of North Plainfield, but now engaged in the sugar growing business at Havana, arrived among his friends in this city last week for a few weeks' vacation.

Mrs. Joseph W. Yates will shortly give another of those generous lawn parties that have so delighted the hearts of the little ones in the past. It will be in the grounds of her residence on Seventh street, and for the delectation of the children of the Home.

Mr. Henry K. Caroll of North Plainfield and one of the editorial staff of the New York Independent, has been appointed a delegate to the great Ecumenical Council of the Methodist Episcopal church, that will meet in the Old World in a few months.

Mr. Augustus Jacob, chief cook of Samis' "Surf House," Fire Island, L. I., was a guest of Assessor Isaac Brokaw, North Plainfield, during a short visit here on Wednesday last. Several of our Plainfield families make the "Surf House" their place of residence during the summer.

The marriage of Mr. Charles Davis to Miss Lavinia Moulton of this city on the 11th inst., was an occasion upon which our old friend, the former, is to be congratulated. But as thereby the Zephyr H. & L. Co., will possibly lose the services of one of its most valuable members, the new relation is to a certain extent regretted.

New Jersey's Wealth.

Special Agent Robert B. Porter, in charge of the wealth and debt division of the Central Bureau, has completed his report on New Jersey. The assessed valuation of real estate in the State is $446,032,638, and of personal property $126,115,985, making a total valuation of $572,148,623.

Military.

Monday, Governor Ludlow commissioned the following as officers of the State National Guard: Burd W. Spencer, Brigadier General and General Inspector of Rifle Practice; Lewis Perrine, Jr., Colonel and Assistant Quartermaster General, and James S. Kiger, Lieutenant Colonel and Deputy Adjutant General. These appointments were made under the supplement to the National Guard Act passed at the last session of the Legislature.

A Magnificent Trout.

An old gentleman of Denville while fishing at Speedwell Lake on Friday of last week caught a brook trout of unusual size, it weighing no less than four pounds. Mr. E. B. Earles, the superintendent at Mount Tabor, weighed the fish and will vouch for the accuracy of the statement. It seems that the old gentleman is aware that there are big trout in the lake, as a year or two ago he caught one which weighed four and a half pounds, which he sold for the sum of $5. We did not learn what he did with his last capture.—Iron Era, Dover, N. J.

Jersey Genius.

The following persons have just been granted patents for new inventions:

J. F. Anderson, Jersey City, construction of tunnels. C. A. Fautz, Newark, flower holder. J. E. Gorman, Newark, bill file. W. C. Hicks, Summit, inkstand. D. Klump, Morristown, revolving cans in solder. G. Krementz, Newark, earring fastener, two patents. N. M. Langdon, Chester, ore roasting furnace. B. Osborn, Newark, paper box. E. B. Requa, Jersey City, lamp burner, two patents. L. T. Williams, Red Bank, pipe coupling. J. N. Williamson, Branchville, signal lantern. G. Yule, Newark, felting hats and hat sizing machine, two patents.

A Devil Fish.

Almost every kind of a marine monster has been at some time or another caught in the Raritan River by our fishermen and others. Among these have been whales, sea lions, seals, porpoises, swordfish, sturgeon and mysterious wrecks. The latest addition to the list is a devil fish, or octopus, which was caught Friday morning, near the mouth of the river, in a net by one of Mr. Geo. Reed's fishermen. The body of the fish is about eight inches across, having arms, or more properly tentacles, ten feet in length. The creature's protruding goggle eyes, set each side of a bony beak, resembling a hawk's, give it a frightful appearance. The creature was so entangled in the net that it could scarcely move, and the fishermen killed him by striking him on the head.—New Brunswick Times.

The Lord's Prayer.

The following shows the changes made in the Lord's Prayer by the Revision of the New Testament:

NEW.	OLD.
Our Father which art in heaven, hallowed be thy name. Thy kingdom come. Thy will be done AS IN HEAVEN, SO ON EARTH. Give us this day our daily bread, and forgive us our debts, as WE ALSO HAVE FORGIVEN OUR DEBTORS. And lead us not into temptation, but deliver us from THE EVIL ONE. [OMIT THE REST.]	Our Father which art in heaven, hallowed be thy name. Thy kingdom come. Thy will be done in earth as it is in heaven. Give us this day our daily bread. And forgive us our debts, as we forgive our debtors. And lead us not into temptation, but deliver us from evil: For thine is the kingdom, and the power, and the glory, for ever. Amen.

The American Revised New Testament.

The Literary Revolution is prompt with its edition of the Revised Testament. The British monopolists "unchained" their edition on the morning of May 20th, and at 8:30 P. M., the same day, the American edition was all in type, and of the various editions of the entire Testament and the Gospels published separately as many as 50,000 copies a day will be manufactured till the demand is met. The prices for the very handsome editions, in type nearly double the size of the British edition, are as follows:

The New Testament complete for 10 cts.
The Gospels complete for 7 cents.
The Gospels separately, each for 2 cts.
And in various forms and styles, up to full Turkey Morocco, gilt edges, for the new and old versions on pages facing for $1.50.

This edition is for sale by the leading booksellers of the United States, or they will be sent by mail on receipt of price. Liberal terms are allowed to clubs. Address, American Book Exchange, 764 Broadway, New York.

Newspaper Enterprise.

Some idea of the enterprise of American journalism was shown in the remarkable feat of telegraphy performed on Friday night. The first installment of the revised New Testament, containing 83,715 words, was telegraphed to the Chicago press on twenty-one wires, taking seven hours in transmission. On Saturday afternoon 23,000 more words were sent on seventeen wires, and when these were received the New Testaments had reached Chicago by mail, and the remaining 50,000 words were put in type, and the complete work appeared in Monday's papers. It is not related how many Chicagoans sat up that night reading the New Testament, but it is safe to assume that not many of them lost much sleep. The journalistic energy and enterprise displayed by the Chicago press is, however, worthy of comment.

NORTH PLAINFIELD PARAGRAPHS.

Mr. Chas. Greader, the enterprising bottler, is out with a new wagon manufactured by Homan and painted by Dunning.

THE closing exercises of the Warren Mission Industrial School, will take place on Saturday, May 28th, at half past three. The entertainment will consist of dialogues, recitations and singing; also refreshments for the children. A good time is expected and a general invitation extended to all interested in the School.

The out-buildings, fences and trees on the premises surrounding the Somerset House, have come in for their share of the general cleaning of the season. New paint etc., makes them present an attractive appearance.

SPORTSMEN'S CORNER.

Fish Commissioner Anderson says that black bass, when opened, have been found to contain young shad in various stages of decomposition, but they will not from preference feed upon these youngsters. This was shown to be the fact by the commissioner, who has experimentally fished for black bass with a young sunfish bait, with shiner, dace, etc., and although the river was alive with skipping and hustling minnow shad, the black bass would dart through a shoal of the latter in order to reach the shiner, sunfish or dace, which he evidently preferred.

The committee chosen by the Long Island Sportsmen's Association to secure birds for the State tournament, which is to be held at Coney Island on June 20, has contracted with a Mr. Thomas for 20,000 pigeons. As that number cannot be obtained here, Mr. Thomas has been obliged to go to the Indian Territory with Government permits to trap wild pigeons there. About 12,000 birds are on their way East. They will be detained in St. Louis for several days for rest.

Helene and Peralto, two of New Jersey's fastest trotters, are matched for $1,000 a side, over Waverly Park track, on Decoration Day.

Shad will take the fly. They are doing so at Holyoke, Mass., just below the bridge across the Connecticut River. The fly is not cast, but is allowed to drift down the swift current for two hundred feet or more. So says an exchange. The writer of this has had the pleasure of taking a 4½ pound shad on an artificial fly, as above suggested, in the Raritan River, this State, in the month of May of last year; also one weighing 2½ lbs. in the same river, on Wednesday of this week, May 25th. The shad is a strong fighter, and gives the angler plenty of sport and excitement. We also saw last year a shad taken on a hook baited with a live minnow. Numbers of them have been taken with angleworm in this same stream, since netting has been prohibited in certain parts of the river.

The "New Jersey Game & Fish Protective Society," have issued cards, the size of a postal, bearing upon one side the names of the officers of the association, and upon the other a compilation of the "open season" for game Birds, Animals and Fish" of the State of New Jersey. They are in great demand. A few more left and to be obtained by applying to the Secretary, W. L. Force, Plainfield, N. J.

Some of the shad caught in the Raritan this Spring weigh over five pounds apiece.

SCOTCH PLAINS SCRATCHINGS.

Quoit pitching is one of the amusements that now attract lovers of this healthful game to Brittin's Hotel, adjoining which many a hard contested game has been fought for the championship. "Brit" holds the penant still, and is willing any one shall try and take it from him, "by gollicks."

Queen Anne, the spouse of "Boss" the Mohawk Chief, has arrived in town after her annual sojourn in winter quarters in the great city. She strode with majestic step and lofty mien over the long meadow bridge, her calico being cut in the latest style. She brings the most recent fashions and exceeding joy to the Chief, whose lip has hung down with loads of woe ever since her departure. The "Boss" still retains his good health, although at the advanced age of 165, and had it not been for an accident that occured to him while trimming trees, (he having sawed the limb off that he was sitting on) he would be as sprightly as the Queen, who is only 85 years old. It is very amusing to hear the Boss tell how he used to break colts and till the ground 130 years ago.

WESTFIELD WISPS.

A fire at Cranford last Saturday morning, caused the total destruction of the dwelling house and contents, owned and occupied by Mrs. Ann McNamara. The occupants had a very narrow escape, saving their night clothes only. The house and furniture were insured as follows: Merchants of Newark (on furniture) $500. Liverpool London and Globe (on building) 1,000. This insurance was effected through John M. C. Marsh the local agent, and was adjusted and settled the Monday following. Mr. Wm. H. Miller of Elizabeth is the manager of the Merchants.

The trial of Moses Walker (colored) a former resident of Westfield, accused of robbing ladies of pocket-books in Elizabeth, Roselle and Cranford and now under an indictment for stealing carriage robes from Mr. John T. Lawrence of this place, took place at Elizabeth yesterday.

Mr. Wm. R. Boyden has hired the "Welch" house on Westfield avenue for the ensuing year, and proposes to occupy it about June 1st. "Welcome home."

We notice with great pleasure that the advocacy of the appointment of our fellow townsman, ex-Surrogate Addison S Clark, to the position of Judge of the Court of Common Pleas, to fill the vacancy occasioned by the death of the late Hugh Bowne, has extended far beyond the limits of our own township. Mr. Clark would undoubtedly make both a capable and efficient public servant.

Mr. A. Judson Miller of the firm of E. Miller & Sons, had a narrow escape from a serious accident, on the morning of the 19th. While driving down Broad street in his business wagon, and while going over the crossing in front of Wittke's, his foot slipped from the rest and he fell upon his horse's heels. Naturally surprised by this unusual treatment, the horse started upon a run, and not until several hair breadth escapes from colliding with passing vehicles were anxiously calculated by the surprised spectators, did Mr. Miller succeed in regaining his seat and control of the horse. Mr. Miller deserves credit for his admirable coolness and pluck under trying circumstances.

Mr. Barney Roake whose establishment as a vender of vegetables, fruit &c., and his subsequent withdrawal from business we have previously reported, started out anew last week, and when apparently on the high road to success, having disposed of several loads, met with a serious loss in the death of his justly "celebrated horse," who apparently had become tired of Westfield and concluded that to die in Newark was preferable to a return here. This sad event occurred on Monday last. "Barney" has since decided to locate in New York, and carries with him the well wishes of his many friends here, for his success.

We notice that ex-Freeholder James L. Miller of this township, made a very pleasing and apt reply to the toast of "ex-officers," at the dinner given to his many friends, by County Collector Sheridan on the 19th inst.

Mr. Asa G. Trask has taken the "Condit" house on Dudley avenue for the ensuing year.

The many friends of both Messrs. Oliver Charlton and Thomas Cavalier, extend to them their earnest sympathy in the loss of their children. Funerals were held on Monday last, and were largely attended in both instances.

Our sympathies are extended to Mr. Thomas Eustace in the serious loss he has sustained in the death of his celebrated trotting horse, "Unknown." In this connection we note the peculiar sensitiveness of the olfactory nerves of residents in the vicinity of the animal, who complained of the odor eight hours previous to its death.

We regret to notice that in "Old Hickory's" extended notice of the Fire Department services, that he omits to give the credit due to citizens, not members of the Company, for services rendered at recent fires. We presume, however, that the omission was unintentional.

One of the saddest events that we have been obliged to record, is the removal to the Insane Asylum at Morris Plains, of our fellow townsman, Mr. Wm. Niles. His failing is supposed to have been caused by medicine used during recent illness, causing slight softening of the brain. His ultimate recovery is expected.

The village improvement committee of the "Lyceum," are still busy in their good work of extending the street lamp service in our village. Additional lamps have been added during the past week, and it is their intention to cover the entire village if proper encouragement is extended by our citizens. We trust a proper realization of the benefit of this service, will result in many subscriptions being received before our next issue, when we intend, if possible, to publish a list of subscribers. We would suggest to the committee the advisibility of placing lamps both sides of the railroad track, at the Central avenue crossing.

Mr. Edward Edgar, one of the popular assistants at "Moffett's Livery Stable," met with an accident on Tuesday morning last. While at work in the barn hoisting grain to the mows with tackle attached to a beam extending across it, the beam fell striking him upon the head and knocking him senseless, bruising and cutting his head, face and side. The most inconvenient injury was to his tongue, which was severely cut, preventing speech. Our citizens will miss the silver-tongued orator. We extend our sympathies.

We trust that the change of signals that goes into effect on our Railroad on the 1st of June will be thoroughly understood ere that date by the flagmen at our crossings, Broad street and Central avenue, who certainly deserve praise for their past conduct. We trust that the future will in so simple an instance alter their record.

The many friends of Mr. A. E. Wilcox, lately seriously injured at Irving's factory, will learn with pleasure that he is recovering from his injury rapidly.

The Strawberry and Ice Cream Festival given by the Ladies of the Presbyterian church, held in the chapel of the church on Tuesday evening last, was not only an extremely pleasant entertainment, but from the large attendance must have been a success financially.

Darsh our popular baker still continues his unique style of advertising called The runaway horse. The last exhibition occured on Tuesday last; damage, one broken lamp post.

The introduction of "Weiss Bier" in our village is an important item of the week's news.

A raffle for a beautiful frame of "Wax Fruit" will take place at Moffett's Hotel on to-morrow (Saturday) night.

Dr. Banning, of New York, has continued his "Lectures" on health during the past week. The audiences have been both large and select, and the Doctor can congratulate himself upon having awakened considerable interest in the subjects discussed.

We hardly understand the necessity of using the lot adjoining the depot above the brook for the purpose of dumping stone, brushwood, etc. We can hardly note it as an improvement.

We regret to announce of a case of small-pox in the family of Gustavus Koester. Extra precautions have been taken by the Physicians in attendance and our health authorities in the matter, and not the slightest alarm is felt by our residents regarding the matter. No further cases having appeared although the limit of time for their appearance has expired. Mr. Koester has the sympathies of the community in his present trouble, remembering the hard trials and afflictions that he has borne. His many friends could not show their regard for him in a more appropriate manner at the present time, than by starting a subscription for his aid. Few if any would fail to give their mite in so truly a deserving case.

The placing of bells on the saddle of the horses attached to "Manning's" Ice wagon, gives timely notice of its approach, enabling his customers to prepare for the reception of the useful commodity that he delivers.

A LITTLE OF EVERYTHING.

It seems there are objections even to German Corn Remover. Jones said he wouldn't buy it because he wanted to know where his feet were.

NOTWITHSTANDING that this is considered the "off year" for apples, the trees give promise of a fair crop. Cherry and pear trees will undoubtedly furnish a full crop.

RESCUED FROM DEATH.

The following statement of William J. Coughlin, of Somerville, Mass., is so remarkable that we beg to ask for it the attention of our readers. He says: "In the fall of 1876 I was taken with a VIOLENT BLEEDING OF THE LUNGS followed by a severe cough. I soon began to lose my appetite and flesh. I was so weak at one time that I could not leave my bed. In the summer of 1877 I was admitted to the City Hospital. While there the doctors said I had a hole in my left lung as big as a half dollar. I expended over a hundred dollars in doctors and medicines. I was so far gone at one time a report went around that I was dead. I gave up hope, but a friend told me of DR. WM. HALL'S BALSAM FOR THE LUNGS. I laughed at my friends, thinking that my case was incurable, but I got a bottle to satisfy them, when to my surprise and gratification, I commenced to feel better. My hope, once dead, began to revive, and to-day I feel in better spirits than I have the past three years.

"I write this hoping you will publish it, so that every one afflicted with Diseased Lungs will be induced to take DR. WM. HALL'S BALSAM FOR THE LUNGS, and be convinced that CONSUMPTION CAN BE CURED. I have taken two bottles and can positively say that it has done more good than all the other medicines I have taken since my sickness. My cough has almost entirely disappeared and I shall soon be able to go to work." Sold by druggists. 1 3

MESSRS. WM. RUST & SONS, DRUGGISTS, NEW BRUNSWICK, N. J. Since boyhood I have been troubled with Catarrh and Hay Fever, and have been unable to obtain permanent relief until I used Ely Cream Balm, which has cured me. After a few day's use I could sleep all night, which I could not do before. E. L. CRICKENER, New Brunswick, N. J.

AN INVALUABLE ARTICLE.—The readers of the Argus have no doubt seen the advertisement of Ely's Cream Balm in another column. An article like "Cream Balm" has long been desired, and now that it is within the reach of sufferers from Catarrh, Hay Fever, etc., there is every reason to believe they will make the most of it. Dr. W. E. Buckman, W. E. Hamman, Druggist, and other Eastonians have given it a trial and all recommend it in the highest terms.—Easton, Pa., Daily Argus, Oct. 7, 1879. m23w2

Kidney-Wort moves the bowels regularly, cleanses the blood, and radically cures kidney disease, bilious headache, and piles which are caused by disordered liver and kidneys. Thousands have been cured—why should you not try it? Your druggist will tell you that it is one of the most successful medicines ever known. It is sold in both Dry and Liquid form, and its action is positive and sure in either.—Dallas Tex. Herald.

LARGE numbers of potato bugs appeared in Monmouth county during the recent rains, and have caused much destruction.

Wonderful successes like those of Stewart, the Vanderbilts, or the Astors are seldom reached by luck or accident. It is the result of something within, that commands success; and it is only those that prove them as such. While new discoveries are daily brought forward how few remain as monuments of their worth. It is the merit that lasts—ANDERSON'S ELIXIR OF SULPHUR for Coughs, Colds, Consumption, etc., first discovered or originated after long years of study by a patient Massachusetts chemist, has gradually proved itself a success from Maine to Oregon, and to-day no more successful preparation for the cure of Throat and Lung complaints can be found in the world. COMPLICATIONS.

If the thousands that now have their rest and comfort destroyed by complication of liver and kidney complaints would give nature's remedy, Kidney-Wort a trial they would be speedily cured. It acts on both organs at the same time and therefore completely fills the bill for a perfect remedy. If you have a lame back and disordered kidneys use it at once. Don't neglect them.—Mirror and Farmer.

To pronounce a man happy merely because he is rich, is just as absurd as to call a man healthy merely because he has enough to eat.

GOOD WORDS FOR A GOOD THING.

All things are not humbugs, nor are all statements lies. Dr. David Kennedy's "Favorite Remedy" is exactly what it claims to be. Hear a word from Mr. Israel H. Snyder, of Saugerties, N. Y. He says: "My little daughter was covered with Salt Rheum from head to foot. Dr. Kennedy's 'Favorite Remedy' cured her altogether, and the disease has never since appeared. This was two years ago." Such words go to the point. Get "Favorite Remedy" of your druggist or write to the Doctor at Rondout, N. Y. $1.00 a bottle. 30w3

A BOY AGAIN.

Pain and sickness bring on old age with fearful rapidity. They make an incessant drain on the vital forces, and the weary steps and faded cheeks of age often come when the enjoyment of life should be at its highest. Dr. David Kennedy's "Favorite Remedy" turns this load of old age into youth again. Headache pains in the limbs, troubles of the liver, bowels or kidneys vanish before it, and feeble men and women become like rollicking school boys and girls once more. To the Board of Chosen Freeholders of the County of Union:

Your Committee on Lunacy beg leave to report that the total cost for maintaining the indigent and pauper insane for Union County in the Morris Plains Asylum, for the year ending May 15th, 1881, has been $17,207.06, less amounts paid the county by friends of three of the inmates aggregating $[illegible], leaving the net cost paid by the county to be $16,919.49.

The number of inmates now in the asylum chargeable to Union County is 102. Average number for the year is 99. On account of Union county's patients for the year, 7 have died, 4 have been discharged cured, and 4 have been granted leave of absence to visit their friends.

The cost of maintaining was reduced from $3.50 to $3.00 per week, in the Morris Plains Asylum for the quarter ending February 15th, 1881, since which time $3 is only charged, which has effected a saving to the county of nearly $1,300 on the last two quarter bills.

The Committee as required by law have visited the asylum twice within the year, and have been shown each patient chargeable to the county. The status of our patients is as good as can be expected; they were, as a whole, when the committee visited the asylum a few days since, more quiet and contented than the committee had ever seen them.

SLIM NICK AND THE CALF.

Slim Nick was arraigned before an Arkansas justice of the peace on a charge of stealing a calf.

"Are you guilty?" asked the judge.

"Course I isn't. I's ez innocent ez de driben snow."

Several witnesses were examined, and the evidence was so conclusive that the judge exclaimed:

"That will do. The prisoner is as guilty as Judas."

"Judge, I doesn't like dat 'spression. I doesn't mine bein' called guilty, but doan' say dat I'se guilty as Judas Scarrutt, case I'se allers been a church-member. Dat word Judas grinds on my stomick, boss, or jedge, ef yer please. I allers steers clear ob dat word. But now ef yer wants me for to 'splain dis situation, I ken do hit. May I 'splain?"

"Go ahead."

"Some time ago, Mr. Jackson, de man what 'cuses me so wrongfully, borrowed a bridle from me. Tuther day I axed for hit, an' when I cum 'long home dat ebenin' I seed a bridle hangin' on de fence. Dar wuz a piece ob paw paw bark tied onto de head stall, an' de calf had swallowed hit. Calves is monstrous fon' ob paw paw bark."

"Why was the calf found cut up?" asked the judge.

"Dat's what I'se gwine ter tell yer. De thing suffered so dat ter git hit outen hits misery I killed hit, 'tendin' next mornin' ter carry de quarters an' hide ter de owner. I didn't wanter be 'rested fur cruelty to animals. Is all de facks plain, jedge?"

"Who was Washington?"

"The father of his country."

"Why was he called the father of his country, papa?"

"Because he fought for its independence, and was a great and good man."

"Is he alive now papa?"

"No."

"When did he die?"

"December 14, 1799."

"Who is the father of this country now, papa?"

"No one. It is fatherless."

The little girl was silent for a few moments, and then inquired:

"Was he the little boy that couldn't tell a lie, papa?"

"The same."

"Well, this country will never have another, will it, papa?"

And the conversation was concluded with the emphatic remark:

"Not even a stepfather."

JOHN B. GOUGH'S NEW BOOK.

"SUNLIGHT AND SHADOW."

Ever since it became known that John B. Gough was engaged in writing a new book, its appearance has been watched for with intense interest. It has recently been published, and the enormous sales afford a striking instance of the success that is sure to be awarded to a really good work. Although only just published, the twenty-sixth thousand is already printed; and this fact alone is worthy of notice, for a book which sells like this must be one of extraordinary interest.

John B. Gough, the author of "SUNLIGHT AND SHADOW," is too well known to require any eulogy here. Thousands are familiar with the history of his life; his early poverty, the depth of the degradation to which he descended while a victim of drink, his wretched condition and terrible sufferings, his superhuman struggles against intemperance, his reform, his relapse, his resigning of the pledge and final victory, his world-wide fame, and his extensive travels and protracted labors in this country and abroad. Thirty-five years ago Mr. Gough first published his Autobiography. He had then just recovered from a life of unparalleled dissipation, and was just entering upon that career which has since made him so famous. In 1869 a new edition of that work, with additions and emendations, was given to the public. It contained a history of his early life, with some recollections of his career as a public speaker. It did not embody the intensely interesting and exciting record of the many thrilling, pathetic, and amusing scenes from human life, which all the world knew had crowded themselves into his long and varied career. These have now been gathered for the first time, and the new book, "SUNLIGHT AND SHADOW," is the medium—and the only one—through which these thrilling details have ever been presented to the public.

"From grave to gay, from lively to severe,"

"SUNLIGHT AND SHADOW" is indeed a remarkable book by a remarkable man. Mr. Gough's recollections of his own experiences have made him ever ready to lend a helping hand to others, and the very nature of his life-work has brought him into close contact with poverty, crime, destitution and vice, and he has listened to life-histories of the most thrilling nature, and witnessed scenes that testify anew to the truth of the adage, "Fact is stranger than Fiction."

Some of the saddest and most pathetic incidents ever told are narrated in the present work, and the reader's eyes will fill in spite of himself at the power of Mr. Gough's pathos in describing scenes that have come under his personal observation.

But "SUNLIGHT AND SHADOW" is not altogether a record of dark experiences. It has a bright and sunny side. Mr. Gough's stories and descriptions of the humorous side of life, as he has seen and experienced it, portray many amusing scenes. His remarkable facility for seeing the ludicrous side of every thing, and his talent for humorous description, are well known. No one can tell more amusing things and in a more irresistibly humorous way than JOHN B. GOUGH. The comedies from life, absurd blunders, laughable mistakes, comical incidents, embarrassing situations, mostly drawn from his own experience on the platform and among the people, will provoke the mirth of the most serious. His experiences with brazen-faced people; with letter-writers and their remarkable wants; with aspirants for fame and seekers after "moddle" lectures; with beggars without number and bores of all kinds—are given in "SUNLIGHT AND SHADOW" without reserve.

In short, "SUNLIGHT AND SHADOW" is a mine of extraordinary interest. It can be truthfully said of it, that for thrilling interest, touching pathos and irresistible humor, no book has ever equaled it.

In point of paper, printing, binding, and above all, beautiful and costly illustration, we have not seen its equal in many a day. It is superbly illustrated with magnificent full-page engravings, engraved in the highest style from original designs by F. O. C. Darley, Frederick Dielman, and other famous artists. The magnificent steel-plate portrait of Mr. Gough was engraved from a photograph taken expressly for this purpose, and will be highly prized by tens of thousands who have listened to his eloquence.

We advise our readers to buy "SUNLIGHT AND SHADOW" at the first opportunity. They can, in our opinion, much better afford to dispense with a dozen other books than not possess this.

Strange Circumstance.

Under the above head the New Brunswick Times of Saturday contained the following:

"Just five weeks ago the wife of Mr. Herman Nathan, a wholesale cigar and tobacco dealer of this city, presented him with two little girl babies. There was nothing so very startling or strange about this circumstance, and after the first feeling of astonishment at the unexpected increase in his family had worn away, Mr. Nathan appeared to become reconciled to the situation, and under the inspiration of numerous congratulations began even to look upon the event as one redounding greatly to his credit. The babies throve apace, and now weigh respectively two and five pounds each, the first-born tipping the scales at the former weight. But as if seemingly conscious of its inferiority in respect to size and heft, and as if determined to do something to equalize matters, the first little atom about two weeks since cut its first tooth, which appeared in its upper jaw. This tooth appearing when the child was only three weeks of age was strange enough, but the sequel is still more astonishing. This tooth commenced growing rapidly, and in the course of a few days protruded from its mouth downward until it had reached an inch in length. Its growth each day could be plainly noticed. The child became unable to take its nourishment, and finally, a week ago, Dr. Hull, the dentist, was sent for, who extracted the strange tooth. In the cavity thus left another tooth, or rather the shell of a tooth, commenced growing, which afterward fell out.

A day or two since, on the side of the upper jaw opposite to where the first tooth appeared has come another, which is growing with the same rapidity as the first.

The news of the above phenomena spread among the friends of Mr. Nathan, and on Sunday last he was forced to lock the doors of his residence to keep out the throngs of people who flocked thither to view the wonderful baby who, although weighing only two pounds, and only three weeks old, is so rapidly developing such enormous teeth. Mr. Nathan, at the present time, is in a state of mind whether he ought to feel proud or dejected."

A New Branch of the C. R. R.

A new railroad, to be known as the Manufacturers' Railroad, will shortly be added as a branch of the Central Railroad, and will run from Brill's farm, on the Meadows near Newark, to the zinc works. It is intended as a freight road for the factories in the neighborhood. Application has been made to Judge Depue to appoint commissioners to condemn lands along the line of the road, and the application will be heard to-day.

The following pleasant letter was recently received by Dr. David Kennedy, of Rondout, N. Y., and signed "Old Schenectady":

"I procured a bottle of 'Kennedy's Favorite Remedy' and my wife used it with the best results. She has no more headache or pain in the side. Indeed, this medicine seemed to have an almost magical effect, and she feels very grateful to you for your kind advice, and especially for the 'Favorite Remedy.' We shall be glad to recommend it to all women who may be suffering from any of the ills peculiar to the sex. It is all you claim for it."

It may be in place to mention, as pertinent to the above letter, that Dr. Kennedy, the proprietor of "Favorite Remedy," located in the City of Schenectady soon after his graduation, and went from there to the war. THE NEW BUSINESS
OF THE
EQUITABLE
Life Assurance Society of the U. S.
FOR THE YEAR 1880, WAS OVER
Thirty-Five Millions of Dollars,
The Largest Business Done by any Company in the World.

REASONS FOR THIS RESULT.

The Equitable is the strongest Company in the United States.

Its policies are, by their own express terms, made incontestable after three years. [For precise terms see form of policy contract.]

ALL such incontestable policies are paid immediately after receipt of satisfactory proof of the death of the insured, and without even the customary delay of sixty or ninety days.

EACH ordinary policy provides for a definite surrender value in paid up assurance, in case the policy is forfeited after three years from its date and is surrendered within a reasonable time thereafter.

BY THE TONTINE SAVINGS FUND Plan of assurance, returns to policyholders, after the expiration of what is called the Tontine period, are greater than are obtainable on any other system. Actual settlements of Tontine policies have been made in which policy-holders have withdrawn amounts varying from eighty to one hundred and twenty per cent. of premiums paid, besides enjoying a life insurance indemnity during the period. No other company can show such results.

THE TONTINE plan is the only one extant by which a person may withdraw from his insurance contract at specified periods, receiving the entire reserve and surplus accumulations in cash.

ALL the ordinary forms of insurance with annual dividends of profits, both cash and reversionary, are issued by this Society.

ASSETS,	$41,108,602.
SURPLUS,	$9,228,294.

Its business for the last ten years (represented by the new policies issued) has been larger than that of any other Company.

THE PREMIUM COLT,

SPARTAN, JR.

Is a bright bay, 16 hands, foaled May 1st, 1877, of superb style and action, with the appearance and finish of the highest type of the gentleman's roadster. Spartan, Jr. took first Special Prize at N. J. State Agricultural Society in 1879; he also took first premium at Somerset Co. Fair in 1878 and '79. Gentlemen wishing to raise stock either for speed, road or coach, will find the three combined in this promising young horse. We claim he has the best crosses of blood for speed, road and coach of any horse in the State. Spartan, Jr. was sired by Spartan, he by Ethan Allen whose record is 2:15, and I think has never been beaten in double harness. His first dam by Nelson, noted for coach and road; 2d dam by Fiddler who has a record of 20 miles in 60 minutes, 21 seconds, he by Monmouth Eclipse; 3d dam by Bejorah, also noted as a road and coach horse. For further pedigree see bills.

Will serve a limited number of mares at Stock Farm of R. & L. V. D. SHEPHERD,

PRIVATE THOUGHTS.

Carelessly, aimlessly drifting through life,
What was I born for? "For somebody's wife,"
I am told by my mother; well that being true
"Somebody" keeps himself strangely from view;
And if naught but marriage will settle my fate,
I believe I shall die in an unsettled state.
For though I'm not ugly—pray what woman is?—
You might easily find a more beautiful phiz,
And then, as for temper and manners, 'tis plain,
He who seeks for perfection will seek here in vain.
Nay, in spite of these drawbacks my heart is perverse,
And I should not feel grateful, "for better or worse,"
To take the first booby that graciously came
And offered those treasures, his home and his name,
I think then my chances for marriage are small.
But why should I think of such chances at all?
My brothers, are all of them, younger than I
Yet they strive in the world and why not let me try?
I know that in business I'm not an adept,
Because from such matters most strictly I'm kept.
But this is the question that puzzles my mind
Why am I not brought up to work of some kind?
Carelessly, aimlessly drifting through life,
Why should I wait to be "somebody's wife?"

MISCELLANEOUS READING.

DOLLIE'S PARACHUTE.

"P-a-r par—a-c-h-u-t-e Uncle Harry, what's that? a parachute?"

"A big word for a little girl's tongue, Dollie. Come, let me see if it has twisted it crooked?"

My six-year-old niece gravely put forth the desired organ, and I as gravely pronounced it sound and straight.

"But I want to know, Uncle Harry," she persisted.

So I took the young lady on my lap and explained, as well as I could, the mysteries of the parachute; and the beautiful brown eyes grew bright with wonder at the new ideas thus presented to her inquiring mind.

My story finished, Miss Dollie sat awhile on my knee in deep thought; and then she got down, and trotted off with a preoccupied, business-like air.

I loved a good cigar in those days—I do now for the matter of that—and sitting smoking on the portico, with the sweet summer breezes dancing around me, and the woodland songsters filling the air with music, I forgot Dollie—though I had promised to keep an eye on her—until suddenly startled by a series of screams and outcries proceeding from the garden, a sure indication that the mischievous little monkey had got into some sort of trouble, as usually happened on an average twice a day, at least.

I threw away my beloved cigar, and rushed out to the scene of the turmoil, my sister closely following, but neither of us, I must confess, were prepared for the sight that met our view.

There was a tall grape-arbor in the garden, composed of several upright posts connected by long slats, nailed longitudinally, and projecting a foot or more beyong the uprights at either end. There were fifteen of these slats a foot apart, and on one end of one of the uppermost ones hung Miss Dollie.

She was suspended somewhat in the manner of a penknife with the blade partly open and the point turned downward, and as she swung to and fro, filling the air with lamentations, her poor little nose received many a blow from the frantic plunges of her knees and feet.

"Keep still, Dollie!" I cried out, with my voice full of laughter.

And then I clambered rapidly up the arbor, and plucked the terrified child from her elevated, impromptu swing, landing her safely on the ground.

"Dollie," said her mother, severely, "haven't I forbidden—"

"It's all Uncle Harry's fault, so it is," sobbed Dollie, in doleful accents. "He said a person could jump off a high place, and come down easy, if they had a parachute, so I thought I would try, and I got his—"

"Mine!" I cried out; "I have none, you little goose!"

"You has, Uncle Harry; you take it out to keep the sun off when you go to draw pictures and to paint."

"Oh," said I. "I see; you mean my artist's umbrella, little lady! That is not a parachute at all."

"It's not an umbrella," cried Dollie, indignantly. "It's big, and strong, and heavy, and you put it in a pipe and stick it in the ground. I got it; and first I got on the fence and jumped down, and I bumped so hard it most took the breff out of me. Then I 'membered Uncle Harry said the air must get under it; and so I climbed up to the arbor and jumped, and—and I didn't go at all. Just look at my hoopskirt, mamma—it's all Uncle Harry's fault—just look."

Mamma did look, so did the much-abused uncle, and both fell into fresh convulsions of laughter.

It was the fashion in those days for the little feminines, as well as the big ones, to wear stiff, rattan hoop-skirts. Dollie had been very proud of hers—the first of its kind to her—and now, alas, having served as a hook to suspend its owner in mid-air, it presented a woe-begone appearance—rattans twisted and broken, and trailing behind in a decided peak.

Altogether, it was too much for my gravity, and I lay down on the grass to laugh at my ease, while my sister carried off the much-offended Dollie to restore some of her dilapidated clothing.

It was some time before I recovered sufficiently to go to the rescue of my impromptu parachute, which, meanwhile, was reposing quietly in a blackberry bush.

The next day was like many of its predecessors—warm and beautiful—almost too beautiful, in fact, for we were getting tired of the hot sun and cloudless sky, and felt that we could heartily join in the cry of the drooping plants for clouds and rain.

We had had three weeks of oppressively hot, dry weather, but to-day was considerable cooler; there was a brisk breeze and a few floating, fleecy clouds, gave us some hope that a change of weather was at last approaching.

"Lou," said I, to my sister, as we stood on the porch together after breakfast, "it really looks as if it might rain some time and perhaps I had better not postpone my sketch any longer. I'll go now; and while I saddle Fleet, and get my portfolio and Dollie's parachute ready, do you put me up some lunch, like the dear, good sister, you are. I shall not be back before evening."

And thus it happened that an hour later found me riding over the broad prairie that lay on one side of the beautiful lake near which my sister dwelt.

The lake, as I have said, was a beautiful thing to look upon; its shores were bold and abrupt, in some places rocky and more like a precipice than the banks of a peaceful sheet of water; on the side opposite the town, from which I desired to make my sketch, a rank, dense growth of virgin forest extended to the very verge of the lake forming a very sharp contrast to the scantily-wooded, flat prairie, that stretched far away behind it, and, in fact, on every side leaving the lake and the narrow belt of forest encircling it like an oasis in the desert.

It was a long ride around to the point I had in view, but finally I arrived there, and, with a gentle sigh of satisfaction, I tied Fleet to a tree, and settled myself to the pleasant task of transferring to paper as best I might some faint likeness of the beautiful scenery.

I was an artist not only by nature but by profession, and I had come from my faraway home not only to visit my sister and her husband, but to carry back with me materials for an ambitious landscape painting that was to appear on the walls of the Academy of Fine Arts.

In a fit of laziness, induced by the oppressive heat, I had put off my work until now, and found myself nearing the end of my visit without having taken one step toward the chief object of my journey.

Now, therefore, finding myself at last on the spot I had selected for my grand sketch I fell to work in all eagerness, absorbed utterly as was my wont, so that I soon became oblivious of everything, save my task.

I forgot poor, patient Fleet, waiting for his dinner; I forgot my own lunch; I forgot that the hours were creeping on—until at last I returned to earth sufficiently to rail at the heavy fog, which had latterly been settling down over the lake, obscuring my view.

Next, I became alive to the fact that Fleet, my favorite horse and my pet, was snorting loudly and pawing the ground in a way that plainly indicated something amiss with him.

"Well, it is time to start for home," thought I, as I rose and stretched my cramped limbs. "The fog is shutting out the view. Whew! some one is burning brushwood hereabouts; my nose sniffs it, my eyes weep at it."

I turned my face away from the lake, and, good heaven! fog, brushwood—neither of those harmless things was it that had gradually darkened the atmosphere, and was causing my eyes and nose to sting and smart. No wonder that poor Fleet snorted and pawed the ground, wild with impatience and fear.

The forest was on fire—on fire in the most alarming sense of the word.

It was not a slow, languishing fire, creeping along the ground at a moderate rate, but a fierce roaring army of fiery demons, leaping and dancing; and rushing onward with almost lightning speed.

I shall never forget the feeling of utter horror and despair that overwhelmed me, as the imminent danger of my position was thus suddenly revealed to me. I actually believe the hairs on my head rose up and stood on end; certainly they felt as if they did, in the first shock of surprise.

But that was over in a moment, and collecting my scattered senses I took in the whole situation at one rapid glance.

In front of me, a bold, precipitous bank, totally impassible on account of the dense undergrowth, even if it had not been so steep; the glistening waters of the lake far below; to the right, to the left, behind me one unbroken semi-circle of flame—fierce, crackling, roaring—leaping over the dry, parched underbrush, with speed that even my fleet-footed Arabian could not hope to equal. And if he could, what would it matter, since the fierce flames imprisoned me on three sides, and a precipice on the fourth?

With a sinking heart, I strained my eyes to discover some loophole of escape, some break in the advancing wall of fire; and an ejaculation of thanksgiving burst from my parched lips, as, far away on the left, I saw a little, dark spot in the line of flame, and remembered that just there a beautiful spring bubbled up in the middle of the forest, making a pool small and shallow, yet all-sufficient to preserve my life, could I reach it before the army of fiery demons should flank it, and stretch an impassable barrier between me and this, my only hope of safety.

In one second I was on my horse's neck, and fleeing at a break-neck pace toward that blessed spot of refuge—an oasis, verily in that desert of fire. It was fully half a mile distant, and though my fleet-footed animal, seemingly imbued with a full knowledge of all that depended on his speed, flew over the ground as even he had never done before, I soon saw that the race was a desperate one, well-nigh hopeless.

The hungry outcry and roar of the flames, as they leaped, and danced, and waltzed among the dry bush and trees—yet ever dashed forward on their irresistable course—maddened my poor horse with fear and drowned my voice as I strove to soothe him.

On and on he rushed, his eyes almost starting from their sockets, the foam flying from his mouth, and flecking his sides with great white patches; seldom horse spurned the earth as did my poor, frightened Fleet, during that awful race with the demons of fire!

But it was all in vain!

Before we could reach that one little rift in the great, red wall, it was closed up; and then the unbroken line of fire seemed to dash onward with even greater speed than before.

There was only one thing left for me to do—to gain a few moments' respite, in which to make my peace, as best I might with my God; and I thanked Him then that He had always been my guide and support, so that I had not an overpowerful horror of death that otherwise must have oppressed me.

There was one little spot as yet untouched by the flames, though they were momentarily closing in upon it; and thither I fled, riding to its uttermost limits ere I dismounted.

Then I looked about once more, in a last dying effort of hope; it was so hard to resign myself to meet so horrible a death. Behind me, to the right to the left, that terrible wall of fire; in front, the lake, calm, beautiful, clear as a mirror, glittering in the sunlight, two hundred feet below me; and then, looking downward, close at my feet, I saw that I stood on a projecting point of the cliff, overhanging a tangled mass of underbrush, at least one hundred feet below me.

The fire would be checked on this rocky shelf—I saw that at a glance; but alas! there was plenty of fuel to feed it up to the very outermost edge, and its mad career would be stopped to late to save me; for there was no spot of refuge to which I could flee until its fury should have passed.

Already I felt its scorching breath on my cheeks as I stood waiting, with my hand resting on my poor trembling horse; and suddenly, as he winnied piteously, the thought came to me that he, at least, need not suffer so painful a death as stared his master in the face.

I always carried a pistol, and now I drew it out, and nerving my shaking hand, raised it to his beautiful, quivering ear, but lowered it again as, for the first time, I noticed that my clumsy artist's umbrella still swung from its accustomed place from a ring in the saddle. It had so happened that the spot in which I had been sketching, when hemmed in by my fiery foe, was so cool and shady that the umbrella was not needed; so I did not remove it from the saddle.

When I drew the trigger Fleet would fall, it might be, upon it; he might not live a moment or two, yet even for that short time I did not choose that the strong, heavy steel ribs should have the chance of adding to his pain.

I detached it from the saddle; and even as I did so, the sudden memory of little Dollie's experiment that morning—ah! how far away it seemed!—forced a smile on my dry lips; and then followed a thought, swift and startling as a lightning flash.

A parachute, Dollie called it; and why not use it as such now, in my dire extremity? It was very strong and stout, and I had some twine in my pocket with which to secure the ends of the ribs to handle so that it could not turn wrong side out.

With the resistance it would offer to my descent, I felt sure that it was quite possible to land in the midst of the brushwood—a hundred feet below—with no more serious hurt than bruises and scratches, or perhaps a broken limb; and surely these were light evils in comparison to being burned to death.

With eager fingers, I knotted the twine to the steel ribs, and secured the former to the base of the handle.

The flames were almost upon me by this time; so, with one long-drawn breath, I raised my pistol once more, and, with one quick, nervous jerk, sent a bullet into the brain of my pretty steed.

Then, as he gave one wild shriek, and fell lifeless at my feet, I seized the umbrella—Dollie's parachute—and leaped off the rock.

At the outset I fell so rapidly that I all most lost my breath, but in a second could feel that my descent was checked and then began a swaying, jerking motion that made my head spin.

Doubtless there was not more than one or two moments' interval between my leap from the ledge and my landing, amidst the branches of a small tree, but it seemed as many hours.

When I clambered down to the ground, scarcely believing yet in my wonderful escape, I found myself with sound limbs. My hands and face were scratched and bleeding, my clothes torn to rags; but what cared I?

The fiery fiends were leaping in disappointed anger far above me, and now I could listen to their roar without a tremor save of grief at the loss of my favorite steed.

Keeping along the shore of the lake, I reached my sister's house just as serious alarm was beginning to be felt at my prolonged absence, and a party about to set forth in search of me.

"Dollie," said I, that night, as I took up my dear little niece I had so nearly parted from forever—"Dollie, you were right, after all. Uncle Harry's big umbrella is a parachute, and if you had not told him so he would never have known it, and so he would have been devoured by the hungry flames. We will make a beautiful glass-case, and put the parachute away in it, and label it 'Dollie's Parachute.'"

THE BIBLE.

Who composed the following description of the Bible was never known. It was found in Westminister Abbey, nameless and dateless.

A nation would be truly happy if it were governed by no other laws than those of the blessed book.

It is so complete a system that nothing can be added to it.

It contains everything needful to be known or done.

It gives instruction to a senate, authority and direction to a magistrate.

It contains a witness, requires an impartial verdict of a jury, and furnishes the judge with his sentence.

It sets the husband as a lord of the household and the wife as a mistress of the table; tells him how to rule, and her how to manage.

It prescribes and limits the sway of the sovereign, the rule and authority of the master, commands the subjects to honor and the servants to obey, and promises the blessing and protection of the Almighty to all that work by its rules.

It promises food and raiment; and limits the use of both.

It points out faithful and eternal guardian to the departing husband and father; tells him with whom to leave his fatherless children and whom his widow is to trust, and promises a father to the former and a husband to the latter.

It teaches a man to set his house in order and to know his will; it appoints a dowry for his wife, and entails the right of the first born and also shows how the young branches shall be left.

It defends the right of all; and reveals vengeance to every defaulter, over-reacher and trespasser.

It is the first book, and the oldest book in the world.

It contains the choicest matter, gives the best instruction, affords the greatest pleasure and satisfaction that was ever enjoyed.

It contains the best laws and most profound mysteries that were ever penned; it brings the best comforts to the inquiring and disconsolate.

It exhibits life and immortality from everlasting, and shows the only way of glory.

It is a brief recital of all that is to come.

It settles all matters in debate, resolves all doubt, and eases the mind and conscience of all scruples.

It reveals the only living and true God, and shows the way to Him, and sets aside all other gods, and describes the vanity of them who trust in such. In short, it is a book of law, to show right and wrong; a book of wisdom, that condemns all folly and makes the foolish wise; a book of truth, that detects all lies and confronts all errors, and a book of life that shows the way from everlasting death.

It contains the most ancient antiquities, strange events, wonderful occurrences, heroic deeds, and of unparalleled wars.

It describes the celestial, terrestrial and infernal worlds, and the origin of the angel myriads, human tribes and devilish legions.

MORALITIES.

Return good for evil.

You will never lose by doing a good turn.

Be a father to virtue, and a stepfather to vice.

Want of good sense is the worst of poverty.

It costs more to avenge wrongs than to bear them.

The poetic instinct turns whatever it touches into gold.

Sound policy is never at variance with substantial justice.

Do well, and doubt no man; do ill, and doubt all men.

Giants in the closets are often but pigmies in the world.

Bustle is not industry any more than impudence is courage.

A grand safeguard for doing right is to hate all that is wrong.

The shadowy remembrance lasts longer than the real enjoyment.

There are calumnies against which even innocence loses courage.

By being contemptible we set men's minds to the tune of contempt.

Half the ills we hoard in our hearts are ills because we hoard them.

Hard workers are usually honest. Industry lifts them above temptation.

A sin without its punishment is as impossible as a cause without an effect.

We have little pity for others until we are in a situation to claim it for ourselves.

Modesty is to worth what shadows are in a painting; she gives to it strength and relief.

He that has more knowledge than judgment is made for another man's use rather than his own.

Kindness is stowed away in the heart, like rose leaves in a drawer, to sweeten every object around.

A man may practice sin for years and never know that he possesses a conscience until his sins are out.

"SIT DOWN, ROBERT."

Elder Traverse, who lately died in Buffalo, old and bent and full of years, was once the most noted man in Eastern New York as a camp meeting leader. He had a powerful voice and was a fluent speaker and in the prime of life could get away with any man who sought to disturb his meetings. The Elder was once holding a camp meeting at Yonkers, and word came to him that a notorious rough, known as "Chicago Bob," intended to be on hand Sunday for a row. He made no reply and took no precaution, but when Bob appeared on the ground with a segar in his teeth and a slung-shot in his sleeve, the Elder didn't grow pale worth a cent. Bob had come out there to run things, and he took a forward seat. When the congregation began to sing, he began crowing, and so created confusion.

"Robert, you had better sit down," observed the elder, as he came forward.

"Chicago Bob sits down for no man!" was the reply.

"Sit down, Robert," continued the Elder, as he put his hand on the loafer's arm.

"Here goes to clean out the crowd!" yelled Bob, as he peeled off his coat.

Next instant the Elder hit him under the ear, and as he fell over a bench he was followed up and hit again and again, and while in a semi-conscious state he was carried off by his friends.

Next day he was the first to come forward for prayers. The elder put his hand on his head and said:

"Robert, are you in earnest?"

"I am."

"Are you really seeking for faith?"

"You bet I am! If faith helps a man to get in his work as quick as you did yesterday, I am bound to have it, if I have to sell my hat!"

He didn't get it very strong, but he did no more crowing while the camp meeting lasted.

Two Yankees strolling in the woods, without any arms in their possession, observed a bear climbing a tree, with its paw clasped around the trunk. One of them ran forward and caught the bear's paws, one in each hand. He then called out to his comrade:

"Jonathan run home and bring me something to kill the varmit. Mind you don't stay or I'm in a fix."

Jonathan ran off but stayed a long time. During the interval the bear made several attempts to bite the hands of him who held it. At length Jonathan came back.

"Hallo, what kept you so long?"

"Well, I'll tell you. When I got home breakfast was ready, so I stopped to eat it."

"Well," said his comrade, "come you now, and hold the critter while I kill it."

Jonathan seized the bear's paw and held the animal.

"Well, have you hold of him?"

"I guess I have."

"Very well, then, hold fast; I am off for dinner."

HISTORICAL.

The history of political parties in this country unfolds the important fact that disaster has invariably followed the bartering of principles for expediency. The Whig party struck that death-dealing rock and went to pieces, and the Republican is swiftly drifting along the same fatal track.

As with individuals so with parties. The politician who openly and honestly stands by what he believes to be right, and courteously but unflinchingly defends and acts out his political faith, regardless of triumph or defeat, is far more respected and relied upon, even by those of opposite partisanship, than he who hypocritically strives to win popular favor by carrying water on both shoulders and cares not whether it be pure or putrid, fairly procured or basely stolen.

When a party, for the purpose of gaining or retaining ruling power, adopts the depraved motto—"the end justifies the means," and throwing honor and integrity to the winds, enters into any corrupt and mercenary alliance that promises aid, it is on the sure and downward road to ruin.

Patronage and craft may prolong its existence for a term, but the end will certainly come.

Such a party ought to perish.

Justice and public safety alike demand its overthrow, because venal within, it cannot be otherwise than dangerous without.

The Democratic party has at times suffered through mistaken action, and the personal enmity and unfaithfulness of aspiring leaders, but, as a rule, it never swerved from loyalty to sound principles.

Now, as at first, and down the long vista of intervening years, the party of Democracy has resolutely upheld the rights of all the people, and the principles of free government embodied in the Constitution.

That has been its past preservation, constitutes its present glory, and will prove its conquering sign in the near future.

Hail! Democracy!

JUDGE NATHAN HARPER.

On Tuesday last Governor Ludlow signed the commission of Nathan Harper, Esq., of this city, as Lay Judge of the Union County bar, to fill the unexpired term of the late Judge Hugh H. Bowne. In the selection of our fellow citizen to occupy this important position, the Governor has acted with wisdom, and in accordance with the desire and wishes of, we might truly say, our entire community, and to the satisfaction of the people generally of the County, so great is the esteem in which he is held by our citizens and all who know him.

Nathan Harper was born at Frankford, near Philadelphia, and comes of Quaker parentage. He has been a resident of Plainfield for about 18 years. Although a Democrat in politics, he was elected Mayor of the Republican city of Plainfield in 1878 and served two years in that capacity to the satisfaction of his constituents. He was a member of the Common Council for several terms. He has been engaged in the Fire Insurance business for a number of years, being Secretary of the New York Security Fire Ins. Co. at the time when heavy losses from Boston and Chicago fires caused its suspension.

Judge Harper will qualify and enter upon the discharge of his duties at once. We are confident he will prove an honor to the Bench of Union County.

TERRIBLE RAILROAD DISASTER.

The train leaving New York on the Pennsylvania Rail Road at 3:30 p. m., ran off the track at a point almost four miles east of Trenton on Monday last. The prime cause of the accident was a misplaced switch, but, in consequence of the warning given by a distant danger signal, the engineer had reduced the speed of his train, so that the engine, baggage and parlor car passed over the switch in safety. But in consequence, as is supposed, of the breaking of a switch rod, the three remaining passenger cars left the track, one of them turning over on its side, while the other two were badly broken. Augustus R. Ritter of Philadelphia was killed outright. Mrs. Pennington, of Philadelphia, was fatally injured and died on her arrival in Trenton.

Sixteen other persons were severely injured. The telegraph operator, Sutphen, who had charge of the switch, ran away as soon as the accident occurred.

Ballots were taken in the New York State Senate and Assembly May 31st, for successors in the U. S. Senate to Mr. Conkling and Mr. Platt. Mr. Conkling received 35 while 70 were cast against him; Mr. Platt received only 29 votes and 76 were given to other nominees. Mr. Conkling received only one-third of the Republican votes. Balloting each following days have resulted the same. Those of our readers who care to follow the torturous windings of the probable deadlock over the places vacated by Senators Conkling and Platt will do well to bear in mind a few essential figures. The whole number of votes in the Legislature on joint ballot is 160, of which the majority necessary to a choice is 81. The number of Republicans in the two houses is 106.

The honest handling of public money by the Hayes' officials was a boasting cry of Republican orators during the last Presidential campaign. Like many other fancy pictures, that has been completely blotched by the hand of reality. The unearthing of gigantic frauds in the mail service already makes it black as Erebus, and no doubt there is plenty more ugly paint on the brush.

The State of Missouri has readily effected a loan at three per cent. The Democrats in Congress passed a bill to fund the debt of the United States at the same rate, but Republican influence in the White House defeated the measure, and thereby levied upon the Treasury a large and unnecessary annual contribution. Taxpayers, make a note of that?

Dorsey, Riddleberger, Brady, Gorham and Mahone. What a constellation of brilliant stars to light Garfield's dark and devious administration route? Hold! There is a sixth we almost forgot to mention, called 'Bob Ingersoll, the eloquent advocate of——not Christianity.

Garfield crowned Mahone with flowers, Conkling patted Mahone on the back, but scowled angrily at Blaine over Garfield's shoulders. What a spectacle to contemplate and abhor?

The following order declaring postal cards unmailable with anything but the direction on the address side has been issued by Postmaster General James: "On and after June 1, 1881, no printing or writing will be permitted upon the address side of postal cards, except that imprinted thereon at the manufactory, and such as may be necessary for the proper direction of the same. All postal cards bearing any other writing or printing upon the address side are declared unmailable and must be returned to the sender by the postmaster at the office where they may be mailed. Such cards may be treated as 'spoiled,' and redeemed by any postmaster upon application of the holder, as prescribed in section 171, Postal Laws and Regulations, 1879. Future supplies of postal cards, will be printed on the address side with the words 'nothing but the address can be placed on this side.'"

Frederick Boodie, 4 years old, and his little sister Eva, 2 years old, fell together out of a third-story window of the tenement house at No. 517 Tenth avenue, New York, on Sunday last, and were injured so badly that they died in a few minutes. The two children were playing together in a front room at 9 a. m. Their mother was at work in a rear room adjoining, and their father, had gone out of the house to get shaved. The windows of the room were open and the children leaned over the sill of one of the windows to look into the street. The little girl lost her balance, and as she was falling she clung to her brother, so that he fell with her.

It appears by a bulletin just issued from the Census Office that the assessed valuation of the State of New Jersey for the year 1880 is $562,248,623, of which $436,032,638 is real estate and $126,215,985 is personal property. The total bonded and floating debt of the State is $33,828,247.54 and the entire taxation for general purposes for 1880 was $7,331,411.18.

New Code of Signals.

The following are the more important of the new code of signals which went into effect on Monday last on the Central Railroad and branches:

Red signifies danger, and is a signal to stop.

Green signifies caution, and is a signal to go slow.

White signifies safety, and is a signal to go on.

Signal to go ahead—raise and lower the hand. To stop—arm swung across the track. To back—arm swung in a circle.

WHISTLE SIGNALS.

One—apply brakes.
Two—release brakes.
Three short blasts—back.
Three long blasts—send back flagmen.
Four long blasts—call in flagmen.
Four short blasts—change switches.
Two long and two short blasts—signal for road crossings.

A succession of short blasts is an alarm signal.

Use the whistle as little as possible in the vicinity of towns, especially at night and on Sunday.

SOME residents of Orange Sunday afternoon walked up through Llewellyn Park, to visit Eagle Rock. Miss Ella Dean, aged seventeen, one of the party, and daughter of Howe J. Dean, took a seat on the ledge of the rock, which overhangs a precipitous cliff, the rest of the party being scattered about near by. Desiring to join a friend who had wandered near, Miss Dean sprang up from her seat, when her dress caught in the rock, pulling her over backward. Unable to recover herself, she fell from the ledge and struck on her head about twenty feet below. Miss Dean attempted to clutch the grass to save herself, but turned completely over and fell sixty feet, striking on the ground several times, thus breaking the force of the fall. She was severely cut in the head and bruised about the body, but maintained consciousness. Her injuries, although severe, will not be fatal.

AN examination of the assessment book of this city shows some facts which will be of interest to our readers. We find that of 720 poll taxes assessed to non-property holders 24½ or, $49 have been collected. The Assessors and Collectors on polls amount to $174.24, exceeding the whole amount collected by $125.24, so that the city instead of receiving a revenue from this source has really taken $174.24 of the money collected from property holders to pay the cost of collecting $49 poll tax.—Perth Amboy Republican.

NORTH PLAINFIELD PARAGRAPHS.

On the Somerset street side of Codington's pond, a narrow road-way leads down to the water just below the stone cracker, where teamsters are in the habit of watering their horses. On Tuesday last, Mr. R. W. Mahaffee drove into the water to give the animals he was driving a drink. At this point the water is very deep and Mr. M. must have driven off the roadway, as the first he knew he was head and ears over in the water, with floundering horses and capsized wagon. As he could not swim there was danger of his drowning. Fortunately some young men, who were rowing on the pond, came to his rescue and helped him to terra firma as well as horses and wagon. It was a narrow escape, however, for Mahaffee.

Refugee Barick.

North Plainfield's bigamist pedagogue Mr. Elias W. Barick, still manages to elude the search that has been made for him, and at the present time is seemingly as undiscoverable as a greenback politician. From what can be learned from the family of his latest wife, and present appearances, it would seem that Miss Tuthill was aware of Mr. Barick's first marriage and the existence of the wife in North Plainfield. Immediately after the ceremonies at Skowhegan the pair left by train, and as no word has ever been received from even the young lady, it is reasonable to suppose that she must know of the circumstances surrounding her partner's past life and is aiding in his concealment. It is hardly possible that he could otherwise invent a cause plausible enough to persuade Miss Tuthill from dropping an occasional line to the grief stricken mother at home dying with anxiety as to her daughter's welfare and whereabouts. A Skowhegan paper tells the story of Mr. Barick's first appearance in that city as an agent of certain school books, and representing himself as a bachelor. He succeeded in gaining an entrance into many of the best families of the place, and soon became a favorite of the fair sex—which position, in Miss Tuthill's case, developed into an engagement. The marriage was announced to take place during the latter part of April, but was postponed for two weeks upon Mr. Barick's statement by telegram that his "father had died." On May 3d, however, it was consummated, and the pair with a complete outfit and about $50 that was presented to the bride by her parents, left for their future home, they stated—"Plainfield." When the groom reaches his "future home," however, he will find even the summer suit he took with him, superfluous.

SPORTSMEN'S CORNER.

The Short Hills Athletic Club has disbanded.

A black bass, weighing over 3 pounds jumped up between two logs of a raft going down the Delaware, between Delaware Station and Belvidere, a few days ago. It was caught by the raftsmen.

Per invitation of Mr. Benj. E. Haines, a number of friends assembled at that gentleman's grounds on Front street, Monday last and indulged in glass ball shooting. The breakage of balls was not up to the average of the shooters, Mr. Haines, however, having the largest score of broken balls to his credit. For a hospitable host commend us to "Ben."

The Commissioners of Fisheries have just completed their annual distribution of trout fry, and in a few days will commence the usual Summer operations in the artificial propagation of shad in the Delaware. Major Anderson says that persons who may desire to witness these interesting operations can receive good information from him as to the locality of the operators at any time after the 12th of the present month.

A large number of Plainfielders visited Waverly Park on Decoration day to visit the trot between the two well-known fast horses, "Helene" and "Peralto." The attendance was very large, and betting about equal between the friends of the two animals, who are acknowledged to be among the very fastest horses in the State, Wm. Moore's "Carbolic" ranking with them. The race was for $1,000 a side, bona fide. The mare "Helene" won the race easily in three straight heats, 2:29¾, 2:28 and 2:28¼. A large amount of money changed hands on the result. Now let us hear from "Carbolic."

Shortly before 9 o'clock last Saturday evening the O'Leary walk ended, when the score stood as follows: Vint, 578 miles 610 yards; Sullivan, 569 miles 170 yards; Hughes, 552 miles 385 yards; Fitzgerald, 536 miles 830 yards; Howard, 518 miles 127 yards; Clow, 502 miles 170 yards; Donovan, 500 miles 385 yards; Hassell, 500 miles 170 yards; Dufrane, 482 miles 390 yards; Littlewood, 480 miles 830 yards, and Curran, 480 miles 390 yds. After the six days match ended ten professionals started in a fifteen-mile running match for four money prizes, aggregating $100. Charles Price, the ex-Champion of England, won the first prize in 1h. 26min. 59sec.

SCOTCH PLAINS SCRATCHINGS.

The "Parish Aid Society" of the Episcopal church, Scotch Plains, will hold a Strawberry Festival at the residence of the Rev. Mr. Sykes, on Wednesday evening June 8th, beginning at 5 o'clock. The entertainment is in behalf of the church building fund.

Collector Alfred Berry, of Somerset County has submitted his annual financial statement, which is published in the Somerville papers. From it we learn that the total amount of receipts for the year ending May 11th, 1881, was $143,877.74, and disbursements, $136,173.25, leaving a balance of $7,704.49 on hand in bank.

The trial of ex-Collector Robert G. Miller, of New Brunswick, has again been postponed until June 14, the court fixing that date peremptorily, and stating that if the case was not moved on that date the defendant would be discharged on one or both indictments.

SAD ACCIDENT.

MR. OSCAR CRAIG Blown Up by a Premature Blast in the Rosendale Cement Quarry—Destruction of an Eye—Its Subsequent Removal by Surgical Operation.

Mr. Oscar Craig was foreman in a cement quarry at Rosendale, Ulster Co., N. Y. By an explosion one day in the quarry he lost an eye—lost it totally. Under an impression that the matter was less serious the local physician told Mr. Craig that his eye was not lost wholly, but could be saved by treatment. The experiment was tried and failed. Worse remained behind, for he was in danger of losing the other also, through sympathetic inflammation. In this strait he consulted Dr. David Kennedy, of Rondout, N. Y., who told him the injured eye must be taken out to save the other. To this Mr. Craig demurred, and went back home in doubt. His local physician said: "Go to New York." To New York the patient went, and one of the most eminent oculists in the country, having looked at the case, said: "You have lost one eye entirely; go back and do what you can to save the other." Briefly Dr. Kennedy removed the ruined eye, and treated Mr. Craig with "Kennedy's Favorite Remedy" to build up his system, and the result was successful.

Dr. Kennedy's great success as a Surgeon is due to the use of "Favorite Remedy" in the after treatment.

Are you troubled with Dyspepsia, Liver Complaint, Constipation, or derangement of the Kidneys and Bladder, then use Dr. Kennedy's "Favorite Remedy." It will not disappoint you. —"Dr. Kennedy's Favorite Remedy" for sale by all druggists. jun1

SEASON 1881.

IDOL!

[Formerly Peck's IDOL,]

By the great Mambrino Chief founder of the Mambrino family; 1st dam by American Eclipse, son of Duroc (founder of the Star family) by imported Diomed. Dam of American Eclipse, Miller's Damsel, by imported Messenger; 2d dam, Kitty Muse by Shakespeare; 3d dam, Eliza Jenkins, by Sir William of Transport; 4th dam by Orphan, son of Ball's Florizel; 5th dam by imported Buzzard; 6th dam by Silvertail; 7th dam by imported Dove.

IDOL is a rich dark bay, weighs 1,250 lbs., with nigh hind foot white, full sixteen hands high, a horse of great substance, fine temper, elegant trotting action, record 2:41½ as a four-year old, distancing his field, and at five years old showed 2:30, third heat, to wagon. As a six year old he made his first season in the stud, but the war prevented the development of his progeny. Few of his colts have been trained, but those few are mostly fast; Idol Girl, 16 hands high, won Beacon, Mystic, and Prospect Park stakes for four year olds during 1871, obtained a record of 2:38¼. This mare at that age could beat 2:30, and at Prospect Park trotted during her race a half mile in 1:15½, and a quarter in 36½ seconds—a 2:26 gait. As a five year old she met with an accident which ended her turf career. Barbara Patchen, in 1879, as a big 16½ hand green 5 year old mare, won all her races in a jog, and the seventh heat, on a half mile track, gained record 2:34¼. Dan, at Topeka, Kansas, won his race in 2:30. Wagon won colt stakes at Hartford. Nabnella trotted, 3 years old, in 2:44. Ideal, same age, trotted in 2:46, and John R., in 1880, gained a record of 2:39 on a half mile track at Olean, N. Y., and won first money in all his races. There are others that will drop into the 2:30 list this year without doubt.

IDOL will be limited to 10 mares, besides those engaged, at $30.00 the season, money payable (or secured) at service.

Good care and pasture furnished at $5 per month. All accidents and escapes at owners' risk. IDOL and some of his colts can be seen at the grazing farm of D. F. CABLE, STIRLING, Morris Co., New Jersey.

Breeders desiring an outcross should call and see IDOL, and after seeing him, judge for themselves. 3je1m

SUMMER showers are a blessing to the owner of street sprinklers.

No accident thus far from change of signals on Central Railroad.

STEAM power has been introduced into the hat factory of Councilman Coriell, at Evona.

TIME table cards of Central Railroad printed accurately and on reasonable terms at this office.

THE rain of Tuesday last was a great blessing to the farmers. Corn fairly jumped out of the ground after it.

THE Saturday evening hops at the Park House, are taking their usual stand in popularity.

AND now the School Board is to be requested to close the schools at noon every day until the Summer vacation. A just desire.

"BOOT-BLACK" Jourdan was acquitted on Thursday of last week of a charge of assault and battery committed in this city a short time since.

THE members of No. 1. Hose Co. justly feel elated at the victory they achieved over the members of No. 2 Hose Co. at Base Ball on Decoration Day.

A DISGRACE to Plainfield—that no demonstration whatever toward the recognizance of Decoration Day, in its full meaning, was observed in its limits last Monday.

THE new time table was issued from the steam presses of THE CONSTITUTIONALIST and ready for distribution, two days before it went into effect on the Railroad.

ABRAHAM SMALLEY, a well-known farmer and huckster, residing near New Market, died suddenly of heart disease on Tuesday night last. He was not subject to the disease and was well and hearty the early part of the evening.

AND now the peaceful slumbers of the innocents of Plainfield are nightly interrupted by the unearthly sound of the locomotive, according to new signal code—who, who—who—WHO—OH—OH—OH—How do you like it?

ARRANGEMENTS are being made by the officers of the Union & Middlesex Counties' Mutual Agricultural Association to have some good trotting on the Fair Grounds the approaching 4th of July. Hurry up your arrangements, gentlemen.

NUMBERS of brave men who laid down their lives in the war of the Rebellion, lie buried in the cemeteries of this city. In spite of the demands thus made upon public sentiment, their graves were unhonored and undecorated on Monday last by any public demonstration.

MR. J. B. Miller, the proprietor of Laing's Hotel, is offering Hub Punch, that delicious beverage, for the coming season's picnics and excursions, at the usual rates of New York houses. A trial will convince anyone of its refreshing qualities and invigorating condiments.

LOUIS SCHWARTZ, a veteran hotel keeper who has a number of warm friends in this city, has recently opened fine Billiard Parlors, corner of Broad and East Grand street, Elizabeth N. J., where he will be pleased to receive calls. Success to him in his new enterprise. Read his card in another column.

IN response to a personal appeal of Mr. Fred. Smillie of this city—a delegate to the League of American Wheelmen—Passenger Agent Baldwin of the C. R. R., has issued orders to all freight agents and baggage men, fixing the rate for the transportation of bicycles between any two points in New Jersey, at 25 cents.

WE had the exquisite pleasure of masticating a mammoth specimen of the "Monarch of the West" variety of strawberry, plucked from the vines in a friend's garden on Wednesday last, which measured 3½ inches in circumference. We hope that "Bunny" will not let up on us until he has placed on our desk more than one of those delicious berries.

IT is unnecessary for us to call the attention of the public to the coming fair and festival at Van Deventer Hall on the evenings of next Tuesday and Wednesday. All know of its occurrence; and its object, the completion of the Muhlenberg Hospital, will certainly so strongly appeal to the patronage of our citizens as to command unusual financial success.

MR. Wm. Craig, a former expressman in this city, and later a member of the firm of Keefe & Craig, brick makers, at Evona, was overcome by the excessive heat on Monday last, while at the depot, this city, and was attended by Dr. Burlingham, who applied proper remedies, after which Mr. Craig was removed to his home. No serious results followed.

THE Board of Health will have no occasion this Summer to enquire into the purity of water furnished by Mr. P. M. French to allay the dust on our public thoroughfares. That gentleman has made provisions against any complaint of impurity of water by conveying the pure article from the race back of his mill to his sprinkling wagons through pipes.

CORPORATION Counsel Kimball has notified delinquent tax-payers, whose names appeared in the list of such published in the official papers of the city a short time since, that unless their city and poor taxes due prior to 1880 are not forthcoming within ten days from such a date, legal proceedings will be commenced against them. As a consequence, a considerable amount of back taxes will be collected.

MOSES WALKER, the colored individual arrested on a charge of attacking defenceless woman on the streets, and robbing them of satchels and portmonnaies, was convicted in the Union County Courts last Friday and sentenced to ten years imprisonment in State Prison. This Walker is the same chap who snatched a satchel from the hands of an elderly lady on Seventh Street, this city, one day last Fall, and robbed it of money.

THE first excursion of the season has been arranged. It will take place on Thursday of next week, and is that of the teachers of the Crescent Avenue Sunday School to the wilds of Feltville. Amidst the cooling breezes and shading foliage of that deserted village, a vote will probably be taken as to the desirability of holding the Sunday School sessions in the mornings—with, we judge, a large majority in favor of such action during the Summer.

AGAIN "Chicago" has fallen into the hands of Captain Dodd and awaits action under an old charge and indictment. As he stepped from the Trenton prison on Thursday of last week, he was gathered in by Dodd and a fellow member of the State Detective Bureau and transported to Somerville. "Chicago" naturally possesses a Republican politician's antipathy to the State—coming to New Jersey during Centennial times, he has passed four years and nine months of the subsequent period of five years in its jails.

THE "Crescents" and the "P. A. C's" having failed to organize the usual base-ball nines, their places in the "diamond field" were filled by picked men from No. 1 and No. 2 Hose Companies, on Monday afternoon. The "Gazelles" were too much for their opponents, (although some good playing was done by both Companies.) The score was as follows: No. 1, 23; No. 2, 15. Another game in the vicinity, between an Elizabeth club and a nine from the Potter Press works, broke up in a dispute before its completion.

A TEAM of horses attached to a light buggy, the property of Mr. Geo. B. De Revere, proprietor of the Park House, left standing a moment in front of the hotel on Wednesday evening last, took fright from the striking of a match on the wheel and ran away at a break-neck pace through Park avenue into Front street. The team was captured in front of Fritz's meat market by Lawrence Miner, who received $5 from Mr. Belemuno, the gentleman who was out riding with the team, for his opportune services. No damage resulting to either horses or buggy.

NUMBERS of people visited Cadmus' Livery Stables on Saturday last to inspect some valuable and desirable horse flesh, notice of the appearance of the animals there on that day having appeared in the last issue of THE CONSTITUTIONALIST. One of them, the stallion "Idol," of Mambrino Chief stock, attracted attention for his beauty and gentleness. The animals, which are the property of a New York Merchant, Mr. F. Ackers, were taken to the stock farm of Mr. Frank Carle, near Stirling, during the afternoon, where they may be seen during the season.

LAST Sunday morning, as Mr. Walter A. Bass, accompanied by his father, were paying a friendly visit to Mr. Percy C. Ohl and family at "Willow Grove," on the outskirts of our city, he was set upon by dogs belonging to Mr. O. and severely bitten in his hand and leg. The family at once applied proper remedies to the sufferer, who afterward had the wounds cauterized by Dr. Long. The dogs were not always vicious, but were opposed to strangers. Mr. Ohl became so incensed at the action of one of the dogs, a valuable one, that he immediately killed him. Mr. Bass' wounds are not at all serious.

STRAWBERRIES are plenty and cheap.

COUNCIL meeting next Monday evening.

THE "Rock House" is open for Summer guests.

THE Times building is receiving a fresh coat of paint.

"JUDGE Harper," we extend our congratulations.

CORRECTED time table of Central Railroad in this issue.

THE Public Schools will close for the summer vacation, June 30th.

THE depot is being painted outside and in. The brick work will receive a coat of oil on the outside.

GOVERNOR Ludlow has shown his usual wisdom and sagacity in the appointment of Judge Harper.

PAINTERS are very busy, judging from the numerous buildings being re-painted throughout the city.

THE First Baptists, on Sunday last, decided to hold their usual Summer excursion during next month.

THE Plainfield Saengerbund holds its regular monthly business meeting on next Monday evening.

ADJOURNED meeting of the Board of Managers of the Plainfield Fire Department on Wednesday evening next.

NETHERWOOD Hotel will open for the season, June 15th, under the management of Mr. King, last year's popular manager.

REV. A. V. V. Raymond will preach the gospel in the Warren Mission Chapel, Sunday evening 5th inst., at 7:45 o'clock. All are invited.

ROBERTS' Livery Stables are now connected by telephone with prominent buildings in the city, including the Park House and Mulford's real estate office at the depot.

A STRAWBERRY and ice cream festival for the benefit of the New Market Baptist Church, will be held at that place on next Thursday evening. Admission will be free and all are invited.

A NUMBER of the journeymen masons of Plainfield have met in conclave, and resolved to not work unless hereafter they receive $2.75 a day, with nine hours work on a Saturday.

MESSRS. Bryan & Scott, agents for Mr. W. A. Boyd, are canvassing our city for a new Directory, which is very much needed. Our citizens should cheerfully furnish all required information.

THE authorities of Somerville granted permission for both of their fire apparatus to be taken out of town to Flemington, on Decoration Day. Supposing that Somerville's big fire had started that day.

THE closing of the post office, banks and most of the city's business places, with the half-masting of flags on the principal buildings, was about all the celebration accorded Decoration Day in Plainfield.

A HANDSOME new flag staff, 80 feet in height, was last week erected on the brow of the mountain at the "Rock House" by the proprietor, S. O. Staats. On Decoration Day the stars and stripes were hoisted at half mast from the pole.

PAUL'S exhortation to take a little wine for the stomach's sake it would appear will bother temperance people more in the new than in the old version, as the following stronger sentence occurs in the new: "Be no longer drinkers of water, but use a little wine for thy stomach's sake."

"BARCLAY'S Blooming Band of Boy Burlesquers and Boquet of Banjoists, Bone Beaters and Button Busters," gave an entertainment at Van Deventer Hall on Monday evening last, that reflected much credit on the troupe in general. It is to be regretted that greater patronage was not extended where it was so justly deserved.

AN unfortunate runaway in Third and Washington streets, on Friday morning of last week, resulted most seriously. The team belonged to a Mr. Yalick residing on the mountains, and in the wagon at the time was Mrs. Doty a neighbor. The lady was thrown out, her shoulder dislocated two ribs broken and her face hurt by the wagon-seat falling upon it.

THOSE who like to enjoy their summer pleasures in the fresh air of the fields, will gladly seize the opportunity of partaking of the attractions that the Congregationalists will set forth in their Festival tent, at Madison Avenue and Eighth street, on next Friday and Saturday evenings. Strawberries and Ice cream are some of the allurements presented.

ELEVEN Plainfield bicyclers departed this city on their respective machines for New Brunswick, on Monday last. Reaching that city, dinner was served, after which the day's ride was finished by a majority of the company on stage and railroad train. It's nothing when you get used to it; but upon a first acquaintance, there's hardly anything so sarcastic as a bicycle saddle.

THE funeral of Dr. W. W. Coriell, at New Market, on Sunday last, was largely attended. The services were held in the Baptist church, and the discourse delivered by the pastor, Rev. E. Everett Jones. The remains were brought to Plainfield for interment. The pall bearers were Drs. P. W. Brakely, A. S. Titsworth, D. P. Vail, Wm. Nelson, E. B. Bertolet and Mr. A. L. Storms.

MR. Hiram Hornish, so well remembered in this city as a caterer to the palates of the public, has taken upon his shoulders the superintendance of a lunch room and confectionery establishment on Front street next to the First National Bank. The reputation of his ice cream is wide spread, and a large patronage will undoubtedly be accorded him.

VENNOR says June will be warm till the 11th, then cold to the 20th; frosts on the 22d and 23d; 24th to 26th, hot. July, cold on the 4th, 5th, 11th, 16th, 17th, 24th and 27th. August, 4th and 5th will be cold. In September, the centre of the month will be the warmest part. October will be warm and cold. November will be muddy, with little frosts. December will be the warmest ever known.

AT the hearing of the charge against "Duck" Wilson, last week, it was found impossible to commit him for burglary, as the hides claimed by Mr. Lewis as stolen from him, had been sold by Wilson before the date on which he was accused of taking them. Since then, however, other of the same kind of property has been identified, and the evidence that will go before the Grand Jury will undoubtedly impel that body to bring in an indictment for burglary.

HERE is a printer who started in for business. He tried to explain how it was. "I commenced badly," said he, "I was obliged to cut down the prices under other printers and often charged no profit, so as to get the job and keep going. I started with nothing, and—" "Yes, we interrupted, meditatively, "and you've got it yet?" He gave a puzzled, hopeless sort of stare for an instant, and as it dawned, nodded a sad assent and slowly took himself off.

Fine Stock.

The attention of breeders and lovers of good horse flesh, is directed to the advertisement of the celebrated stallion "Idol," which appears in this issue. Carle's stock farm is but a short distance from Plainfield, and it will repay parties interested to call and look at this handsome horse.

The City's Mandamus.

City Collector Clark has paid over to County Collector Sheridan about $4,000 on account of the mandamus served upon City Treasurer Van Winkle, peremptorily requiring the payment of over $9,000 back taxes due the city. The taxes are being collected, after all. You will get your money "Sherry," never fear. We are very honest up this way; also modest.

Ho! for Washington Rock.

A demand of the public for some time past has been the daily running of a stage between this city and Washington Rock. Mr. Stephen O. Staats, proprietor of the Mountain House at that point, has consequently established a daily excursion between the two points, and on and after Tuesday next an omnibus will leave the Plainfield station at 10 o'clock each morning, returning at 4 p. m.

Plainfield's Philharmonic.

The amateur performers who, under the leadership of Mr. Clark W. Evans, will combine with their instruments in forming a harmonious whole in furnishing orchestral music during the evenings of the 7th and 8th inst's at Van Deventer Hall, (upon the occasion of the Muhlenberg Bazaar) are having frequent rehearsals and already give promise of the admirable performances that will undoubtedly result. Mr. H. W. H. Lindsley, the Trinity organist, presides gracefully at the piano; Messrs. Abraham Mosley and David Runyon draw sweet sounds from their violins; Mr. La Evans scrapes the 'cello most pathetically; Mr. La Moore swells placid harmony from the cornet; Mr. Joseph Mowatt fingers the clarionet with artistic elegance; Mr. Geo. Pierce plays the flute to perfection; and Mr. Geo. Schmidt causes the bass viol to talk like a thing of life. Their selections include the Rackett and M. Q. (exceedingly rapid) galops, the Olivette and Flowers of St. Petersburg waltzes and numerous other bright and sparkling melodies that, with a judicious sprinkling of more pathetic music, form a "repertory" calculated to please the varied desires of a miscellaneous audience.

The "Would-Be's" Re-union.

THE "Would-be Glee Club" undoubtedly experienced a grand success upon their reunion, on Monday last at Washington Rock. A large attendance of the Club's friends gathered upon the occasion, and to the music of competent performers the night was passed in continuous enjoyment of the dance and sociability. Messrs. DeGraw, J. B. Kilie and Sebring, the efficient floor committee, are to be credited with achieving the success of the affair, while President Leeson, Treasurer Voorhees and the other officers of the Club were assiduous in their attention to the pleasures of all. Contributing not a little to the good time, is to be mentioned the courteous and generous host of the House—Mr. Stephen O. Staats. With his well-known bountifulness, meals were furnished to who demanded such, and the entire house from the large dancing hall to dressing rooms above was thrown open with a welcome to all. During the afternoon large parties from other places also stopped at the hotel, which has become one of the most popular resort of the kind in the State.

Plainfield Courts.

House vs. Keef—In Trespass.
House vs. Roach—In Trespass.

The two above cases, the facts in each being substantially the same, were tried before Louis F. Wadsworth, Esq., on the 28th ult. The cases were in trespass for breaking and entering the close of the plaintiff. It appeared that Mr. House became the purchaser of the land in question on foreclosure sale, and immediately took possession under the Sheriff's deed. The defendants in both cases had formerly pastured their horses and cattle on a part of the premises under a lease from the former owner the mortgager. On taking possession under the Sheriff's deed, as the cattle of defendants continued on the pasture, Mr. House first gave oral notice and then written warning to the defendants that he had become the owner of the property, and that he would sue in trespass for damage if their horses or cattle were again seen on his property. The defendants who argued their own cases claimed that they had a right to the pasture because of a lease given by the former owner and mortgager before the foreclosure.

Craig A. Marsh, Esq., who appeared as counsel for the plaintiff in both cases speedily demolished this plea by citing numerous authorities to show that a lease made subsequently to the execution of a mortgage confers no rights on the lessees as against, the mortgagee or the purchaser at foreclosure sale.

The defendant Keef then endeavored to show that his horses had not trespassed since he received the written notice. There was considerable conflict of testimony on this point.

In summing up Mr. Marsh contended that the defendants committed trespasses were before receiving notice, for which plaintiff would be entitled to a verdict of nominal damages; but that their repeated trespasses after notice and warning not to trespass, so that plaintiff was obliged to resort to courts to establish his rights, were wilful persevering trespasses for which the plaintiff was entitled to exemplary damages.

The Court reserved his decision until Tuesday, when he delivered a written opinion that would fill a column, in which the law and the evidence in the case were exhaustively reviewed. His decision was in favor of the plaintiffs in both cases, and the defendants promptly paid the judgments and costs.

Kesley vs. Westerfield.

This case came on for trial on Tuesday before Justice Wadsworth, with Craig A. Marsh, Esq., for the plaintiff and George P. Suydam, Esq., for the defendant. The case was remarkable for the conflict of testimony. Counsel agreed on the law. Only questions of fact were at issue, and these are of little interest to anyone but the litigants. Decision will be read on Saturday.

The Hospital Reception.

Monday was a most auspicious day for the opening to public inspection of the Muhlenberg Hospital, and as everybody seemed to be in attendance, an extended notice by us is unnecessary. Of the new Board of Governors—whose names we publish elsewhere—many were present, as well as most of the prominent officials and residents of our city. The Ladies' Board was represented by many of its members—the full list including Mrs. Saltzman, president; Mrs. Frank Wells, vice president; Mrs. A. Azoy, secretary; Mrs. Dr. Burlingham, treasurer; the Mrs. Ruttman, Honegger, Chas. Potter, Sam'l. Huntington, L. V. F. Randolph, G. Mayer, Julian Scott, E. E. Kenyon, Dr. Stillman, J. K. Myers, Miss Schipper and nine associates. The universal interest in the cause was shown by the appreciative comments on the building and praises of the work done, that were heard on all sides. Refreshments were bountifully furnished, and Lander's orchestra rendered sweet instrumental music most beautifully. It had been intended to have an address delivered during the afternoon by the Rev. Dr. Whitehead of Bethlehem, Pa., but that orator was unable to be present and his letter of excuse, advice and encouragement was furnished the newspapers for publication as follows:

BETHLEHEM, May 24, 1881.

MR. MASON W. TYLER.

DEAR SIR:—Your letter of the 20th, kindly inviting me to make an address at the Hospital Anniversary on May 30th, is received. I am grateful for the honor, but am obliged to decline, on account of engagements at home. I can wish for your hospital no more successful career than that of the hospital which I was instrumental in starting here. We began with a Church collection of $20—that gave us the start—and then I did the talking and urging, and a persevering gentleman did the begging, and soon we had $10,000. That was in 1872, and from that day to this we have always had money in the treasury. Now, we have a property of 25 acres, several pieces of real estate from which we derive income, some new buildings with all modern conveniences, and an endowment of $310,000. Especially fortunate circumstances have made all this possible, but these would have been powerless without the will and purpose and persistence of a few at the outset. The ladies have had all along an Aid Society—which, by excursions and festivals, and outdoor fetes, has added the large sum of $24,665 to our treasury.

Hoping that your project may find as generous sympathy, as diligent perseverance, as many earnest helpers among the men, and as irresistible advocates among the fair, and may speedily become successful in every way, I remain, my dear sir,

Very truly Yours,
CORTLANDT WHITEHEAD.

Let us hope that Plainfield will do its share in the furtherance of so worthy a cause as that of its Hospital.

The Close of the Season.

As we review the Third Concert of the Plainfield Vocal Society, given at the Park avenue Baptist church on Thursday evening of last week, we are at the same time called upon to announce with regret, as a result of its completion, the closing of what has been one of the most popular and praiseworthy series of musical entertainments ever held in this city. The causes of such results have been, we feel safe in saying, mainly, the efficiency of the Society's conductor, the conscientious rehearsals by the members, the care and taste used in the selection of the higher class of vocal compositions and the generosity and judgment displayed in the engagement of talented soloists. Financially the season has been as satisfactory as was expected, and for this is to be thanked the lavish patronage of an appreciative list of subscribers. The large numbers that gathered at each concert—noticeably extensive upon the final occasion—indisputably evidenced the high rank the series had attained in the feelings of the public.

Of Mr. E. J. Fitzhugh's ability as a trainer and conductor of miscellaneous choruses, there can be but one opinion and that the most favorable. Probably no greater piece of work is ever attempted by one man than that of drilling into unity of melody a collection of vocalists more or less capable of reading music understandingly and to some extent as ignorant as possible (in the beginning) of time, measure, swell and the gradations of sound in their right place and proper harmony. We outsiders are entirely unable to form any estimate of the demands upon a leader's patience occasioned by the perverseness of his pupils in always doing the wrong thing, and, after being set right, forgetting what was last taught while the intricacies of another bar are being explained. Mr. Fitzhugh's labors in the direction of perfecting the Society in the many selections, were untiring, and the result is a credit to his method and manner of tuition.

Praise should also be accorded the vocalists themselves for their unremitting attention to the instruction given; and when is considered the difficulties presented by the Cantata that was rendered on Thursday evening, and the few rehearsals that were available, the perfection of the interpretation is to be wondered at and the Society to be congratulated and commended thereon. When the season first opened the loss of many of the best tenors was greatly regretted, but new acquisitions were made and the part has since been most admirably sustained. The bass is perhaps the only weak (which, however, is too strong a word to correctly convey our meaning) part of the whole—not but that the individual voices are all satisfactory in themselves, but collectively they are not so powerful as selections like Sullivan's "The long day closes," demand. Of the sopranos and contraltos nothing more than is accomplished by them can be justly desired. They seem to have absorbed thoroughly the sentiment of the music and completely respond to the directing influence of their leader. We are assured that the public will uphold us in our statement that the female parts of the music have been carried out in a manner far above anything of a similar nature ever experienced in Plainfield.

Aside from the excellence of the members voices in general, a few favored the attendants of the First and Second Concerts with a display of their individual talents. Of such we spoke at the time, and just now merely record, in passing, the success achieved by Mr. Wm. W. Howland as well as the flattering reception tendered the singing of Mrs. Collier, Mrs. Freeman, Mr. C. McCutchen and Mr. Titsworth.

A demand for something heavier than was included in the first programme, induced the Society to attempt Mendelssohn's XLII Psalm at its second appearance; and so far did it exceed its most sanguine expectations in the direction it aimed, Mr. Fitzhugh felt authorized to take up and rehearse for presentation on May 26th, Gade's Cantata "The Crusaders." It has repeatedly been stated that too few rehearsals were given; and this is so inasmuch as their infrequency compelled more arduous study and training. But had more been attainable, the selection would have (nor could have) gained nothing thereby. It was sung throughout as perfectly as possible, for which no credit is due the members of the Brooklyn Society who kindly volunteered their presence ostensibly to assist, but noticeably to annoy the "natives" (as they called them) by their uncourteous actions and audible remarks during many of the selections. The parts of Armida, Rinaldo and Peter were sung by Miss Emma Wilkinson and Messrs Dennison and Morawski. It is many years (some six if we remember correctly) since Miss Wilkinson first sang in this city, and during that time her voice has improved wonderfully until it is now one of the purest and broadest of contraltos, faultless of intonation and gloriously rich. Yet, we hope to be pardoned for our belief that she was not suited for the mezzo-soprano part she attempted to render. No applause was given her earnest endeavors to do justice to the solos apportioned her, possibly for the reason we have mentioned, but nevertheless conspicuous by the absence. Neither was Mr. Morawski flatteringly received, and upon Mr. Dennison, the tenor, alone fell such honor as was audibly conveyed, apart from that freely accorded the choruses. In No's. 3 and 6 was the latter gentleman's voice most particularly enjoyed. To say that he did not suffer by a comparison with Mr. Chas. H. Thompson, the tenor of the Second Concert, is praise enough. There was shown a sweetness and flexibility of voice by Mr. Dennison on the occasion, that was intensely pleasing and satisfactory. But to such portions of the work as were sustained by the chorus, was the applause most gratifying. Especially good were the "Crusaders" in No's. 3 and 4; while the "Sirens" in No. 7 almost entranced the mortals in the church pews that listened with wrapt attention and interest. One gem of the whole was the "March of Pilgrims," but the lateness of the hour and the approaching end of what had been probably too long a strain on the musical sense and ear, precluded the expressed appreciation it deserved. Probably a slight mistake was made in not giving the Cantata at the beginning of the evening's entertainment, but it is a perfect affair that can be accused of no error other than the arrangement of its programme. Miss Jennie Pratt and Mr. H. E. Benedict acquitted themselves admirably as the accompanists. The latter follows such accessory part of musical programmes as a profession—occupying the position at the First Concert—so his perfect execution was expected as a natural sequence of his experience. But Miss Pratt's remarkable performance is to be looked upon rather as an outcome of artistic genius than a repetition of former attainments acquired from habit or by custom. The accompaniment was not by any means a minor part of the Cantata, and its excellency cannot be too gratefully appreciated by the Society.

Of part first of the programme nothing was to be lightly considered. Gade's "Spring's Message" opened the Concert and was remarkably good. Mr. Morawski followed with an enjoyable solo; although his substitution of another selection for the one the programme promised, or a less pleasing adaption than the one most familiar, was regretted. "The long day closes" by Sullivan, sung by the alto, tenor and first and second bass parts, was most effective and only equalled by Smart's "Ave Maria" that closed the beginning of the programme. Miss Emma Wilkinson succeeded in capturing the favor of her audience by one of Dudley Buck's best (if they are not all "best") "Expectancy." She responded to an encore with "Where did you come from, Baby, dear?" and added therewith greatly to her success.

A repetition of Mr. Fitzhugh's song for men's voices, "Serenade" was enthusiastically demanded and given. It seemed to be the most intensely enjoyed of the selections, and the praise for such result should be equally divided among the composer, the chorus and Mr. Dennison, the tenor soloist. Rheinberger's "The stars are shining," was also most satisfactorily rendered; while a work of Schumann's, arranged as a duo for two pianos and executed by Miss Harriet Cady and Mr. Clark W. Evans, was one of the few perfect things of the kind we are permitted to listen to.

And so with the last "beat" of Conductor Fitzhugh's baton, the expiring quaver of the throat pulsations of the chorus singers and the final chord struck by the accompanists, have closed a succession of musical entertainments whose presence in the past will be long remembered with pleasure, and whose absence in the future will always be regretted.

Hospital Election.

At the annual meeting of the Board of Governors of Muhlenberg Hospital held Tuesday evening, May 31st., the following officers were elected for the ensuing year:

President—Bishop Scarborough.
Vice Presidents—Nathan Harper, Mason W. Tyler.
Secretary and Treasurer—Wm. R. Cock.
Managing Committee—Messrs. Harper, Rodman, Whiton, Tyler and Chamberlain.
Finance Committee—Messrs. J. F. Hubbard, Balen, Erickson, Potts and Whiton.

And as a member of the Board, in place of Mr. Finch resigned, Carl Schippey.

FIRE MATTERS.

No. 1 Engine was taken to the Grove street bridge on Tuesday night for a "wash." The steamer took suction from the new "reservoir" recently constructed at that point by the Fire Board, which consists of a hogshead sunk in the bed of the brook to a level with the flow of water. The plan was found to work admirably, although had the hogshead been placed a few feet closer to the bridge, a steamer could reach it with its suction, stationed on the bridge. The steamer worked splendidly under the manipulations of Engineer Wm. Grannatt.

The Board of Managers of the Plainfield Fire Department met in regular meeting on Wednesday evening in the rooms of the Common Council. Present, President VanWinkle and Messrs. Depew, Gillies, Fleig and Jones. Absent Mr. Morris. The minutes of previous meeting were read and adopted. Communication was presented from Mr. Morris regretting his inability to be present on account of ill health. Mr. Jones of the Com. on Wells reported progress in the matter of procuring water at the Grove street bridge when necessary. The Com. on Repairs and Supplies, through Mr. Gillies, also reported "progress." Mr. John Cooper, previously recommended for membership by Gazelle Eng. Co. No. 1, was unanimously elected. The claims of F. A. Dunham, $3, and A. D. Cook & Bro., $60.33 were ordered paid, and that of W. B. Grannatt $30.65 referred back for proper certification. The presentation of the bill of A. T. Marsh, $5.40 for washing hose, called up some discussion in the Board as to the propriety of the department's paying for such work. President VanWinkle considered it entirely proper and necessary that the Department should pay for all washing of hose after active service. The firemen contributed their services without remuneration, and he did not think it just to expect them to do more than could be avoided. At the same time he would advise that the Chief should keep watch and see that too much of it was not done. The bill was then ordered paid. Gazelle Eng. Co. No. 1, applied for exemption certificates for John Borman, L. B. Boice, E. C. VanNorstrand, L. DeCamp and Chas. Daly. Laid over for examination. The Secretary read the legal opinion of Mr. Wm. B. Maxson in relation to the bills of J. A. Hubbard for assessing the Fire taxes of the years 1878, '79 and '80, amounting to $377.86. The ruling held that the claims could not be legally paid—that compensation could only be allowed for services rendered after the election whereat such remuneration had been voted. Received and placed on file. Chief Vail reported to the Board that two members of Hose Co. No. 1 had been drunk and disorderly on Monday night and had endeavored to create an alarm of fire. They were reported to the Foreman of the Engine Co., and by that body were expelled. Also that Engineer Grannatt had offered to make patterns from which the Department could have grates cast at any time, for $6. On motion the Com. on Repairs and Supplies was authorized to act with power in the matter. The Board then adjourned to meet in one week at the parlors of Alert Hose Co., to receive the report of the Assessor as to the taxable property inside the fire limits.

WESTFIELD WISPS.

Mr. Geo. A. Bayard, our popular druggist, came very near receiving a severe injury while using an ice pick on the 26th.

The appearance of a very handsome basket phaeton with horse and tiger to match in our streets on Thursday, attracted considerable attention.

Dr. Wm. P. Humphrey of Elizabeth, Veterinary Surgeon, has treated a number of horses here for their owners with entire satisfaction in every case.

The many friends here of Rev. E. B. Eggar, (their name is legion) formerly pastor of the Presbyterian church, noticed with pleasure his presence here on Saturday last.

Mr. Horace Crosby late of Plainfield, has associated himself at Irving's shop with our old and tried friend Henry Dougherty, in the business of blacksmithing, wagon building &c. May success attend them.

The majority of our citizens will learn with pleasure of the elongation (all rights reserved) of the whistle at Irving's factory, enabling the engineer to make or produce greater sound or noise. The immediate residents, however, hardly appreciate the improvement.

Wild, Indian yells, accompanied by the noise of a base drum, brought the citizens of "Murray Hill" to their doors on Saturday afternoon last only to be informed that the "Mulligans" were out. This is a juvenile military organization commanded by Capt. "Gib" Foster.

Mr. J. J. Willis of this place, in our estimation, takes the medal for raising the largest heads of lettuce in the State, quality unexcelled. A single head of lettuce measuring over three feet in circumference is almost enough for a family for a week.

A Strawberry and Ice Cream Festival under the auspices of the Ladies' Aid Society of the Methodist Church, will be held at the church on Wednesday evening next. Knowledge of the committee in charge guarantees perfect management. All should go.

Mr. Ed. Chamberlain apparently does not intend to be out done by our other residents in farm products; his exhibition of rye stalks taken from his field measuring 8 feet 1 inch at this early day is evidence of intelligent cultivation.

We notice that among the leading attractions billed by the Barclay Boy Minstrels, who gave a performance at Plainfield on the evening of Decoration day, were the names of our popular local artists of the Banjo, Messrs. Davis and Applegate.

In our notice of the settlement of the loss at the Cranford fire, in our last issue, an unintentional error was committed in the name of the efficient manager of the Merchants Insurance Co. of Newark, it should have read Mr. Wm. H. Meeker of Elizabeth.

Mr. Joseph Moffett received the contract to repair the bridge on the Springfield road near "Baldwins," and the work is nearly completed. This is the first work under our new Freeholder Mr. S. S. Mapes. The fact of Mr. Moffett having it in charge insures satisfactory work.

Considerable disappointment was caused on Wednesday last by the failure of those interested, to effect a race between Mr. Harry Hughes's horse "Pinafore," and Mr. Silvey's horse "Newark." Mr. Hughes' absence from home was the cause, and the race will probably take place at an early date.

Capt. Benjamin Marsh was in town on Monday last. As he has succeeded in securing tenants for his several houses in Westfield for the ensuing year, he has decided to sell a portion of his furniture at auction to-morrow, Saturday night. The sale will take place at Urmston's furniture rooms on Broad street.

A visit to the rooms of the Westfield Athletic Club is one of the pleasures that we have to record in the past week. Entering a spacious and appropriately furnished reception or club room, we were ushered into the Gymnasium, where all the apparatus necessary to a proper physical education was found. The Club though young is strong in numbers and talent, and bids fair to make itself known in the field of athletics.

The Overseer of the Road District, No. 8, Mr. Orren Pierson, has commenced repairs to sidewalks in his dist. He has already graded the sidewalk on Broad St., from Marsh's to Miller's, and on Elm from Broad street to North avenue, some portion of the walks are already laid. With a clear understanding of the duties of the overseer in this matter, we consider that this gentleman deserves credit for this early attention and freely accord it to him. Bad weather alone prevented its completion a week earlier.

The lovers of good music and pleasant entertainment in Westfield, will undoubtedly find an opportunity to enjoy themselves, such as seldom offered, in the Grand Concert to be given on the evening of Wednesday June 15th, at Lyceum Hall, by the pupils of our public school, under the directorship of their popular principal, Mr. W. H. Ristow. One hundred pupils from the school will participate in this entertainment, and the Concert both in numbers and excellence, promises to be one that will amply repay all lovers of good music to attend. The programme selected includes many favorite songs. The music will be Newark talent, the orchestra to consist of Violin, Violincello, Cornet, Flute, Piano &c. Prices of admission have been placed at popular rates. Tickets can be procured at Gale's, Bayard's and other stores. Further particulars will be given next week.

Extensive preparations are already under way for the proper celebration of the 4th of July. The following Athletic programme is already decided upon: For Professionals, 100 yard run, 120 yard hurdle race (over 10 hurdles), 440 yards run, sack race (50 yards), wheelbarrow race (blindfolded). A first prize of $3.00 and second prize of $2.00, will be given in each event except sack and wheelbarrow races in which the prizes will be $2.00 for winner and $1.00 for second man. In addition to this it is rumored that the Westfield Athletic Club contemplate giving Amateur races and a Glass Ball match, open to all, will take place in the afternoon. The entrance fee in the contests above announced will be 25 cents for each entry. Entries close July 3d.

Mr. John M. Ledley completed his contract upon the extension to the Netherwood Hotel last week.

A horse, the property of Aaron Clark, that was attached to a heavy wagon and being left untied by its owner on Elm street Monday, probably under the impression that it was feed time started on a run through Broad street, but fortunately was caught after a short spurt without damage to anything.

It is worthy of note, for the benefit of our citizens needing additional water supply, that is many instances where others have failed, to secure it with driven wells, Mr. John Kane of this place has met with success. John's motto is "there's water there and its got to come." His latest success was on the property of Mr. Robert French.

Mr. William Yeager and wife of Albany, N. Y., have been visiting at the residence of Dr. Wm. Gale, during the past week. Mrs. Yeager is the daughter of E. M. Johnson, who has been clerk of Assembly of the State of New York for a number of years. Her husband occupies a very responsible position in the Attorney General's office of that State.

Dr. Wm. Gale while out driving on Thursday afternoon the 26th, accompanied by the wife of Dr. Aguirre and the Miss Reynolds of Plainfield, met with a narrow escape from serious accident. While driving by the mills at Scotch Plains, one of the team became frightened and shying suddenly against the pole, knocked the other horse down, falling over him; this upset the carriage throwing the occupants to the ground, with no more serious injury fortunately than severe bruises; the doctor, however, proved equal to the occasion and succeeded in reaching the heads of the horses and controlling them before a runaway occurred. The damage to the wagon and harness estimated at about $35.00.

A LITTLE OF EVERYTHING.

The cost of the Johnson murder trial to the county of Union has been estimated at $3,000.

When you go home late, just take a bottle of German Corn Remover to your wife and tell her you have been to the drug store. It makes a great difference in her remarks.

ROSE COLD AND HAY FEVER.

BEING SERIOUSLY TROUBLED with Hay Fever and Rose Cold, I, at the solicitation of a friend, tried Ely's Cream Balm and was surprised in obtaining almost immediate relief. I heartily indorse and earnestly recommend it to all similarly afflicted. W. F. ANDRUS, Druggist, Metuchen, N. J. August 26, 1879.

FOR HAY FEVER I recommend Ely's Cream Balm. It entirely relieved me from the first application; have been a sufferer for ten years. Going from home and neglecting to take the remedy, I had an attack; after returning I immediately resorted to it, and found instant relief. I believe, had I begun its use earlier, I should not have been troubled. Have stood heat, dust and draughts as well as during other months. J. COLLYER, Clerk, 118 Broad street, Elizabeth, N. J. Price 50 cents.

The Board of Proprietors of East New Jersey has elected as President, James H. Tichenor, of Newark; Vice-President, Robert W. Rutherfurd, of New York; Treasurer, John Kean, Jr., of Elizabeth; Registrar, Wm. M. Force, of Newark; Surveyor-General, Monroe Howell, of Morristown.

MY GOOD WOMAN.

Why are you so out of sorts, never able to tell folks that you are well? Ten to one it's all caused by deranged kidneys and liver. The sure cure for constipation is the celebrated Kidney-Wort. It is also a specific remedy for all kidney and liver diseases. Thousands are cured by it every month. Try it at once.—Toledo Blade.

HOW TO SECURE HEALTH.

It seems strange that anyone will suffer from the many derangements brought on by an impure condition of the blood, when SCOVILL'S SARSAPARILLA AND STILLINGIA, or BLOOD AND LIVER SYRUP will restore perfect health to the physical organization. It is indeed a strengthening syrup, pleasant to take, and has proven itself to be the BEST BLOOD PURIFIER ever discovered, effectually curing Scrofula, Syphilitic disorders, Weakness of the Kidneys, Erysipelas, Malaria, all Nervous disorders and Debility, Bilious complaints and all Diseases indicating an impure Condition of the Blood, Liver, Kidneys, Stomach, skin, etc. It corrects indigestion. A single bottle will prove to you its merits as a health renewer, for it ACTS LIKE A CHARM, especially when the complaint is of an exhaustive nature, having a tendency to lessen the natural vigor of the brain and nervous system.

BAKER'S PAIN PANACEA cures pain in Man and Beast. For use externally and internally.

DR. ROGER'S VEGETABLE WORM SYRUP instantly destroys worms and removes the Secretions which cause them.

ON Wednesday morning of last week two coal trains collided on the Lehigh Valley Railroad three miles west of Bound Brook. Both were running at a high rate of speed. The locomotives and tenders were completely wrecked. The engineers and train hands jumped in time, so that no lives were lost. The loss is $15,000.

SUFFERING WOMEN.

There is but very small proportion of the women in this nation that do not suffer from some of the diseases for which Kidney-Wort is specific. When headache torments, kidneys out of fix, take a package and its wonderful tonic and its renovating power will cure you and give new life.—Watchman.

The A. S. T. Co. Black Tip for children's shoes is superior to all others for the following reasons: They protect the toe from wear just at the point where the wear comes, and do not give the shoe a bungling and patched appearance, as do toe-caps sewed on to protect the toe.

A miraculous escape from death is an oft quoted remark in our newspapers, and yet, how many such occurrences happen every day and are unchronicled, unheard of and unappreciated except by those who are closely interested. There is probably no larger collection of such facts than in the correspondence of R. F. Armour & Co., whose Elixir of Sulphur has caused many a grateful heart to express its thanks for help in time of danger. This preparation is a certain cure for all diseases of Throat and Lungs—Coughs, Colds, Consumption, Catarrh, etc., and is sold by A. Kilgore, Druggist.

HER OWN EXPERIENCE.

"The friend of ours who recommended your 'Favorite Remedy' had herself suffered a stroke of Paralysis, which rendered her entire right side powerless, and, in a word, left her as helpless as an infant. But 'Kennedy's Favorite Remedy' cured her and she is now able to do her own work." The above is quoted from a letter from a gentleman in Elmira, N. Y., to Dr. David Kennedy, of Rondout, N. Y.—You need a bottle in the house.

Complaints go in troops. They are associated by nature. Get one disease and you will have others. Dr. David Kennedy's "Favorite Remedy" strikes at the root of all disease. You cannot take it amiss, no matter what your particular trouble may be. For all ailments of the Kidneys, Liver, Stomach, Bowels, it is worth more than its weight in gold. MR. SPOOPENDYKE EXPLAINS TO HIS SPOUSE THE DEADLOCK IN THE SENATE.

"My dear," said Mrs. Spoopendyke, adding a piece of lace to her overskirt and wondering whether she had better plait out or full it in; "my dear, who is this Congressman Lock who has just died?"

"What Congressman Lock?" asked Mr. Spoopendyke.

"Why, I read in the paper this morning that they couldn't do any business because of the dead Mr. Lock."

"That ain't a Congressman," said Mr. Spoopendyke. "You read that there was a deadlock in the Senate."

"Yes, and I read it all through, and when I found that Mr. Conkling felt so bad about it, I thought Mr. Lock must be a Congressman."

"No, he isn't either. The deadlock means that the Democrats and Republicans can't agree. Senator Mahone of Virginia went over to the Republicans, and—"

"I see," interrupted Mrs. Spoopendyke, "and Mr. Conkling won't have him confirmed. Though I can't understand why they should interfere with Mr. Mahone's religion. If the poor man wants to join the church, I—"

"Who wants to join the church? Who's a church? Think Mr. Conkling's a bishop? Got an idea he's an altar? S'pose he's a dodgasted chapel with ivy all over him, a spike fence and a chime of bells? It's Stanley Matthews he don't want confirmed."

"He's Mr. Garfield's collector, is he not?"

"No, he ain't. That's Judge Robertson. Mr. Garfield wants Judge Robertson for collector, and Mr. Conkling is opposed to him."

"I don't see why he should be. Though, of course, I should suppose Mr. Garfield would rather have a man like Mr. Mahone, who is going into the church."

"Where's your sense?" snorted Mr. Spoopendyke. "What d'ye want to mix things up for? Trying to make a grab-bag of prominent Americans? Stanley Matthews is candidate for judge, Mr. Mahone is a Senator, and Robertson is appointed collector, but, like Matthews, hasn't been confirmed. Can you see through that?"

"Of course I understand that; but I don't see any excuse for fighting the Democrats, unless they think that Mr. Robertson would collect money from Mr. Mahone, and Mr. Matthews would send him to jail. In that case it—"

"In that case it would take to straighten 'em out!" squealed Mr. Spoopendyke. "What're you trying to get up now—an idiot asylum? Are you planning for a murder, and trying to get up an insanity plea? What d'ye think Robertson's going to collect, hens? Got a notion that Matthews is a penitentiary, sitting around to be leased out? Imagine Mahone to be a national debt? Well, they ain't; they're men, I tell ye—men with legs," and Mr. Spoopendyke kicked out both his own foot handles, by way of illustration. "Conkling is opposed to Matthews and Robertson. He says they shan't be confirmed; but he is a friend of Mahone."

"That's what I didn't see," said Mrs. Spoopendyke. "I am glad Mr. Mahone will be confirmed, though I don't care for Mr. Matthews and Mr. Robertson. It will teach them to repent of their sins, and not fly into the face of Providence. I'm glad Mr. Conkling is a good Episcopalian."

"Oh! he's a prayer book!" howled Mr. Spoopendyke. "You've found him out! You've got him! All he wants is a red cushion, and a rack nailed up in front of him, to be a dodgasted mourner's bench! Didn't I tell ye he was a Senator? Do you know what a Senator is? It's something shaped like a pie. A measly pie! Understand it now?"

"And is Mahone a Senator, too?"

"No, he ain't a Senator?" grinned Mr. Spoopendyke; he's a lightning rod to keep howling idiots from falling overboard. Begin to see into it? And they want him confirmed so if he finds any dodgasted female named Spoopendyke slopping into a canal, he'll slam a church on top of her!"

"Upon my word, my dear," remonstrated Mrs. Spoopendyke, "you talk extravagantly. Mr. Mahone may fight Democrats, but he would never go around throwing churches at women. I don't know Mahone, but I don't believe he would do a thing of that kind. As for Mr. Matthews and Mr. Robertson, they know their business best, but if they have abused Mr. Conkling, I would never read one of Mr. Matthews' decisions, and Mr. Robertson might call here every day for a month and he could never even collect the paper bill."

"That's it!" yelled Mr. Spoopendyke. "There's the science of government! All you want now is a saloon in the basement, to be the national capitol! What you need is a gas meter and a veto to be an improved White House. When Robertson comes here for the milk bill, you pay him, you hear? And when Matthews is the justice of the peace for Brooklyn, you have Conkling arrested for stealing coal, you hear? That'll fetch it! You've got the idea now! All you want to do is to live all Summer in the soldiers' home to be a complete administration! If I had your vision I'd get up on three sticks and hire out as a telescope!"

"Of course I'll do what you say," replied Mrs. Spoopendyke, submissively; "and if Conkling should take some of our coal, unless it was by mistake, I should certainly feel like complaining of him. If Mr. Robertson comes, I will pay him, though the milk is not as good as the first we got. Perhaps Mr. Matthews will fix that when he gets to be justice. Do you think Mr. Mahone will come, too?"

"Come!" shrieked Mr. Spoopendyke; "of course he'll come. He's liable to be here any minute. He's a burglar, I tell you, and he may come over the back fence to-night! Look out for him—I think I hear him now!" and Mr. Spoopendyke fell clear over himself into bed and pulled the clothes over his head.

"Now I understand why they have a deadlock," mused Mrs. Spoopendyke, pushing the table against the door as a precaution against the marauding Mahone, and then examining a pimple on her elbow. "I suspected there would be trouble when Mr. Garfield beat Mr. Arthur for the Presidency," and she crawled into bed, wondering how to tell Mahone from Robertson, and whether Conkling would be content with what he could carry, or if he might not also demand her new chudda cloth dress, with cut-steel buttons.

As the Republican party can't unload without throwing itself overboard, the only thing left is for the honest men to quit it for safer and cleaner quarters.

Now they are trying to make Tyner responsible for substituting Repudiators for Republicans in the Virginia post offices. It is altogether too thin, gentlemen.

"MEM."

Ten minutes after the Flint & Marquette train had pulled out of the depot yesterday noon, a young man with a grab-bag in his hand and a cigar in his mouth sauntered in as if he had half an hour to spare. After walking up and down for about ten minutes he stopped at the ticket window and asked:

"Has the Flint train gone yet?"

"Yes—a quarter of an hour ago."

"The duse! Why, I was to go on that train."

"Well, you didn't."

"And I can't get there?"

"Perhaps you could hire a locomotive."

"Ah, perhaps I could. I'll finish my smoke and go see about it."

After the end of his cigar had been reduced until the fire warmed his nose, the young man went up stairs and said to the Superintendent:

"Could you, ah, for about five or six dollars, ah, give me a locomotive as far as Flint, ah?"

"No, sir."

"Ah, you can't? Well, that's badish. I was to have been married at six o'clock this evening. I might say seven dollars for a locomotive."

"And you might say seven times that."

"Couldn't do it—'pon honor I couldn't, though I'll go down and smoke another cigar, and perhaps make you another offer after a time."

He lit another cigar and paced up and down, and all at once began hunting his pockets. He shortly pulled out a note book, and after running over the leaves he approached the ticket seller and said:

"I find that I am saved."

"How?"

"Here it is, just as I wrote it down last fall: 'Mem:—The said party, of the first part—which is me—agrees to wed the said party of the second part—which is Helen—on the evening of——4, provided, that blizzards, floods, broken bridges, railroad delays or other acts of Providence permit.' I always make a mem. of these things to save misunderstandings. I missed the train, and that comes under the head of railroad delays, eh?"

"I think so."

"And she has no grounds for breach of promise?"

"Can't see any."

"Nor I. My conscience tells me that I ought to offer about $9 for a locomotive to run me up there, and if it is refused I'll go back to the hotel and take things easy till to-morrow. Are you married?"

"No."

"Going to be?"

"I—I expect so."

"Make a mem. of it, and give Providence plenty of latitude for delays. It's not only business, but you've got 'em tight as a wedge. Mem. it right down in black and white, and if they talk sassy show 'em the door. Bye-bye, old fellow, see you later."—Detroit Free Press.

A MOTHER'S JOY,
A Wife's Gratitude to Him who has Afforded her the means of once more Enjoying Life.
The following pleasant letter was recently received by Dr. David Kennedy, of Rondout, N. Y., and signed "Old Schenectady":
"I procured a bottle of 'Kennedy's Favorite Remedy' and my wife used it with the best results. She has no more headache or pain in the side. Indeed, the medicine seemed to have an almost magical effect, and she feels very grateful to you for your kind advice, and especially for the 'Favorite Remedy.' We shall be glad to recommend it to all women who may be suffering from any of the ills peculiar to the sex. It is all you claim for it."
It may be in place to mention, as pertinent to the above letter, that Dr. Kennedy, the proprietor of "Favorite Remedy," located in the City of Schenectady soon after his graduation, and went from there to the war. Some of the most cheering letters he receives are from his old acquaintances in that place, many of whom know from experience what "Favorite Remedy" can do for disease. There all the Doctor's old friends will believe him when he says that "Favorite Remedy" is a specific for Liver and Kidney Complaints, Constipation, Diseases of the Blood and Urinary Organs. Write to Dr. David Kennedy, Rondout, N. Y., and state your case, or ask your druggist for "Favorite Remedy," for sale by all druggists. my6w4

THE NEW BUSINESS
OF THE
EQUITABLE
Life Assurance Society of the U. S.
FOR THE YEAR 1880, WAS OVER
Thirty-Five Millions of Dollars,
The Largest Business Done by any Company in the World.
REASONS FOR THIS RESULT.
The Equitable is the strongest Company in the United States.
Its policies are, by their own express terms, made incontestable after three years. [For precise terms see form of policy contract.]
ALL such incontestable policies are paid immediately after receipt of satisfactory proof of the death of the insured, and without even the customary delay of sixty or ninety days.
EACH ordinary policy provides for a definite surrender-value in paid up assurance, in case the policy is forfeited after three years from its date and is surrendered within a reasonable time thereafter.
BY THE TONTINE SAVINGS FUND plan of assurance, returns to policy-holders, after the expiration of what is called the Tontine period, are greater than are obtainable on any other system. Actual settlements of Tontine policies have been made in which policy-holders have withdrawn amounts varying from eighty to one hundred and twenty per cent. of premiums paid, besides enjoying a life insurance indemnity during the period. No other company can show such results.
THE TONTINE plan is the only one existent by which a person may withdraw from his insurance contract at specified periods, receiving the entire reserve and surplus accumulations in cash.
ALL the ordinary forms of insurance with annual dividends of profits, both cash and reversionary, are issued by this Society.
ASSETS, - $41,108,602.
SURPLUS, - $9,228,294.
Its business for the last ten years (represented by the new policies issued) has been larger than that of any other Company.

THE PREMIUM COLT,

SPARTAN, JR.
Is a bright bay, 16 hands, foaled May 1st, 1877, of superb style and action, with the appearance and finish of the highest type of the gentleman's roadster. Spartan, Jr. took first Special Prize at N. J. State Agricultural Society in 1879; he also took first premium at Somerset Co. Fair in 1879 and '78. Gentlemen wishing to raise stock either for speed, road or coach, will find the three combined in this promising young horse. We claim he has the best crosses of blood for speed, road and coach of any horse in the State. Spartan, Jr. was sired by Spartan, he by Ethan Allen whose record is 2:15, and I think has never been beaten in double harness. His first dam by Nelson, noted for coach and road; 2d dam by Fiddler who has a record of 30 miles in 60 minutes, 25 seconds, he by Monmouth Eclipse, 3d dam by Belcorah, also noted as a road and coach horse. For further pedigree see bills.
Will serve a limited number of mares at Stock Farm of R. & L. V. D. SHEPHERD.

POETRY.

THE DESERT OF THE HEART.

Oh, desert of the heart, in those long eyes
When autumn brings our flowerless winter on,
What a bleak wind across thy wild waste grieves
With hollow murmurs for the dead and gone!
Oh, desert of the heart!

In our fresh youth, when all things are new born,
Before we love, in our impatience, old,
We mourn our fate as though we were forlorn;
Then, alas, how thou seemest vast and cold!
Oh, desert of the heart!

We long for love, we think the heavens are rude,
The future looks all cloud and storm and rain,
And fierce against the barriers that exclude
Our bliss we strike, but seem to strike in vain.
Oh, desert of the heart!

Illusions! Run, oh frank and bounding youth!
There at two paces is the bush in flower;
No more the desert. But for age, in sooth,
Is there a white-rose bush, or jasmine bower,
Oh, desert of the heart!

Bitter delays and longings unattained!
Oh! say, beyond the sands and frowning mountains,
Dim in the distance to our weak eyes strained,
Is there not hid some Vaucluse with its fountains,
Oh! desert of the heart?
—Toru Dutt.

MISCELLANEOUS READING.

KIPPLE GRANGE.

Mr. Pixley was a real estate agent. Mr. Pixley had had a goodly number of houses on his list in his time, but never one so persistently, unalterably, perseveringly on his list as Kipple Grange. Year after year it had figured on his books as a "Desirable Country Residence, to be had on Reasonable Terms;" year after year it still hung hopelessly on his hands.

Nor was Mr. Pixley the only real estate agent who had wrestled, so to speak, with Kipple Grange. Other land brokers and rent collectors had had their "try" at it, with equally unsatisfactory results. It had been advertised in newspapers, and pasted up on bulletin-boards, and still it remained "Kipple Grange—To Let."

"Hang the old place!" said Mr. Pixley, vehemently scratching his bald head. "I wish it would burn down, or blow away, or something! It's a disgrace to a business man to keep such an eye-sore on his list. I've a great mind to put old Miss Briggs into it, to keep it in order until I can get a better tenant. She wants a place cheap. I'll let her have Kipple Grange for nothing."

So when Miss Briggs came tiptoeing into the real estate office—a faded, melancholy little old maid, leading her terrier dog by its string, and wearing a green veil to neutralize the spring winds—Mr. Pixley told her that Kipple Grange should be hers, for the present at least.

"You'll probably find it lonely," said he.

"I dote on the country," said Miss Briggs.

"And very much out of repair," he added.

"I don't doubt but that it will do for me," said the little old spinster, her faded eyes brightening.

"Probably, also, there's a ghost about the premises," jocosely uttered the agent.

Miss Briggs shook her head with a sad smile. "It's live people I am afraid of," said she, "not dead ones."

"Well," said Mr. Pixley, "Kipple Grange shall be yours this quarter, if you'll fix up the garden a little, and give the place a lived-in sort of look. Of course it will be for sale, and I shall expect you to do your best for our interests."

And Miss Briggs courtesied, and said, "Yes, she would," and withdrew, greatly elated in spirits.

Upon the same day, the twenty-fifth of April, Mr. Beggarall, the real estate agent of Dorchester, let Kipple Grange to old Mr. Hyde, who was a naturalist and a botanist and an etomologist, to say nothing of half a dozen other ists, and who wanted a quiet country home, with woods and meadows in its vicinity, wherein to prosecute his beloved sciences. And MacPherson & Co., of Long Island, made a bargain with the Reverend Mr. Bellairs, an invalid clergyman, who was in search of country air and complete repose. Mrs. Bellairs was a pattern housekeeper, and gloried in the prospect of grass bleeching, new-laid eggs, wild raspberries and plenty of plums and apricots for preserving purposes.

And, strangely enough, it occurred to none of the three real estate agents to let the other two know of his action.

"There is never any demand for Kipple Grange," said MacPherson & Co., indifferently.

"I'll write to Pixley and old Mac when I get time," said Beggarall.

"There's no hurry about Kipple Grange," thought Pixley. "If Miss Briggs keeps it from tumbling to pieces she will do very well."

Meanwhile Mrs. Kipple herself, the plump widow whose grandfather on the husband's side had bequeathed her this impracticable piece of property, began to think of running down to look at it herself. "They tell me there's no such thing as letting it," said she; "I've a mind to go down and see for myself. One really pines for the country, now that they are selling lilac blossoms and pansies in the streets; and I'm quite sure that a change of air would do me good. I'll take Dorcas, my maid, and a few cans of peaches and sardines, and we'll picnic at Kipple Grange, just for the fun of the thing."

"It never rains but it pours," saith the ancient proverb; so upon this windy, blooming April day, when the sunny meadow slopes were purpled all over with wild violets, and the yellow narcissus was shaking its golden tassels over the neglected borders of Kipple Grange, the old brick house, which had stood empty for six good years at least, became all of a sudden alive.

It was an ancient mildewed structure on the edge of a wood, an old red house whose front garden, tangled over with rose-briers, and grown with the fantastic trunks of mossy pear trees, and apples that lean almost to the ground, sloped down to the bank of a merry little rivulet. Here the tiger-lilies, lifted their scarlet turbans in the July sunshine, and the clumps of velvety sweet-williams blossomed first and sweetest. Great cream-hearted roses swung against the tumble-down stone wall, and love-in-a-mist, London-pride, and all those rare old-fashioned flowers of our ancestors ran riot, sprawling across the grass-grown paths, and packing themselves into the angles of the fence, where the honeysuckles trailed, and the scarlet poppies looked like drops of blood. The old garden of Kipple Grange was like a horticultural show gone mad at midsummer. And even now it was sweet with tufts of crocus, blue-velvet iris, and daffodils, while at the rear rose up the silent hemlock wood, still and scented and emerald green, in the twilight.

Miss Briggs, with her terrier dog, her bandboxes, and her poor little hair trunks studded with brass nails, had got there early. She had opened the windows to let in the yellow glow of the April sunset, kindled a fire with straight sticks on the deep tiled hearth, and was sitting on a starch-box turned upside down, drinking cold tea and feeding her dog with occasional scraps of canned beef and baker's bread.

"It seems rather lonely here," said the little old spinster to herself, "and the rooms are very large and dreary looking; but I dare say I can hire a little furniture in the village, and the garden is really superb. I never saw such tulip roots in my life. And the little brook twinkling at the foot of the wall is an idyl in itself."

Miss Briggs, who had a good deal of poetry in her starved soul, set down the can, and reached over to look out of the window at the golden western sky.

"So quiet, too!" said she; "so secluded!"

But, to her amazement, even as she looked, she perceived the figure of a stout old gentleman, bald and spectacled, and carrying an immense flat traveling case under his arm, who was picking his way among the rose-briers that lay prone across the path, stopping here and there to examine the growth of silver-green houseleeks on the garden wall.

Miss Briggs, who was somewhat near-sighted, jumped at once to the conclusion that this interloper was a tramp. She hurled the tin can recklessly down into the budding currant bushes.

"Go away!" she cried.

Mr. Hyde peered upward, with one hand back of his ear. "Eh?" said he.

"Or I'll set the dog on you," squeaked Miss Briggs, encouraged by the shrill bark of the terrier.

"Woman," said the scientist, "who are you?"

"I'll let you know," said Miss Briggs, waxing more and more excited in her indignation. "How dare you trespass on my premises?"

"How dare you trespass on mine?" retorted the old gentleman, curtly.

"He's a madman," thought Miss Briggs; and she remembered, with a thrill of terror, that there was no key to the big front door, and that the bolt was rusted into two pieces.

At the same moment the sound of whooping voices was heard through the wide, echoing halls, and three chubby lads rushed hilariously in, tumbling over one another as they came.

"Hurrah!" they shouted; "hurrah! Ain't this a jolly old cavern of a house! My! here's a fire! and here's an old woman!"

Miss Briggs, who had drawn her head in from the window, stared at the three cherry-cheeked invaders, who returned her gaze with interest.

"Boys," said she, severely, "what are you doing here?"

"Why," said Master Bruce Bellairs, aet. eleven, "it's our house. And pa and ma are helping unpack the cart at the south door. And I've got a redbird, and Johnny's got a brood of Brahma chickens in a basket, and Pierre has a monkey."

"But, boys," said Miss Briggs, with a little hysterical laugh, "this is my house."

"No, it ain't," said the three Masters Bellairs in chorus; "it's ours. We've rented it for a year, and pa and ma are unpacking downstairs."

"Is that your pa?" said Miss Briggs, with a sudden inspiration, as she pointed to the old gentleman in the garden, who stood stock-still, like the Egyptian obelisk.

"No, indeed," said Pierre, contemptuously.

"Nothing of the sort," said Johnny.

"Our pa ain't such a guy as that," chuckled Bruce.

"I think I must be asleep and dreaming," said Miss Briggs, as the door opened, and a stout, blooming matron entered upon the scene, with a kerosene lamp in one hand and a basket of carefully packed china in the other, while from her finger depended a bird-cage.

"My good woman," said the Reverend Mrs. Bellairs, "I suppose you have come here to see about a situation. If you can bring good reference as to character—"

"You are entirely mistaken, madam," said Miss Briggs, with energy. "I am here because—"

But at that moment Mrs. Kipple herself, with Dorcas her maid, entered the room. She was a tall, handsome woman, dressed in elegant mourning, and she used an eyeglass as she talked, and somehow she seemed to take up a good deal more room than anybody else. Mrs. Bellairs set down the kerosene lamp and the bird-cage, Miss Briggs' terrier stopped barking, and the three boys instinctively retired behind the starch-box.

"Who are you all?" said Mrs. Kipple, surveying the scene through her eyeglass. "And how came you to be here?"

"I have taken the house," said Miss Briggs, with dignity.

"So have we," said Mrs. Bellairs.

"So have I," declared the bald-headed old gentleman, who had by this time made his way up into the ruby light of Miss Briggs' fire, and stood there, closely hugging his flat traveling case.

"Dear me!" said Mrs. Kipple; "this is very singular! And I have come here because the house wasn't rented at all."

And then ensued a general chorus of explanations, laughter and depreciation, whose general effect was heightened by a single combat between Master Pierre Bellair's monkey and Miss Briggs' terrier.

"What are we to do?" said Miss Briggs, plaintively looking at the hair trunks studded with brass nails.

"Do?" said Mrs. Kipple, briskly—"why there is but one thing to do that I see; the house is big enough for us, and half a dozen families to boot. Let us all live here together."

"I am sure I have no objection at all," said Mrs. Bellairs.

"Neither have I," said the old gentleman, setting down his flat traveling case with a sigh of relief.

"'Birds in their little nest agree,'" quoted the Reverend Mr. Bellairs, who had by this time entered upon the scene, with one joint of a bedstead balanced across his shoulder. "And it really seems to me as if we might do the same thing."

So Kipple Grange was let, and good, earnest Mrs. Kipple and Dorcas established themselves in two sunny rooms giving to the south, where the apple boughs brushed against the lozenge-shaped panes of the casement. The Bellairs family settled down all over the rest of the first floor in a miscellaneous, cosmopolitan sort of way, mixing up birds, old china, sermon-paper, patchwork and theology in a manner which amazed the precise soul of gentle Miss Briggs. The scientific man perched himself on the top floor, where he could have a good outlook with his telescope, and set up his cases of specimens without let or hinderance. And Miss Briggs herself made a home-like little house on the second story, and devoted her whole energy—and not without some degree of success—to keeping the peace between Chico, the monkey, and Nip, the terrier.

Mrs. Kipple, however, got tired of rural felicity, and returned to the city in the autumn.

Mr. Bellairs received a call to a Delaware parish, where peaches were thicker than blackberries, and the climate was soft as that of Italy, and he accepted it promptly.

"What shall we do now?" said Miss Briggs, who was disposed to take a timorous view of things.

Mr. Hyde pushed his spectacles on to the top of his head. "Don't you like the house?" said he.

"Yes," Miss Briggs admitted. "I like the house."

"And don't you consider the situation salubrious?"

"Certainly," said Miss Briggs.

"Then," said Mr. Hyde, looking at the edge of his geological hammer, "why don't you stay here?"

"What, all alone by myself?" said Miss Briggs.

"No," said the scientific gentleman; "with me!"

"Good gracious!" cried Miss Briggs.

"We both like the place," said Mr. Hyde. "We like the situation, and we like each other. Why shouldn't we settle down here for life?"

"But I never have thought of such a thing," said Miss Briggs, in trepidation.

"Think of it now," said Mr. Hyde, in accents of scientific persuasion, as he laid down his hammer and took her black-mitted hand tenderly in his.

And Mr. Bellairs married them before he went away, and Kipple Grange has never been to let since.—Harper's Bazar.

HANDS OUT OF YOUR POCKETS.

To begin with, it does not look well when a young man crooks his arms and thrusts his hands into his pockets, making a figure 8 of himself, and then stands up against the sunny side of a house, like a rooster in December.

How would the girls look all turned into 8's, and leaning against the wall? How would your mother look in that posture? Catch her doing it! You do not find her hands in her pockets. Your mother's hands while you are loafing, are hands that sew and bake, and stew and fry, and sweep and darn, and nurse; but she does not sink them in her pockets, and then loll against a building.

Are your hands cold? Warm them up at the end of the hoe-handle and the scythe; swing the hammer, drive the plane, flourish the axe. There is untold caloric about a spade, a trowel, a wrench.

Besides, pocket-heat is not profitable. Have you money there, though? Are your pockets the safes in which you have hidden treasures; and are your hands the bolts that secure the safe-door? Money may be there to-day, but it will not be a guest over to-morrow night. An idler's money is apt to leap out of his pocket. It is likely to go for a pipe, a cigar, a tobacco-plug, a mug of ale. There is no money in pocket-warming. Girard did not keep his hands in his pockets; Astor did not keep his hands in his pockets; Benjamin Franklin, Horace Greeley and Cornelius Vanderbilt were not pocket-warmers.

Take your hands out of your pockets, young man. You are losing time. Time is valuable. People feel it at the other end of the line, when death is near and eternity is pressing them into such small quarters, for the work of this life craves hours, days, weeks, years. If those at this end of the line, if youth with its abundance of resources, would only feel that time was precious! Time is a quarry. Every hour may be a nugget of gold. It is time in whose invaluable moments we build our bridges, spike the iron rails to the sleepers, launch our ships, dig our canals, run our factories. You might have planted twenty hills of potatoes while I have been talking to you, young man. Take your hands out of your pockets.

The world wants those hands. The world is not dead—asleep under the Pyramids, a mummy by the Nile. The world is alive, wide awake, pushing, struggling, going ahead. The world wants those hands. You need not take them out of America; they can find a market here at home. The country wants those hands, selling dry goods in New York, cradling wheat in Minnesota, raising cotton in Alabama, weaving cloth in Lowell, picking oranges in Florida, digging gold in Colorado, catching mackerel from the deck of a down-East fishing-smack. Take your hands out of your pockets.

And what a laudable thing it is to meet the wants of society, and do your best! When you are an old man, what an honorable thing your hand will be? Did you ever think of the dignity investing the wrinkled hand of an old worker? It has been so useful, has lifted so many burdens and wrought in such honorable service! Who wants a hand without a character when old age comes—a soft, flabby, do-nothing hand!

You are willing to work, you say, but cannot find anything to do! Nothing to do! Do the first thing that come along. Saw wood, get in coal, go on errands; in short, do anything honest with your hands, but do not let them loaf in your pockets.—Golden Days.

HOW POSTAGE STAMPS ARE MADE.

In printing, steel plates are used, on which two hundred stamps are pressed with large rolling hand presses. After the small sheets of paper, upon which the two hundred stamps are engraved, have dried enough, they are sent into another room and gummed. The gum used for this purpose is of peculiar composition, made of the powder of dried potatoes, and other vegetables, mixed with water. This paper is of a peculiar texture, somewhat similar to that used for bank notes. After having been dried, this time on little racks which are fanned by steam power for about an hour, they are put in between sheets of pasteboard and pressed in hydraulic presses, capable of applying a pressure of two thousand tons. Two men are kept hard to work covering them with colored inks, and passing them to a man and girl, who are kept busy at printing. The next thing is to cut the sheets in half, each sheet, of course, when cut, containing a hundred stamps. This is done by a girl, with a large pair of shears, cutting by hand being preferred to that of machinery, which method would destroy too many stamps. They are then passed to other squads, who, in as many operations, perforate the paper between the stamps. Next they are pressed once more, and then packed and labeled, preparatory to being put in mail bags for despatching to fulfill orders. If a single stamp is torn, or in any way mutilated, the whole sheet of one hundred stamps is burned. Five hundred thousand are burned every week from this cause. During the process of manufacturing, the sheets are counted eleven times.

A woman who has been married in this township within the past three weeks, took her husband a week on trial before she married him. She was perfectly satisfied with him at the end of the week, and concluded to have him for life.—Deckertown Independent. But suppose the husband hadn't been satisfied with the experiment. What then?

A FEW WORDS TO THE BOYS.

Don't trouble yourself about the details of your business. Leave small things to small minds. You were born to be on top, and of course a way will be provided for getting you there.

If you would make your mark in the world, never learn to write.

Do you wish to be men? Learn to chew, smoke and drink. It will be hard to distinguish you from the genuine article.

Always bear in mind that you are made of superior clay, and it will not be long ere everybody will be finally forced to admit it.

It is well for you to know that the girls are all dying for you. You cannot but pity them, but then it is not your fault. This should teach you resignation.

Strive to get all the leisure time you can. It will make older and busier people envy you.

Speak your mind freely. It shows that you possess such an article.

Characterize as nonsense everything that you don't understand. You will find quite a great deal of such nonsense in the world.

Never fear to do wrong. Don't be a coward. Always do the right thing—when the right thing will pay.

When you have anything to do, don't hurry about doing it. Take your own time, or your employer's, which is the same thing. If he discharges you, you will have the satisfaction of knowing that he will be the loser by not having your valuable services.

Make acquaintances only among those beneath you, if you can find such. It is pleasant to be looked up to as an oracle or pattern.

Shun those who are able to teach you anything in life or business. It is not agreeable to be overshadowed by anybody. Besides, who wants to be in school all his life?

Be above politeness. That will do well enough for women and children; but a man, you know, should despise all such foolishness.

People who talk about sticking to principle are humbugs or ninnies. Never mind principle where money is to be made.

Never stop to consider. Make up your mind at once. It shows promptitude of decision.

Having once made up your mind, stick to your decision. People may call you an obstinate mule, but words harm nobody. If you are pig-headed, others may suffer, but you never.

Stand up for your rights, especially among women and timid folks. You may yield a point where the other party is stronger than you are.

Watch carefully over your passions. A man without passions would be a dull creature.

Don't be too squeamish about telling the truth. It is only the ninnyheads who never lie.

Endure others' trials patiently.

Fight life's battles in the easiest way. Remember, it is the sutler and not the soldier, who makes money out of the war.

Never injure your health by hard work. If you must lose youre health, lose it in a pleasant way.

Honor your father and your mother by showing them how much wiser you are than they. You can do this in no easier way than by rejecting all their counsel and admonition.

Take every occasion to denounce religion and morality as humbugs and shams, and everybody who upholds them as hypocrites and impostors. Every one loves a frank, open nature.

Believe all your hear derogatory of another's character. The Bible, you know, says that mankind is naturally depraved.

If you hear anything against a person, repeat it to all you can. It is well to put people on their guard.

In the company of ladies, talk freely of liquor saloons, ballet girls and poker playing. Ladies naturally take to such young gentlemen. They are so interesting, you know.

Don't go to church, if you can avoid it, but if you must go, take care to show your intelligent contempt for the worshippers.

Follow these few directions, boys, and you will at least attain a high place in the world. It may be the gallows, but it will be a high place, nevertheless.—Boston Transcript.

MODERN COURTSHIP.

"And you really love me dearly?" he asked, as he coiled his arm around her wasp-like system. "And you'll always love me so?"

"Always, Frederick; ever so."

"And you pledge me to sew but—"

"Sir!"

"You pledge me to so beautify my life that it will always be as happy as now?"

"With my last breath, Frederick."

"And, darling, you will mend my soc—"

"Your what, sir."

"You will mend my social ways and draw me upward and onward to a better existence?"

"It will be the pride of my love so to do, Frederick; I will sacrifice all for your complete happiness."

"I know that, sweetheart. But suppose in the fullness of time some accident should happen to—to—say the you—"

"You forget yourself, sir. To the what?"

"To the trousseau; would it defer the hour that makes you mine?"

"Never, Frederick; I am yours, mind and heart, and naught can separate us."

"But what I want to say is, that should my pant—"

"Begone, sir, what do you mean?"

"Hear me, my life. I say if my panting bosom should grow cold in death, would your love still warm it?"

"As the sun melts the Iceberg, Frederick, so would the rays of my affection thrill your heart again."

"And you will care for me ever, my soul, and I for you, for though I may never have a shir—"

"Enough. Leave me forever."

"But listen. Though I may never have a shirking disposition, I shall sometimes, perhaps, in the struggle for life, forget the plain duty—"

"And I'll remind you of it, Frederick, in tender actions, and make the duties of existence so pleasant of performance that to avoid them will be pain."

And so on. That's modern courtship. Lots of abstract gwash, but a manifest disinclination to contemplate such conveniences as buttons, socks, trousers and shirts.—Brooklyn Eagle.

THE following gem of truth is clipped from the New Haven Register: "Does a man ever go into a grocery store and say 'I'll give you five cents a pound for sugar,' and expect to be treated with respect? Not at all. He asks the price of sugar, and pays what is asked, or goes without. But the same man will offer a price 20 per cent. below rates for a given space in the advertising columns of a newspaper, and feels offended because it is not taken."

ONWARD! DEMOCRATS!

The Democratic party, although not in national authority, occupies a stronger position to-day than it has for years.

Deprived of the fruits of victory in the two last Presidential elections, which justly belonged to it, our brave old party has lost nothing in honor and sacrificed no principles.

It stands in battle array, ready as ever to defend the rights of the people.

The secret political history of the past five years is becoming public, and the people are learning why and how Tilden and Hancock were formally defeated.

The more that is studied, higher will Democracy rise in popular estimation and lower sink its adversaries. The people now plainly see that proposed Democratic measures were for the general welfare, and that charges so artfully concocted and industriously circulated against the integrity of the Democratic party had origin, not in truth, but solely in unprincipled political opposition.

That is growing more and more manifest.

The Democratic party is destined to wield governing power at the National Capitol.

The means used in 1876 and 1880 to prevent its legitimate success cannot be repeated.

ONWARD! DEMOCRATS!

ELECTRIC.

In 1844, only thirty-seven years ago, the first telegraph line was constructed in the United States between Washington and Baltimore, a distance of about forty miles, and its inaugural message as sent by Professor Morse bore these words—"What hath God wrought."

It is interesting to compare that humble telegraphic beginning with present gigantic results.

It was with extreme difficulty Professor Morse obtained from Congress a small appropriation to aid him in opening electric communication between the cities named. Members generally looked upon the proposition as throwing public money away to gratify the whim of a mere scientific experimenter, and some based outspoken opposition upon their own belief, that the idea of transmitting language along pole stretched wires for the lengthy distance of forty miles was an utter impossibility, a thing that could not be done. There were, however, other Congressmen who had confidence in the theory of Morse, and desiring to see it fairly tested, advocated public financial assistance, which, after a stubborn fight, was finally granted and the pioneer telegraphic line in America erected.

That was only thirty-seven years ago, and what has the experiment grown to be in fact?

Marvelous is a fitting reply.

The forty miles of telegraphic wire Professor Morse strove so hard to make operative have gone on rapidly increasing, until now, four hundred thousand miles cover our own country, and leaving the land flash instantaneous thought to and from foreign realms beneath the surface of the deep and broad Atlantic.

Morse sleeps within the tomb.

His opposers soon became dumb.

His work remains the wonder and the glory of the world.

The people of the United States throughout their wide domain hold immediate converse with each other by means of the electric current, New York talks with London regardless of time and space, and London in like manner greets far off India and Japan.

God hath indeed wrought wonders and his mighty power is unlimited for the future.

Of the fight now on in New York, the Philadelphia Times, one of the best posted papers in the country, is free to say that "If neither of the Republican factions will assent to submit the issue to the people, the shrewdest move the Democrats could make would be to elect Conkling and Kernan. That would give one positive Democratic majority in the Senate, with Conkling ten fold worse than any Democrat for the dominant Republicanism of to-day. In short, it would give the Democrats practically two strong Senators, with the Vice President thrown in. It is evident to all but those who are so party blind that they won't see, that Conkling's failure to be returned to the Senate by the Republicans, makes his future battles outside of his party, with a certainty of the history of the Douglas rebellion of 1858 repeating itself in the overthrow of the ruling political power. These are not the sentimental views of the Conkling struggle in New York, but they are the practical, common sense views of the situation, and that's what everybody must come to sooner or later."

Before Chancellor Runyon, in Newark, last week, an important question was argued as to whether the interest on the income bonds of the Central Railroad of New Jersey accrues on the payment of the closing debt or not until the floating debt is paid and discharged. The argument, which was made for the railroad company by ex-Senator Frelinghuysen, and by Mr. Munn for the bondholders, left the impression that in any event interest on the bonds will soon be paid, and the importance of the question was whether the bonds will be entitled to arrears of interest.

There is already a halt in the Star Route prosecutions. It is announced in the Washington dispatches, apparently by authority, that it has been discovered that the "crowded condition of the Courts" will compel the matter to go over until September, when the next Grand Jury will meet. At the same time it is announced that no other removals will be made in the departments as the result of these investigations. It looks very much as if somebody has been run against unexpectedly.

The situation at Albany remains about the same as last week's report. Conkling still has his 34 votes, with Depew gaining. It is a question of doubt about Messrs. Conkling and Platt being returned to their seats in Washington.

Even the weaker sex refuse to take any stock in the Greenback party. Miss Mary E. Nash, of Des Moines, Ia., who was nominated by the Greenback State Convention last week for the position of State Superintendent of Public Instruction, declines the nomination.

Col. Tom Scott, it is said, left no bequests of a public character in his will. All his property is left to his family and near relatives.

By Mr. Whiton, the following from the Corp. Counsel:

I submit herewith a report of the several actions in my hands now pending and undetermined.

(1.) Union Circuit Court. John Wilson vs. The Inhabitants of the City of Plainfield. An action on the case for $10,000 damages alleged to have arisen in consequence of the construction of the New Street Sewer. Issue joined. Trial will probably take place at the October term.

(5.) State, Patrick J. Flanagan vs. Nelson Runyon, City Judge. Certiorari to review conviction for violation of ordinance. Will probably be argued at November term (1881).

Filed.

By the same, the following:

I herewith submit the following report of the various matters that have been referred to me, or have come into my hands, except such cases as are contained in my report of pending suits also presented at this time.

In the matter of applying for a mandamus against the City Collector in favor of the City Treasurer no steps have been taken for the reason that the questions involved will in all probability be considered in the mandamus proceedings already pending and soon to be considered by the Court.

I have advised the Assessor that the judgments against the City in favor of Boice and Steele, respectively, should be put in the tax levy for the current year.

As to the matter of the judgment in favor of Henry B. Ladlow, against the City of Plainfield and North Plainfield, it has been suggested that a conference be arranged between a Committee of the Common Council and the Township Committee of North Plainfield, with a view to apportioning the liability. This seems to me to be a proper step to take in this matter.

The matter of appealing from the decision of the Supreme Court in the case of Plainfield vs. Runyon has been under consideration but no appeal has been instituted.

The question as to refunding back license fees which was, I think referred to my predecessor, has not been brought to my attention in such a manner as to enable me to form an opinion on the subject. If your honorable body will furnish me with such papers and facts as there are in the case, I will make a report thereon.

Mr. Tyler moved that a committee of three be appointed to confer with North Plainfield authorities, as suggested by Corporation Counsel. Carried.

Pres. appointed as that Com., Messrs. Tyler, Gilbert and Waring.

The com'n was then filed.

The Clerk then read report of City Physician H. H. Lowrie. Filed.

Clerk read his statement relative to the result of Money election held May 2. Filed.

That no progress has yet been made toward the revision and reproduction of the ordinances of the city in printed form, as the Committee had not felt warranted in incurring the expense;

That warrant should be ordered drawn for claim of D. J. Marshall, services on Linfield ave., $125;

That the same course should be pursued with reference to claims of S. J. Burr, $55.33, services on Plainfield Avenue, $125, services on Linfield avenue;

That communication of L. W. Serrell should be returned to him, as the Council has no authority to make the desired offset against taxes;

That measures were being taken by which the judgments of Manning Steele, for $138.15, and of D. J. Boice, for $448.50 would be incorporated in tax levy for 1881.

That the communication of S. B. Merrill be returned to him, for the amount of his claim to be determined before the Council can pay it.

The Pres. stated that action therefore would be taken upon claims of D. J. Marshall and S. J. Burr, and the com'n's of L. W. Serrell and S. B. Merrill.

Mr. Tyler moved that a warrant be ordered drawn in favor of D. J. Marshall, services as com'r on Linnfield ave., $125. Carried. All aye.

By the same, that a warrant be ordered drawn in favor of S. J. Burr, services as com'r on Plainfield ave., $55.33, and also a warrant drawn to his favor of $125, services as com'r on Linnfield ave. Carried. All aye.

On motion, the com'n's of Messrs. Serrell and Merrill were ref'd back as recommended by Law Com.

By Mr. Hamilton, as correct from Police Com., the police claims presented this evening. Ref'd to Aud. Com., for action thereon this evening.

As there was but one of the Aud. Com. present—Mr. H. Smith—no bills could be acted upon in his hands. A question was asked the chairman if the Aud. Com. could not make a report this evening on these claims, as the parties needed the funds very much. The Chair announced that a suspension of the rules could be had, and a report from the Aud. Com. could be made to-night.

Mr. Tyler then moved that the rules be suspended and the Aud. Com. report on Police claims to-night. Seconded.

Mr. Gilbert moved as an amendment that the Aud. Com. report on all bills in their hands. Res. as amended, adopted, and the Aud. Com. to report later in the meeting.

By Mr. Guion, that the Com. on Law & Ords. revise the penal ords. and make such suggestions as they may deem best. Agreed to.

By Mr. A. H. Smith, as correct from Salary Com., the following claims: H. H. Lowrie, $62 50; T. J. Gillies, 5; F. A. Dunham, 5; A. Vanderbeek, 50; Chas. W. Kimball, 75; Levi Hatfield, 5; J. N. Jenkins, 5; L. F. Wadsworth, 5; O. B. Leonard, 2.50; Peter Hoagland, 10; J. C. Seaman, 10; J. B. Miller, 10; B. J. Graves, 8; M. M. Thorn, 5; I. F. Randolph, 5; Amos Moffett, 5. Ref'd to Aud. Com.

By Mr. Guion, as correct from St. Com., claim of St. Com'r Wm. Hand, $75 75. Ref'd to Aud. Com.

By Mr. H. Smith, from Aud. Com., the following claims as correct: Morgan Bird, 2 claims, $2; G. L. Henry, 7 50; G. W. Grant, 2 claims, 7 75; P. Conway, 4; Chas. W. Dodd, 58 34; M. Conway, 4; Rob't Randolph, 20 52; R. J. Walker, 4 41. On motion, warrants were ordered drawn. All aye.

By Mr. Tyler, claim of Magie & Cross, Elizabeth, $160.50. On motion, rules suspended, and claim ref'd to Law & Ord. Com.

The following unfinished business was disposed of, notice of which was given at a late meeting of Council:

Petition for repairs on Central ave. On motion, tabled.

Petition for crosswalk at 9th street and Prospect ave. St. Com'r, on motion of Mr. H Smith, directed to lay said walk.

Ord. relative to cattle being driven through the streets without halter. On motion, tabled.

Claim of A. M. Sayre, work done on Peace street in 1874, $24 50. On motion of Mr. Tyler, warrant was ordered drawn.

Claim of J. R. Oosterhout, surveys on Park ave. in 1878, $75. On motion of Mr. A. H. Smith, warrant ordered drawn.

Mayor's message relative to redistricting city. Mr. Tyler, from Law & Ord. Com., reported progress.

Mayor's message as to street lamps and water supply. Mr. Waring, from Lamp Com., reported that owing to the city's financial condition the Com. had thought it not advisable to make any contract for lighting. Filed.

Mayor's message on taxes, no report.

Mayor's message relative to care of documents belonging to city. Mr. Guion from Printing Com., submitted a proposition of Marvin Safe Co., to furnish a safe placed in Council Chamber for $375. Filed.

Special Com. on Water supply, no report.

No report of Finance Com. on Martine's claim.

Petition for crosswalk on 7th street. Mr. Guion reported the walk laid.

Complaint of S. C. Baker. St. Com., no report.

Clerk to procure list of delinquent taxes, reported progress.

Claim for costs of County Collector, $38.23. Mr. Tyler, from Law & Ord. Com., reported progress.

Special Com. on bills of Collector and Assessor, reported progress.

Mr. Waring moved that when Council adjourn it adjourn to meet two weeks from to-night. Carried.

Mr. Guion moved that the rules be suspended in order that Aud. Com. report on claim of St. Com'r Wm. Hand, $75 75, this evening, as Mr. H. was in need of the money. Carried.

Mr. Gilbert moved that the rules be suspended so that all bills in the Aud. Com's hands be acted upon this evening. Carried. Mr. Whiton voting no. This gentleman gave as his reason for thus voting that he did not believe in paying bills the same evening they are presented, as it did not give the Aud. Com. the time they should have to examine claims.

In calling the Unfinished Business, the Pres. stated that he had neglected to mention the com'ns relative to lighting the city by electricity.

The Clerk thereupon read the com'n's and the Pres. called Mr. H. Smith to the chair. The Pres. then proceeded to inform the Council of the conversation had with a gentleman connected with one of the electric light companies; he thought it would be a good idea to light the city of Plainfield by electricity, provided it did not cost too much. He made mention of the poor quality of gas furnished the city by the Plainfield Gas Co., and the high price charged therefor. He would move that the com'ns from the Brush and Weston electric light companies be ref'd to Lamp Com. Seconded.

After some further remarks by Councilmen Waring, Finch and Hamilton, the motion of Mr. Whiton prevailed.

By Mr. H. Smith, from Aud. Com., under suspension of the rules, reported the following claims as correct: George W. Townley, $25.42; T. J. Pruden, 30; A. T. Shotwell, ag't, 15; Peter Langenbahn, 6; Ann Flynn, 8; David Hand, 145.70; J. C. & J. M. Crane, 5.59; A. Vanderbeek, 50; H. H. Lowrie, 62.50; Wm. Hand, 75.75; Chas. Kimball, 75, and the claims for room rent, clerks, judges and inspectors of the late money election. On motion, report received and warrants ordered drawn for the several amounts.

On motion, Council then adjourned.

Judge Harper.

COMMENTS OF THE PRESS.

Ex-Mayor Harper of Plainfield, has been appointed Lay Judge, to fill the vacancy caused by the death of Judge Bowne. Mr. Harper was sworn in this morning.

The appointment was a surprise to many. Mayor Harper is a Democrat—thus making the Court entirely Democratic—but is a man so greatly respected, that he was elected Mayor in Republican Plainfield, on a citizen's ticket. He is widely known and very highly spoken of. He is connected, as Secretary, with a large insurance company of New York. Judge Harper will take his seat on Monday next.—Elizabeth Journal.

Governor Ludlow has done a highly commendable act in appointing ex-Mayor Nathan Harper, of Plainfield, Judge of the Court of Common Pleas, to fill the unexpired term of Judge Bowne, deceased. Mr. Harper is very widely known as an intelligent gentleman of the old school, and will prove an honor to the position to which he has been summoned. In making the appointment Governor Ludlow has followed the precedent established by the Republicans years ago, when they made the bench not only of this county but of nearly every county in the State solidly Republican. The appointment of Mr. Harper gives general satisfaction throughout the entire county, and among the numerous names spoken of in connection with the judgeship, none was more worthy. Judge Bowne has indeed an excellent successor. Of course the Republicans are not to be pacified.—Elizabeth Herald.

Ex-Mayor Harper, of this city, was honored last week by Governor Ludlow, by being appointed Lay Judge of Union County, to fill out the term of the late Judge Bowne. The honor was well bestowed. Mr. Harper is one of the worthiest of our citizens, and in politics represents the best side of the Democratic party. Several candidates for the position were in the field, and among those who presented strong petitions was Justice Nedyne, who is a Republican, and it was thought by many that a Republican would be selected, as the late Judge was a member of that party. But the wonder is, that the appointment came to Plainfield at all, as we are generally left out in the cold when the honors for the county are being distributed around. Judge Harper took his seat on the bench last Monday.—Central Times.

TUBULAR HOT-BLAST NON-EXPLOSIVE
Oil or Gas Stoves!
THE REASONS WHY THE TUBULAR HOT-BLAST OIL OR GAS STOVE IS SUPERIOR TO ALL OTHERS:
Its appearance is more like a stove than anything that has yet been offered.
It requires no wire gauze or water tank to make it safe.
A constant current of air passes to the burners over the Oil Pot, preventing the oil from getting hot or the gas in the atmosphere in which it is burning. The bake oven is not in the way of the kettle or boiler.
Baking, roasting, and boiling can all be done at once, and in less time than with any other oil stove.
The No. 3 or Three Burner Stove will make 12 inches of pure white flame at a cost of 1¼ cts per hour. The reservoir holds four quarts of oil, sufficient to burn for twelve hours.
The No. 1 or 2 Burner Stove will make 16 inches of white flame at a cost of 2 cents per hour.
The reservoir holds 3 quarts of oil sufficient to burn for twelve hours.
The No. 3 Stove will consume between three and four cents worth of gas per hour.
The No. 4 will consume between four and five cents worth of gas per hour.

THE store of Dunn Bros., at New Market, was broken into one night last week and robbed of a quantity of goods and a small sum of money. DON'T forget the open air Festival of the Congregationalists in the big tent at Madison avenue and Eighth street, on Tuesday and Wednesday of next week. THE theatrical entertainment that was announced recently to be given at Van Deventer Hall for the benefit of the Plainfield Society of St. Vincent de Paul, has been postponed until the Fall. In the evening the Grove will be brilliantly illuminated.

REFORMER Barick has been expelled from the Reformed Church of America.

THE Trinity Reformed Church will get the better of the weather's vagaries by its decision to have no fair, festival, picnic or excursion.

THE weather, which has succeeded lately in interfering with everything, compelled the entertaining of the Band of Hope at the Holly Tree Inn, on Saturday afternoon, instead of upon the lawn at the residence of Mrs. Jos. W. Yates, as was intended.

A SUPPOSED rabid dog ran through the streets of Somerville one day last week and bit several other valuable dogs, among which was Mr. Alpheus S. Munday's valuable pointer dog "Rover." Mr. M. immediately had his pet killed, greatly to his regret as well as that of many friends.

COMMENCING next Sunday and until further notice, a short responsive and most interesting service commencing at 5 o'clock p. m., will be held at the Crescent avenue Presbyterian Church. The Rev. Sam'l. H. Hall D. D., of the Seaman's Friend Society of New York, a cause in which all are interested, will preach at the above church next Sunday morning.

THADDEUS DRAKE, an old resident of New Brooklyn, died suddenly on Saturday last. Mr. Drake was for many years the mail carrier between this city and New Brooklyn. His funeral occurred from the First Baptist church, at Samptown, of which congregation he was a deacon, on Wednesday, June 8th, and was very largely attended, Rev. A. Armstrong, pastor, preaching the funeral sermon.

AGAIN a terrible example and warning to those reckless ones who catch on railroad cars has occurred. A lad of about 12 years of age named Hays, and resided at Roselle, had both legs severed from his body when endeavoring to climb on a moving coal train, at the water tanks near Bound Brook, on Wednesday last. He was at once removed to his home in a critical condition, where he died on Wednesday night at half-past ten o'clock.

MR. D. W. Littell is appointed the agent in Plainfield and vicinity for the Tubular, Hot-Blast, Oil or Gas stoves that have been so successfully introduced for the past year all over the country. It is probably the best and most improved construction, and its perfect working is being witnessed every day by numbers who stop at Mr. Littell's establishment on North avenue. Further particulars may be learned from the advertisement elsewhere.

JUDGE Harper, ex-City Judge P. P. Good, with Prof. Gross, Principal, made a tour of inspection of our public schools Thursday morning last. The visitors expressed themselves as highly pleased with the workings of the various departments of the school. It is the intention of Mr. Good to give through these columns next week, ideas and expressions regarding the management and working system of schools in this and foreign countries through which he has recently travelled.

THE first case before the Court of Common Pleas, after the accession of ex-Mayor Harper to its bench, was that of Wilcox vs Martine. The suit was for extra services claimed by the plaintiff to have been rendered the defendant on building contracts. The justice court had already given the plaintiff $200, and upon the defendant's appeal to the Court of Common Pleas and a jury, the decision was sustained. Messrs. Butts & Trimmer for Wilcox, and Suydam & Maxson for Martine. A stay of proceedings was had, and the case will go to the Supreme Court.

Bicycle Club.

Almost every city in the United States as well as Europe now has its bicycle club formed for pleasure and enjoyments, and New Brunswick, not to be behind, organized her club a few evenings since, and at a meeting held recently elected the following officers: President, D. H. Merritt; Captain, Peter V. Dumont; Treasurer and Secretary, Elliott Mason.

The name of the organization will be "The New Brunswick Bicycle Club." It already has a number of members, all of whom own machines, as none but those are eligible to membership.—New Brunswick Times.

Leland-Godown.

A large number of our residents gathered in the First Baptist Church, on Wednesday afternoon, to attend the wedding ceremony that bound together Mr. Henry Leland, formerly of this city and now engaged in business in Chicago, and Miss E. F. Godown. Mr. David Lyon the organist of the church manipulated the keys and stops, Mr. Stephen Vail and a brother of the groom acted as ushers, while to the Rev. Dr. Yerkes was delegated the office of tying the nuptial knot. Everything passed off pleasantly—as it deserved to—five minutes was sufficient to make the two, one, and on the following morning they departed for their future home in Chicago.

The World's Fair.

The New York World's Fair is pronounced dead very definitely. The trouble was that the proposition came so soon after the other fair that public interest could not be aroused.—Elizabeth Journal.

With sincere appreciation of journalistic courtesy and a regard for our contemporary's general accuracy, we are still impelled to remark that the paper quoted above is, for once, decidedly mistaken. The World's Fair is assured (as will be made public in due time) and its success may be credited as a result of the untiring energies and labors of Wm. A. Cole Esq., and Col. Meyer Asch.

The Netherwood's Staff.

The Hotel Netherwood is being put into shape for its opening on the 15th inst., with every prospect before it of a still more successful season than any previous one. The property having been purchased from Messrs. Pommeroy & Plummer by a gentleman who is credited with being a wealthy capitalist, there is no reason to fear that the lavish expenditure always shown by the former owners for their guest's benefit, will be curtailed by the new one. The manager will be the same, efficient gentleman as last year—Mr. Chas. H. King. Mr. H. W. Haskell will be the Clerk; Mr. R. W. Raynor, of the St. James of Boston, Steward; and the Chef, Lewis Emanuel Prado, formerly at the Parker House, Boston, Mass.

A North Plainfield Dog Case.

On Saturday last, at Blatz's Hotel, before Justice McLoughlin, was tried the case of Collector Isaac Brokaw against Mr. Lewis Sprague of Duer street. Mr. George P. Suydam appeared for the plaintiff and Mr. Wm. B. Maxson for the defendant in the suit, which was brought to recover damages sustained by Mr. Brokaw's dog at the hands of Mr. Sprague's gun. It was claimed by the defendant, that the dog of the plaintiff was trespassing upon his (the defendant's) property and the shooting therefore justifiable. But it was proven by witnesses that the animal was in an adjoining lot of Mr. P. M. French's and shown by the law that under the circumstances no man had a right to shoot another's dog even when upon his premises. The jury consisting of Messrs Chas. E. Vermeule, Adolph Korman, Wm. Allen, John Woodland, Harvey Bird and John Allen, gave a verdict for the plaintiff amounting to $15 and costs. The case will be appealed.

The Muhlenberg Bazaar.

In spite of rain both present and prospective, the Bazaar at Van Deventer Hall on Wednesday and Thursday evenings, for the benefit of the Muhlenberg Hospital furnishing fund, was largely attended and correspondingly successful. Each of the different churches of the city with two exceptions, were represented with tables attended by the flower of their respective flocks and loaded with everything useful from a hem-stitched handkerchief to a worsted shawl, and every trifle from a doll's wash-tub to an orguinette. The usual flower-bower and the customary refreshment tables were, of course, prominent features, and the attendants upon them, clad in pink and azure and gauzy white, reaped rich reward for their exertions from the pockets of the generous. The orchestra, from which so much was expected, exceeded all that was promised and greatly added to the interest and enjoyment of the affair. In addition to those performers whom we mentioned in our last, was secured the services of Mr. Chas. H. Rogers, late of Niblo's orchestra and now engaged at one of our pharmacies, whose ability on the piccolo and flute greatly added to the general efficiency of the music. Mr. Clark W. Evans is to be most sincerely congratulated upon his success as a trainer of instrumental performers. The combined efforts of those churches who lent their presence and aid to the bazaar will result in financial benefit, and with the collection for the same purpose that will be made at the First Baptist church next Sunday and the $20 subscribed by the Congregationalists last Sunday, form a satisfactory sum towards the completion of the Hospital.

A Buggy Run Over.

Mr. Wm. Hedden while crossing Front street at the corner of Somerset on Monday afternoon, stepped between the spokes of the hind wheel of Mr. Abraham Lucky's buggy and was instantly astonished by being revolved through the air and flung on the ground. The vehicle was stopped and a hack sent for, in which the unfortunate man was taken to his home. The Lucky escape will impel him to be more careful in future as to where he walks when Hedden across the street.

Trotting on the Fourth.

The Board of Directors of the Union and Middlesex Counties' Mutual Agricultural Association was held at the Mansion House, this city, Wednesday evening last, at which the principal matter discussed was that pertaining to the trotting on the Association's Grounds, July 4th. On that day they will offer a purse of $300 for 2:30 class of horses; $150 to 1st, $90 to second, $60 to third. Also a purse of $200 to 2:45 class. $100 to 1st, $60 to second and $40 to third. The entries will close at the Mansion House, 11 o'clock, P. M., on Monday, June 20th.

Sudden Death.

Probably no young man was more generally known or highly respected in our city than Mr. E. C. Hoagland of West Front street, whose death on Monday afternoon was to a certain degree sudden and especially lamentable. A graduate of the P. H. S., and an earnest worker in the meetings of the First Presbyterian Church, he was particularly blessed with many sincere friends and admirers. His decease was the result of an attack of typhoid fever, which, however, did not indicate its presence until a week or so before its culmination in peritonitis and consequent death. A post mortem was held by Drs. Probasco and Hart, for the satisfaction of all concerned that the course of treatment pursued was the proper one and that the result could not have been prevented.

The Board of Education.

The School Trustees of Plainfield—with the exception of Dr. Stillman who was absent from the city—met in regular meeting at the High School, on Monday evening last. Applications from the present teachers for reappointment were received, and other routine business transacted. But one official notice of retirement is before the Board—that of Miss Stevens—although there is a probability of another. A petition signed by a number of parents of scholars was read, requesting that only one session should be held "during the present hot weather." As the latter clause was inapplicable, and a resolution had already been passed by the Board authorizing the President to dismiss the school at the close of its morning session whenever the weather was oppressive, the petition was filed without other action. The Board then adjourned for one week, when final arrangements relating to the Commencement exercises will be made.

Clear the Corners.

There was passed at a recent session of the State Legislature, an act, sometimes called "The Corner Loafer Act," which seems never to have been carried into effect in this city. It is a disgrace to Plainfield, and long has been, that gangs of loafers in different guises are allowed to stand on our corners (especially at Front street and Park avenue, to the discomfort, and worse, of orderly pedestrians. Ladies cannot pass without obscene remarks or profanity being indulged in, clouds of tobacco smoke are wafted in their faces, and pools of tobacco juice are provided for them to wade through. No citizen seems to have the courage to make a formal complaint, the police force seems inadequate, and the evil continues. In Jersey City, a few evenings since, the Chief of Police hit upon a plan for which he should be heartily thanked, although he performed no more than his duty. He ordered forty of the men under his command to patrol the streets in which the loafers congregated. They went in citizens clothes, and came back well laden. They arrested seventy young men, each of whom was fined ten dollars.

Captain Dodd has not forty men at his disposal, and is not able to engage in the task of thinning out the loafers by the wholesale; but he can make some sort of a move, arrest one or two as an example, and the penalties imposed will serve as a warning to the others.

The Park Avenue Festival.

Unpleasant weather proved, to some extent, disastrous to the deserved success of the Festival held in the Park avenue Baptist church on Wednesday and Thursday evenings of last week. Preparations unusually extensive had been made and money generously expended towards the completion of what was a most attractive affair, but the elements combined to interfere with such a lavish patronage as was justly expected. The first evening was one of unceasing storm, and the steady down fall of the dampest kind of rain reduced the attendance to a few hundreds. The chapel was thrown open to the promenaders and their enjoyment of Eben's orchestrations, while in the parlors above inviting waiter-girls supplied tempting refreshments to the patrons of their cozy tables. In the centre of the main floor was erected a bower from which Brower's button-bouquets were pressed upon the susceptible and unwary; and in adjoining alcoves imperishable trifles and lemonade (with lemon juice in it) were to be had by paying for them. Thursday evening—of which much better things were expected—was hardly an improvement on the one preceding. To be sure it did not rain, but it was too chilly to create an insatiable appetite for the profitable ice cream, although at times every seat and every waiter in the refreshment room were occupied. Many gathered to enjoy the beautiful music and did so, in spite of the fact that the intermissions were so frequent and lengthy as to prevent the hearing of the entire programme during "seasonable" hours. The managers would have extended the Festival another evening, but having no way of informing the public of such intention, were compelled to accept the results of the weather's contrariness.

The Ball and Bat.

Quite an interesting game of base-ball was played on the Fourth street grounds, last Saturday afternoon, by the Potter Press Work's nine and one selected from the Hose boys of No's 1 and 2 Engine companies. There was some delay at the start caused by the non-arrival of some of the members, and, as it was, the Hose 9 was compelled to fill the places of two of its best men, who failed to appear, with others. The Potters won the toss and chose the field, sending their opponents to the bat where three runs were scored as a start for the Hose boys. The Potters then took a turn and did one better, Quass bringing in himself and two others with a magnificent three-base hit. In this inning Conway captured a long fly batted by Miller. During the second inning Snedeker pitched to Voorhees' catching, Moore gracefully snatched a fly and the score at the close stood a tie of seven each. The third resulted in a white wash for both—Young and Murphy taking Miller's and Andrew's flies, and Leland who was behind the bat, making the best catch of the day—a foul knocked by Buckley. In the beginning of the fourth inning Clark was put out on first base by a beautiful play of Buckley and Flynn, and the Hose boys retired with one run. The fifth resulted in the same manner, the Potters then got in their heavy work, and seven runs were scored before an out. The Hose boys seemed to be all demoralized and indulged in the wildest throwing imaginable. Conway, Voorhees and Clark muffed an easy fly each, and Young on 2nd base made errors incalculable. The latter, however, made up for some of his faults by a double play, catching Dowd out on a fly and touching Quass who left his base. Six more runs followed, until Snedeker caught Carty's pop-up and the inning closed with the Potters just 13 ahead. The Hose boys by this time were too discouraged to retrieve the game, but bravely played it out in a manner that showed what they can do next time. They were most unfortunate in many ways, besides having thirteen left on bases. A need of one captain instead of eight was also noticeable. The Potters were able to make a double play on Clark and Moore in the eighth inning for this reason. Clark knocked a fly which was caught just as Moore started to run from the first base. Immediately eight hose boys began to yell at the top of their lungs, and Moore thinking they were urging him on, made his third base before he found that he was out on the first. On the other hand the Potters played a remarkably fine game throughout. Their catcher Burns is a treasure, but so is Snedeker of the Hose boys to a certain extent. The boys want organization, with one captain and two or three men members, and they can then hope to vanquish their victors of Saturday. The following is the score:

Vennor's Third Attempt at June.

Under date of 2d inst. Mr. H. G. Vennor, of Montreal, gives his third series of "predictions" for the current month of June: "Cool and cloudy generally, with frequent rain-falls up to the 9th or 10th; an occasional warm day, and frosts probable about the 7th and 8th. On the 10th, 11th, and 12th there will be a storm period, with muggy weather, hail and thunder storms; on the 13th and 14th, fair Summer weather, with cool nights; 15th to the 18th, cool, unsettled, showery weather; 19th and 20th, warmer, with increasing heat, up to the 25th; 25th to 28th, a storm period, with sultry weather; on the 29th and 30th, cooler, with change in the weather. The foregoing forecast will probably hold good for a large portion of the United States."

Game Protection.

A short time since the "New Jersey Game & Fish Protective Society" issued a card containing the "open season" for shooting or capturing game birds and fish, compiled from the laws of the State of New Jersey bearing upon such subject. Complimentary notices have been given the Society in sporting and other papers throughout this and other States, conspicuous among the former of which we may mention the Chicago Field, an excellent journal. It seems, however, that our State papers have forgotten the name of the Society, as we notice that among the many notices given by them, they state that the "Union County Game & Fish Protective Society" are the authors of the aforesaid card of "open seasons." The "sporting" editors, also of said journals, insist on spelling the word "RUFFED" as "ruffled" when speaking of "ruffed grouse," and also forget to mention the fact that the headquarters of the Society are at Plainfield, Union County, N. J. The Secretary's name is W. L. Force, and his address Plainfield, N. J. Spell it RUFFED, brethren, and give the proper address. The table of "open seasons" will be found in our advertising columns.

Plainfield's Sandy Soil.

Dr. Geo. H. Cook, our State Geologist, in his recent annual report gives the following information as to the situation of Plainfield in relation to its soil. He says, referring to the glacial drift in New Jersey: "One of the most marked surface features due to the drift is the long and narrow belt of sand bordering on the south-east, the First Mountain from Scotch Plains to Bound Brook. It can be traced west of the Raritan river to Millstone. Its length, east of the Raritan, is 19 miles, and its average breadth 10 miles. Plainfield, Dunellen and Bound Brook are on it. Wells on Park Avenue, Plainfield, went through 60 feet of loose material before the rock was reached. Here the top is quite pebbly. About Dunellen it is more sandy. The explanation of this belt is at length evident, since the discovery of the terminal moraine, and since the survey of the surface has given the drainage lines. It is the dry bed of a broad stream which flowed from beneath the glacier at the foot of the First Mountain, in a westerly course to the Raritan, near Bound Brook. The Millstone entered the Raritan nearly opposite. The submergence of the land 50 feet in this epoch, according to the terrace heights at Trenton, New Brunswick and on Raritan Bay shore, brought the tide level up the Raritan to its mouth, and for a time it must have mingled its waters with the tides of the river. Green Brook is the existing representative of this ancient river."

Mr. John Becker of the late firm of Becker & Mehl, fruit and confectionery dealers adjoining the post office, started on Wednesday last for Chicago and a probable fortune.

Mr. John H. Evans has donated to the Park avenue Baptist Church, two handsome posts upholding three lights each, to be erected at the main entrance of the church on Park avenue, costing $300.

Mr. H. S. Kimball—brother of our Corporation Counsel—was a member of the "Third Honor Class" of Columbia College at its commencement this year, and received the degree of Bachelor of Arts.

Mr. Thos. A. Wilmurt of New York donated bas-relief copies of Thorwaldsen's "Night" and "Morning" to the Muhlenberg Hospital, which were sold by chance for the benefit of that organization during the late fair.

Announcements are out, to the favored few, of the marriage ceremony of Miss Margaret E. Newhall and Mr. Walter L. Vail, to take place on Wednesday next at three o'clock p. m., in the Holy Innocents Chapel, at New Market.

Mr. Harry Lowry, son of the Rev. Robert Lowry and one whose eloquent preaching has often been listened to by our church-going public, will be ordained to the ministry on Thursday evening next, in the Park avenue Baptist Church.

The choir of the Crescent avenue Church have been so fortunate as to again secure the assistance of the fine soprano voice of Mrs. J. K. Myers. That lady will contribute her vocal powers, to the enjoyment of all, for—it is to be hoped—an indefinite period.

Dr. Chas. W. Scott of Hartford Conn., brother of Col. Julian Scott of this city, has severed his late connection with the Saturday Night on account of professional demands upon his time, and purchased the New England Review which he is at present editing at Hartford.

Mr. Chas. J. Kelly of this city who has been preparing, during the past few weeks, for the priesthood, was ordained by Archbishop Corrigan at St. Patrick's Cathedral at Newark on Tuesday. He will officiate at Mass in St. Mary's Church on Sunday next, for the first time.

The death of Mr. Jacob F. Randolph at his late residence in Washington Valley, on Tuesday, closed the mortal life of an esteemed and admired citizen. The deceased was 69 years of age, and is mourned by a large portion of friends and acquaintances.

At the Annual Commencement of Columbia College, held at the Academy of Music on Wednesday morning, Mr. William Archibald Dunning of this city recited an original latin poem, was rated No. 2 in the "First Honor Class" and had conferred upon him the degree of Bachelor of Arts.

The funeral on Saturday last of Mr. Abraham Smalley, whose sudden death we recorded in our last issue, was probably as largely attended as any that has ever taken place in the county. Hosts of friends gathered to show by their presence their regret for the departed and their sympathy for the remaining family.

Col. Julian Scott has just completed a portrait of Gen'l. W. S. Hancock, which was ordered by the Hon. Joseph W. Yates of this city, and is now engaged on another of the same subject for the Army & Navy Club of New York. The Evening Mail and Express both contained flattering criticisms of the work, in recent issues.

We are in receipt of a copy of the American Register, published at Paris, sent to us by mail from our friend and fellow townsman, Auguste Saltzman, who arrived at Havre, on May 21st. The many friends of "Gus" will be delighted to hear that he experienced a pleasant voyage over the "big pond" in the steamer Amerique.

No more convincing proof of the efficacy of Hudson's Fertilizers can be had than the delicious strawberries that are being picked during this month from plants just set out and grown under the influence of Hudson's nourishing phosphates. We have enjoyed some of the berries, and found them 5 inches in circumference and most finely flavored.

Mr. Joseph C. Ohl, who has been engaged in business in the South for some months past, returned to this city on Saturday. Accompanying him was noticed as a special object of admiration a most handsome "silver-skye" answering to the name of "Floss," and winning the hearts of all lovers of grace and beauty in the Animal Kingdom. Joe brought no wife, but has secured the affection of the next best thing a faithful dog.

County Attorney Gilhooley met with a severe accident recently, which will probably unfit him for active duties for some time to come. It has been his practice to take from Trenton an express train that only "slowed-up" at Elizabeth instead of stopping. On jumping off the other day, Mr. Gilhooley was thrown to the ground so severely as to cut his head open and render him unconscious for some time, besides greatly bruising his body.

MESSRS. EDITORS:

I am the citizen whom Mr. D. a writer in the Central Times, refers to in his letter as having offered a resolution to the effect that the city's power to collect County Taxes be proven by an attempt to collect them at the public meeting. I did no such thing, and nobody else at that meeting did. My resolution was to the effect that the question be fairly tested as to whether the city's ten thousand dollars was liable to the county or not, and that I believe was the substance of the resolution carried. If the court says the city is liable, I suppose we who pay all our taxes must stand it, but such doctrine is pretty rough on the city. I for one do not propose to surrender our chartered rights without a struggle. The mandamus doesn't work well for those who pay their taxes.

FIRE MATTERS.

The Annual meeting of the Firemen's Relief Association for the election of officers, appointment of committees, presentation of Treasurer's Annual Report, &c., will be held at No. 2 engine house on Monday evening next at 8 o'clock.

The Board of Managers of the Plainfield Fire Department, met in adjourned meeting at the parlors of No. 2 Engine Co., on Wednesday evening. All present with the exception of E. L. Morris. The books of the Assessor were received from that gentleman, as well as the following communication:

To the President and Members of the Plainfield Fire Department.

GENTLEMEN—I hereby submit the assessment for the year 1881 as follows:

Valuation, City of Plainfield..........	$[illegible]
Valuation, North Plainfield..........	[illegible]
Making a total valuation of..........	$[illegible]
Making an increase above the year 1880 of	$[illegible]
The deductions as made to the firemen for 1880 were..........	$[illegible]

I have been unable as yet to get the names of the firemen, consequently I am unable at this time to give you the net amount upon which to levy the tax.

Plainfield, June 8th 1881. J. A. HUBBARD, Assessor.

The following resolutions offered by Mr. Depew were adopted: That the assessment as made be accepted subject to such corrections as may occur in the future. That the Treasurer be authorized to employ such person or persons as he may see fit to collect the fire tax of the present year and all arrearages. That the Treasurer be requested to send within twenty days to every owner of taxable property inside the fire limits of this city the amount of the fire tax on such property and the date and place of the meeting of the Board of Appeals. That the Board of Appeals sit on Thursday, the 7th of July, from 4:30 to 6 o'clock, P. M., in the Council Chamber, to hear the complaints of those who may feel aggrieved by the tax assessed against them. That the Assessor be directed to follow the strict wording of the law in relation to the exemption from taxation of those owning property and serving as active firemen. An application from Zephyr H. & L. Co., for a certificate of exemption for N. M. Sebring, was received and referred to the Secretary for examination. The Board then adjourned.

SPORTSMEN'S CORNER.

The season for catching shad with nets ends to-day, June 10th, in this State. As a rule the fishermen have not had a profitable season, especially in the Delaware and Raritan rivers, in consequence of the lowness of the waters. The size of the fish taken, however, has exceeded those caught in many former years.

The Westfield Game & Fish Protective Society have issued posters offering a reward of $25 for information leading to the arrest and conviction of any person violating the Game and Fish laws. This Society is in a flourishing condition and is efficiently officered. Secretary Geo. A. Young will give information to any one regarding membership of the Club or other information regarding the protection of Game or Fish by addressing him at his home, Westfield, N. J.

There will be a shooting tournament and Clam Bake at Campbell's Club House, adjoining the Fair Grounds on Friday June 17th. An interesting match at pigeons between two well-known amateur shooters of this city will occur on the same day.

A meeting of the Board of Directors of the New Jersey Game & Fish Protective Society was held at the Mansion House, this city, Wednesday evening, June 9th, at which considerable business of importance was transacted, among which was the establishing of an agency in New York city and Philadelphia, for the procurement of non-resident members. Mr. Fred. Volckman, of No. 2 Cortlandt street, was appointed agent for New York and J. F. A. Latour, of Philadelphia. The Society is increasing rapidly in membership.

SCOTCH PLAINS SCRATCHINGS.

The M. E. Church of Scotch Plains will hold their annual ice cream and strawberry festival, Wednesday evening June 15th. Admission 25 cents.

The old plank walk was sold at public auction on Monday evening last, Mr. Cleaver acting as auctioneer. It is rumored the gentleman charged seventy-five cents for his services. [Has he a license?]

The children of the M. E. Sunday School will hold a Floral Service Sunday evening next. The pastor will deliver an address upon Education, and Miss N. Pound has promised the little ones a solo. All are invited.

Our citizens can understand why the Road Master, "Mr. H. Goodman," removed the plank walk, but where the gentleman got his power to sell the same, is one of the things they cannot understand. Maybe the power behind the "Throne" will next week explain.

Query—If the Road Master can take up a plank walk and sell it, why is it that he did not take up the fence of Mr. John Taylor Johnston and sell it at the same time. Both were in the road.

WESTFIELD WISPS.

A lamp has been placed in front of Mr. Streck's residence on Orchard street.

Road Overseer Pierson has completed the walk on Elm street from Broad street to North avenue.

An attempt was made to rob the "Stillger" farm of water giving facilities in the shape of a pump, on Saturday evening last.

One of our citizens is the fortunate possessor of a hen who lays double yolk eggs weighing on an average a quarter of a pound each.

We notice with pleasure the placing of a lamp in front of "Bayards" drug store. This addition to the lamps already in use give our principal block proper light.

Mr. Otis G. Webb desires to return his heartfelt thanks to his unknown friends who fairly deluged him with valuable presents on the anniversary of his birth.

Since our last issue Mr. Chas. Lyon, our popular expressman, has become the possessor of the valuable Hamiltonian Stallion, lately the property of Mr. B. G. Brown.

The services as assistant Postmaster rendered our citizens by Miss Louise Decker, daughter of our postmaster, have already won for her the good opinion of the entire community.

The Village Improvement Committee of the Lyceum have received quite a number of lamps during the past week, and the irrepressible, otherwise John Pfeifer is at work placing them in position.

Dr. C. E. Aguirre, whose advertisement appears under the head of "Westfield Advertisers" in this and future issues, was the recipient during the past week of a very handsome and complete dentist's chair.

Mr. David E. Miller, a member of the popular firm of E. Miller & Sons, is to be congratulated upon the addition to his family of a daughter, the happy event transpiring on Tuesday last. "Dave, shake."

Those of our citizens who are the possessors of anything they desire to sell or dispose of, will consult their own interests by advertising it under the head of "Westfield Advertisers" in connection with our local notes.

Mr. A. W. Moffett of the "Westfield Hotel" complains of being robbed during the past week of a very fine rooster, besides several chickens. Efforts are being made to detect the thieves, and we trust they will meet with success.

The habit of a large number of our citizens of using that portion of their property that should properly be diverted to lawns, for the purpose of raising hay crops is decidedly detrimental to the appearance of our village and should be discontinued.

We regret to announce that the "Star Route" investigations have reached our township, and that said investigations implicate one of our popular Physicians, and a local reporter, charged with being the recipients of excessive rates for limited service.

Despite the unpleasant weather the Strawberry and Ice Cream Festival, under the auspices of the Ladies' Aid Society of the Methodist Episcopal church, was largely attended, and proved largely remunerative to the Society. The good already done by this organization is hardly appreciated by our citizens and deserves general recognition.

Those of our citizens desiring to secure the benefit of the most perfect Photographing art, will consult their own interests by calling upon Mr. George Hunt, at Plainfield, N. J. Those in doubt of his abilities in this line, have only to see the splendid pastelle portrait of the Senior of this paper, Mr. W. L. Force, now on exhibition at his gallery, to be convinced.

A matter that has aroused the indignation of a number our citizens, was the turning out of house and home of the children, three in number, of the late Amos Ball, by the administrator James Dunham; the property left would seem to be sufficient for their proper maintainance, and unless proper reasons are given for this action our verdict will be recorded as against the action taken.

During the past Spring and Summer the residence of Squire Godfrey (unoccupied) has been systematically robbed, the perpetrators breaking open trunks, cutting out lead pipe, etc. The latest outrage in this respect is the robbing of his strawberry bed of its fruit. Means have been taken to detect the burglars that we trust will prove successful in bringing the offenders to justice.

Mr. Edw. E Brennin the night operator at the Depot, is fast winning the esteem of our fellow citizens by his polite attention to their wants. When we consider the services rendered our citizens by Messrs. Pennington, Abbott, Koester and his able assistant Thos. Anderson, together with the gentleman above mentioned, it is only fair to say that in their respective departments our citizens are well served.

Serious fears were entertained on Thursday of last week, by the many friends of Mr. A. W. Moffett the popular proprietor of the "Westfield Hotel," to the effect that he had been abducted greatly to their relief; it was made evident upon investigation, that his absence was due to his extreme politeness that induced him to insist on securing an invalid a seat on the train before leaving, her the train started in the meantime.

The preparations for the proper "Athletic Celebration" of July 4th, are progressing very favorably, and the occasion promises to be a very interesting one to lovers of good sport. The "Westfield Athletic Club" have decided to give "Club" games, and the events will probably consist of about the same trials of speed as already noted for professional competition. The shooting match at glass balls will probably begin with an open sweepstake at 20 balls each; other sweepstakes will follow.

The Grand Musical Festival under the direction of W. Henry Elston, will take place at Lyceum Hall, Westfield, on Wednesday evening, June 15, 1881, commencing at 8 o'clock. An orchestra of twelve pieces with piano accompaniment will comprise a part of the entertainment. Over one hundred children from the Public School of Westfield, carefully prepared, will sing several favorite songs. A good male quartette will add to the pleasure of the occasion by rendering some excellent music. The Orchestra, together with the male quartette, has been selected from some of the best Amateur Artists of the city of Newark. The price of admission to this rare treat for the citizens of Westfield has been placed at such a low figure that no one need fail in listening to the Concert. Orchestra under the direction of Prof. Barringer of Newark. Tickets to be had at Drs. Bayard & Gale, and also at the door. Admission 25 cents; children 15 cents.

Sunday next (June 12th) will be "Children's day" at the Methodist Episcopal church. Rev. Warren L. Hoagland, pastor. Services will be held as follows: Morning 10:30, afternoon 2:30, evening 7:30. The church will be appropriately decorated with birds, flowers, and in fact with everything that will add to its appearance. The members of the Sunday School are expected to be present at 10:15 in the morning and at 2 o'clock in the afternoon. The programme for the occasion is given below.

9.	Singing,	Zions Mission School.
10.	Address,	The Pastor.
11.	Singing,	School and Congregation.

The singing will be accompanied by organ and cornet. This is certainly a very attractive programme and we doubt if the church will hold all those who desire to listen to it.

It is undoubtedly a fact that very few of our citizens are aware that within the limits of our Township, almost within our village proper, we have a farm of 25 acres, without doubt (to its extent) the finest in point of cultivation of any in the State. This is nevertheless true, and its favored visitors will find themselves forced to admire it. We refer to the Highland farm, owned by Mr. Ed. Chamberlain, located on the extension of Westfield avenue, its centre almost directly fronting on the Short Hill road, a location formerly known as the Middle of the World. While this property is largely devoted to fruit culture, it also has the unquestioned claim of producing the largest crops of grain, grass, etc., to the acre of any in this vicinity. Some idea may be formed of the fruit yield, by the fact that within its limits there are 1100 pear, 100 quince, and 200 apple trees, 200 blackberry, 200 raspberry, and 200 currant bushes, in addition to a vineyard of over 700 vines of choicest varieties. The grapes are largely used for the manufacture of pure wines, and the owner has reason to be proud of his success in this line, his wines being second in quality to none produced in the State, and while not manufactured for the market, can be procured by those desiring their use in case of sickness. Mr. Chamberlain's liberality in this respect is too well known to need comment here. With 28 years experience as a grower of fine fruits, we have in the cultivation shown on this farm, evidence of the highest skill and knowledge in the art of perfect and intelligent care. Aside from orchards and vineyard, a visit to the garden at this early day will show corn (in tassels), potatoes and tomatoes in flowers and other garden crops far in advance of anything usual in this vicinity. Among the varieties of pears grown, we noticed the following: Bartlett, Doyenne, Bousseck, Dearborn's Sedling, Belle Lucrative, Clapp's favorite, Beurre Bosc, Sickle, Sheldron, Beurre d' Anjou, Laurence, Winter Nelis and other varieties. For the benefit of those desiring to raise fruit, we state that Mr. Chamberlain has found it impossible to make a success in the soil of either the Vicar of Wakefield or Flemish Beauty varieties of pears. In the vineyard we noticed the following varieties: Concord, Hartford, Martha, Clinton, Iona, Delaware, Telegraph, Lady Prentiss and others. Mr. Chamberlain will gladly give any of our residents fullest information regarding tree or fruit culture, at any time required.

RESCUED FROM DEATH.

The following statement of William J. Coughlin, of Somerville, Mass., is so remarkable that we beg to ask for it the attention of our readers. He says: "In the fall of 1876 I was taken with a violent bleeding of the lungs followed by a severe cough. I soon began to lose my appetite and flesh. I was so weak at one time that I could not leave my bed. In the summer of 1877 I was admitted to the City Hospital. While there the doctors said I had a hole in my left lung as big as a half dollar. I expended over a hundred dollars in doctors and medicines. I was so far gone at one time a report went around that I was dead. I gave up hope, but a friend told me of DR. WM. HALL'S BALSAM FOR THE LUNGS. I laughed at my friends, thinking that my case was incurable, but I got a bottle to satisfy them, when to my surprise and gratification, I commenced to feel better. My hope, once dead, began to revive, and to-day I feel in better spirits than I have the past three years.

"I write this hoping you will publish it, so that every one afflicted with Diseased Lungs will be induced to take DR. WM. HALL'S BALSAM FOR THE LUNGS, and be convinced that CONSUMPTION CAN BE CURED. I have taken two bottles and can positively say that it has done more good than all the other medicines I have taken since my sickness. My cough has almost entirely disappeared and I shall soon be able to go to work." Sold by druggists.

TROUBLESOME CHILDREN

Ought not to be scolded and punished for what they cannot help. They need a medicine having a tonic effect on the kidneys and the urinary organs. Such a medicine is Kidney-Wort. It has specific action. Do not fail to get it for them.—Exchange.

THE universal growl that the peach crop has again been destroyed—a growl which we have every season—is broken by the pleasant story of Mr. Wm. M. Peters, who has 20,000 peach trees in Worcester county, Md. He contradicts the stories of other growers that the peach crop on the Peninsula has been blighted. His peaches, he says, include ten varieties, and all alike are in excellent condition.

Statistics often prove unwelcome facts and none more so than that twenty per cent. of the people of this State die from consumption and kindred diseases. The great question how to reduce this terrible mortality has engaged the minds of our most eminent scholars and physicians. From the testimonials of thousands who have used ADAMSON'S ELIXIR OF SULPHUR, nothing in the way of medicine has ever done so much toward this end. In all affections of the throat and lungs its remedial effect is simply wonderful. Once introduced into every household it would banish the terror of this disease from the land. Sold by A. HER OWN EXPERIENCE.

"The friend of ours who recommended your 'Favorite Remedy' had herself suffered a stroke of Paralysis, which rendered her entire right side powerless, and, in a word, left her as helpless as an infant. But 'Kennedy's Favorite Remedy' cured her and she is now able to do her own work." The above is quoted from a letter from a gentleman in Elmira, N. Y., to Dr. David Kennedy, of Rondout, N. Y. You need a bottle in the house. jsw2

MISCELLANEOUS READING.

A REMARKABLE PRISONER.

In 1831-2 there lived in Monroe county, Miss., a planter named Wooley. He was a half-breed—at least there was a good deal of Cherokee Indian in him. He owned about 200 slaves, and had all the worst habits of an old time planter—drinking, gambling, and horse racing. These pursuits alternated formed his sole occupation, the plantation being managed by an overseer. He had the sole virtue of possessing a sort of Indian veneration for the sacredness of his word. He would not execute a note for any purchase whatever, and held all men in sovereign contempt who violated their pledged word. He had no compunction in killing a man in what he deemed a just quarrel; but his word was his bond. This was his well known character, and he could have got credit for thousands on his word easier than other men could have got hundreds. He had killed several men in gambling quarrels and he was looked upon as a man not to be crossed except at the risk of life.

One night, while playing cards in Columbus, a quarrel arose about the game. His opponent was a known desperado, and he gave the lie to Wooley's statement about the game. Bowies flashed out simultaneously—both were slightly wounded, when a lucky blow laid Wooley's opponent dead upon the floor. Next morning Wooley was arrested—arrested because he did not care that it should be otherwise. Wooley had carried his killing so far that the Judge felt bound to commit him, in order to avoid the imputation of being affected by fear of his desperadoism or wealth. Accordingly to jail went Wooley. The jailer was a weak man, weak in courage and weak to resist the influence of a douceur. After bearing his confinement for a day or two, Wooley sent for the jailer.

"See here, Jim," said he, "you know me, you know I never break my word. Now I want to go out and have a social game with the boys. You can just leave the key, and when it gets bed time, I will come, lock myself in, and it will be all right."

This argument was enforced by material considerations, and night after night Wooley used to come out and enjoy his nocturnal liberty. The Court sitting soon, he got the case put off, and giving bail in the sum of $10,000, was released.

At the next term of court Wooley was put upon trial; the jury returned a verdict of guilty, and the Judge sentenced him to one year at the penitentiary at Jackson, but Wooley demurred.

"You know, Sheriff," said he, "that the county is poor—can't afford the trip—and so I'll just let my boy Cæsar drive me down to Jackson and save all the expense. Got the papers?"

The Sheriff produced them, and ere he was aware, Wooley seized them and put them into his pocket.

"All right," said he, "I shall be off to-morrow morning."

The Sheriff knew he had a desperate man to deal with, but when he reflected that Wooley never broke his word, and had, besides, over $100,000 worth of property he could not move, he made a virtue of necessity and left things to take their turn.

True to his word, Wooley left for Jackson, and in due time arrived. Putting up at the Mansion House, he sallied out, visited all the gambling hells with which that town even then abounded, and the next morning drove up to the penitentiary. Entering the ward room, he inquired:

"Where shall I find the Warden?"

"I am the man," said Col. Dickson.

"Well, I've brought you a prisoner."

"Where is he?" inquired the Warden.

"Here—I am the man," said Wooley handing over the Sheriff's mittimus.

The Warden was amazed. Had he a lunatic to deal with, or had the man killed the sheriff and then come to the prison to defy him? He could not tell, but he determined quickly to keep the man since he offered himself.

"Now," said Wooley, "let's go through this place and see how it looks," and through they went.

As they returned to the guard room, Wooley had talked so pleasantly that the Warden felt reassured, and said jocosely:

"Now, Mr. Wooley, what branch of the business do you think you would like the best?"

"To tell the truth, Colonel," said Wooley, "I never did a day's work in my life, and I don't think I'd like any of your cussed trades. I'll tell you how we can fix it—I'll clerk for you, just for the name of the thing, and we'll live jollily together till the year's up."

The Colonel saw he had a character to deal with, and concluded that a man who would go into prison of his own accord, would not run away, and acquiesced. Wooley stayed his year accordingly; nominal clerk or companion by day and a gambler in Jackson by night. He kept the ward room supplied with Havanas, and a sly nook in the office always contained the best of liquors. His year up, he left unregretting but regretted, for at heart he was a good fellow, and made the warden a jovial companion.

Such was justice in Mississippi forty years ago; but such an incident as this could hardly have occurred elsewhere.

Ida Kelly, of Itasca, Minn., sent a note to her lover, Sol Greismer, with whom she had quarreled, asking him to come on a certain night and elope with her. Sol was elated at the idea of marrying her, partly because he wished to triumph over her parents, who opposed the match. He was under her window with a ladder at midnight. She came down, dressed as though for a journey, and kissed him. They sat down at a little distance from the house, and discussed the question which direction to take. Ida was in Sol's lap, with one arm thrown about his neck, when with the disengaged hand, she cut his throat with a razor. Having murdered him, as she supposed, she ran back to her bed; but the wound was not fatal. It is conjectured that she intended his death to be attributed to suicide, as she was careful to regain the letter which had lured him.

SAD ACCIDENT.

MR. OSCAR CRAIG Blown Up by a Premature Blast in the Rosendale Cement Quarry—Destruction of an Eye—Its Subsequent Removal by Surgical Operation.

Mr. Oscar Craigg was foreman in a cement quarry at Rosendale, Ulster Co., N. Y. By an explosion one day in the quarry he lost an eye—lost it totally. Under an impression that the matter was less serious the local physician told Mr. Craigg that his eye was not lost wholly, but could be saved by treatment. The experiment was tried and failed. Worse remained behind, for he was in danger of losing the other also, through sympathetic inflammation. In this strait he consulted Dr. David Kennedy, of Rondout, N. Y., who told him the injured eye must be taken out to save the other. To this Mr. Craigg demurred, and went back home in doubt. His local physician said: "Go to New York." To New York the patient went, and one of the most eminent oculists in the country, having looked at the case, said: "You have lost one eye entirely, go back and do what you can to save the other." Briefly Dr. Kennedy removed the ruined eye, and treated Mr. Craigg with "Kennedy's Favorite Remedy" to build up his system, and the result was successful.

Dr. Kennedy's great success as a Surgeon is due to the use of "Favorite Remedy" in the after treatment.

Are you troubled with Dyspepsia, Liver Complaint, Constipation, or derangement of the Kidneys and Bladder, then use Dr. Kennedy's "Favorite Remedy." It will not disappoint you. "Dr. Kennedy's Favorite Remedy" for sale by all druggists. j3w4

SEASON 1881.

IDOL!

[Formerly Peck's IDOL,]

By the great Mambrino Chief founder of the Mambrino family; 1st dam by American Eclipse, son of Duroc (founder of the Star family) by imported Diomed. Dam of American Eclipse, Miller's Damsel, by imported Messenger; 2d dam, Kitty Muse by Shakespeare; 3d dam, Ellen Jenkins, by Sir William of Transport; 4th dam by Orphan, son of Ball's Florizel; 5th dam by imported Bedford; 6th dam by Silvertail; 7th dam by imported Dove.

IDOL is a rich dark bay, weighs 1,200 lbs., with high hind foot white, full sixteen hands high, a horse of great substance, fine temper, elegant trotting action, record 2:41½ as a four-year old, distancing his field, and at five years old showed 2:30, third heat, to wagon. As a six year old he made his first season in the stud, but the war prevented the development of his progeny. Few of his colts have been trained, but those few are mostly fast. Idol Girl, 16 hands high, won Beacon, Mystic, and Prospect Park stakes for four year olds during 1871, obtained a record of 2:35¼. This mare at Hastings could beat 2:30, and at Prospect Park trotted during her race a half mile in 1:13¾, and a quarter in 35½ seconds—a 2:22 gait. As a five year old she met with an accident which ended her turf career. Barbara Patchen, in 1879, as a big 16½ hand green 5-year old mare, won all her races in a jog, and the seventh heat, on a half mile track, gained record 2:34½. Don, at Topeka, Kansas, won his race in 2:32. Wayne won colt stakes at Hartford. Hennette trotted, 3 years old, in 2:44. Ideal, same age, trotted in 2:45, and John R., in 1880, gained a record of 2:38 on a half mile track at Olean, N. Y., and won first money in all his races. There are others that will drop into the 2:30 list this year without doubt.

IDOL will be limited to 15 mares, besides those engaged, at $25.00 the season, money payable (or secured) at service.

Good care and pasture furnished at $5 per month. All accidents and escapes at owners' risk. IDOL and some of his colts can be seen at the grazing farm of D. F. CARLE, STIRLING, Morris Co., New Jersey.

Breeders desiring an outcross should call and see IDOL, and after seeing him, judge for themselves. 3j6m

THE NEW BUSINESS

OF THE

EQUITABLE

Life Assurance Society of the U. S.

FOR THE YEAR 1880, WAS OVER

Thirty-Five Millions of Dollars,

The Largest Business Done by any Company in the World.

REASONS FOR THIS RESULT.

The Equitable is the strongest Company in the United States.

Its policies are, by their own express terms, made incontestable after three years. [For precise terms see form of policy contract.]

ALL such incontestable policies are paid immediately after receipt of satisfactory proof of the death of the insured, and without even the customary delay of sixty or ninety days.

EACH ordinary policy provides for a definite surrender value in paid up assurance, in case the policy is surrendered after three years from its date and is surrendered within a reasonable time thereafter.

BY THE TONTINE SAVINGS FUND plan of assurance, returns to policy-holders, after the expiration of what is called the Tontine period, are greater than are obtainable on any other system. Actual settlements of Tontine policies have been made in which policy-holders have withdrawn amounts varying from eighty to one hundred and twenty per cent. of premiums paid, besides enjoying a life insurance indemnity during the period. No other company can show such results.

THE TONTINE plan is the only one natural by which a person may withdraw from his insurance contract at specified periods, receiving the entire reserve and surplus accumulations in cash.

ALL the ordinary forms of insurance with annual dividends of profits, both cash and reversionary, are issued by this Society.

ASSETS, - $41,108,602.

SURPLUS, - $9,228,294.

Its business for the last ten years represented by the new policies issued, has been larger than that of any other Company.

HAY FEVER
HEADACHE

DIRECTIONS

For Catarrh, Hay Fever, Cold in the Head, &c., insert with little finger a particle of the Balm into the nostrils; draw strong breaths through the nose. It will be absorbed, cleansing and healing the diseased membrane.

For Deafness, Apply a particle into the ear.

ELY'S CREAM BALM

Beneficial results are realized by a few applications. A thorough treatment as directed will cure Catarrh. As a household remedy for cold in the head it is unequaled. The Balm is easy to use and agreeable. Sold by druggists at 50 cents. On receipt of 50 cents will mail a package. Send for circular with full information. ELY'S CREAM BALM CO., Owego, N. Y.

"MERIT MUST REAP ITS JUST REWARD."

Of the many Catarrh and Hay Fever remedies we have to stock there is none of which our customers speak more highly than of Ely's Cream Balm. A commercially rare discovery, but one which, from the very first, has, by its evidence of cures produced, to be taken by a leading article. We have never handled a remedy which has increased so rapidly in sales or that has given such universal satisfaction.

Annual Report of the County Collector of the Receipts and Disbursements of Union County for the Year ending May 1, 1881.

To the Director and Board of Chosen Freeholders of the County of Union, N. J.:

Your Committee to settle with the County Collector beg leave to report that they have carefully examined his annual report, which is hereunto annexed, in all its details, having examined each and every amount, and compared each disbursement with accompanying voucher, and find the same correct in every particular.

A certification of balances in the different banks, to cover the difference between disbursements and receipts, and checks still outstanding, amounting to twenty-nine hundred and eighty-five dollars and fifty-four-one-hundredths dollars ($2,985.54) was presented to the Committee and found to tally with the amount due the county at this date.

Respectfully submitted,
WM. CROWELL,
GEO. W. F. RANDOLPH,
Committee.

Gentlemen of the Committee on Collector's Accounts:

My annual report of the receipts and disbursements of the County of Union for the past year I have the honor to herewith submit.

All obligations of the county now outstanding (except bonds) are in the shape of temporary loans which amount to [illegible]. To meet this indebtedness there is to the credit of the county from taxes past due, claims due from sheriff, and cash on hand [illegible], which amount does not include interest on delinquent taxes.

Respectfully submitted,
F. [illegible], County Collector.

THE NEED OF THE DAY.

The Republican contest at Albany for the election of Senators in place of Conkling and Platt, resigned, culminated last week in formal charges of bribery to secure votes for a certain "half-breed" candidate, being brought before the Legislature.

Whether such disreputable efforts were in the interest of half-breed or stalwart, and however stoutly denied by the accused, no doubt the base attempt was made, and it illustrates a practice now fearfully prevalent, not at Albany alone, and which threatens more than anything else to weaken and finally overthrow free representative government.

When money becomes the arbiter of elections, and legislation a purchasable commodity, danger surrounds the dearest rights of the people.

There is nothing surer than that.

Power and privilege obtained by dishonest means ever did and ever will breed and spread corruption.

The elective franchise, as conferred upon the people of this country, makes American citizenship a high dignity and great responsibility. To exercise that sovereign authority in the independence of self judgment should be esteemed a sacred duty, almost as precious as life, and the man or combination of men who aim to strike down that prerogative of freedom, either through despotic threats or tempting offers of money, ought to be scorned and branded as enemies of the Republic.

They are its worst foes.

It is a shameful fact, that to gain a seat in the Congress of the United States, or, in many districts, even in State Legislatures, now involves the expenditure of a large sum of money. Candidates to be available must be rich and unscrupulous. No matter how defective in moral character or statesman intelligence, money, corruptly used, is the factor of their political success. The consequence is, poor or moderately circumstanced men, eminently worthy and capable of filling such positions, are thrust aside.

That is radically wrong. It is a flagrant outrage, not only upon sound principles, but against the best interests of the people. Like begets like, and offices improperly procured will most certainly be in the same manner occupied.

It is time that the American people aroused themselves to the perils and perfidy of political corruption. It is time that each voter prized the ballot of far more value than heaps of gold; that legislators, both National and State, held the public welfare to be the first demand of duty and spurned with contempt every incentive to the contrary.

Personal fidelity to the purity of the ballot, official honesty on the part of the elected, and stern punishment of every species of bribery and interference, whether perpetrated by the scheming politician or the grasping monopolist, at the polling place or within the legislative hall, constitutes the need of the day.

CHARITY.

The definition of charity is—"that disposition of heart which inclines men to think favorably of their fellow men, and to do them good."

It is the noblest attribute of human character and a foundation stone of the Christian religion. Turning to the New Testament we read—"Though I speak with the tongues of men and of angels, and have not charity, I am become as sounding brass, or a tinkling cymbal."

Professors of Christianity, if truly such, must exhibit in their own lives and sayings its virtues, foremost among which is charity. Do they all portray it?

We are led to these remarks by perusing the following allusion to the late Col. Thomas A. Scott, as made by the Christian Advocate, a religious journal, in the way of suggesting as its epitaph for a monument to his memory these words:

"Here lies one who was bold, energetic, shrewd and enthusiastic, of insatiable ambition, yet at times very generous. He was successful, as the world would call it, yet forgetful of God and of the end of all things earthly. His career contained many things to admire, but cannot, as a whole, be commended to the young men of the age for imitation."

If that is Christian charity we fail to discover it, and in contrast, call attention to the following testimony on behalf of Colonel Scott as borne by the Hebrew Leader:

"He was a pure man, and free from vices which have been the ruin of many otherwise successful men of business. He was a member of the Protestant Episcopal Church, and his life was characterized by upright conversation and generous deeds. His generosity was not spasmodic or occurring only 'at times,' but it pervaded his whole life. He sounded no trumpet before him when he did his alms, but with a liberality which was as unostentatious as it was princely relieved the wants of the distressed and bestowed bountiful beneficence where the general public little suspected it. His recently published donations to benevolent works amounted to nearly $300,000. In his living he was singularly abstemious, and was always, when in health, ready with a clear head for whatever business needed his attention. In his family and among his social relations he was beloved and esteemed. When the time came for him to die he devoutly committed himself to his God and departed in perfect peace, and with an unclouded faith."

As has been remarked by a secular paper—"the Jewish is much more just and shows more of the spirit of Christianity than the professedly Christian journal."

* * *

It is amusing to read the comments of certain Republican papers throughout the State on the appointment of our fellow citizen, Nathan Harper, to the Lay Judgeship of Union County, by Gov. Ludlow. These partisan journals say that Mr. Harper is a Democrat and therefore should not have been appointed, because the late Judge Bowne was a Republican. They all agree that Judge Harper is a fine, good and capable gentleman, but then he is a Democrat, you see, and his appointment makes the Bench of Union County solidly Democratic. Why bless your "star route" souls, that is just what all honest people want at this present time, and Gov. Ludlow has shown himself just that kind of a Governor to give the people what they want. The true friends of the late respected Judge agree that Judge Harper is a fit person to represent them on the Bench during the unexpired term of that lamented gentleman. The nomination suits us, the Democratic and Conservative citizens of Union County, as well as Gov. Ludlow, who is level-headed in his appointments. We can't help it if your ox is gored.

THE BACK TAXES.

Now that the Supreme Court has rendered a decision against the city, peremptorily demanding the Treasurer to pay over the amount of back State and County taxes due the Collector of the County, it is to be presumed that those unbelieving members of the Common Council will at last see the error of their ways, and come to the conclusion that the city is "responsible" for the collection of the State and County taxes, and at once proceed toward collecting them. They may claim that the Courts have not yet so decided, but we believe that such a decision is only a matter of short time. It is ridiculous to contend that because of a technicality, the law does not provide for such collections. The Common Council will meet with public commendation, if they at once take steps to do that which the law certainly is intended to express—the collection of taxes due.

* * *

We direct the attention of our readers to the official notice of the Constitutional Commission, elsewhere published, of a special meeting of the Commission to be held at the Ocean House, Long Branch, on Saturday, July 2nd, at the hour of 11, A. M., to consider what changes may be necessary in regard to the present iron-clad restrictions of the Constitution upon legislation regulating municipal governments. All citizens interested in the subject are invited by the Commission to appear before it on that occasion, and express their views on this question. We trust that our leading citizens will avail themselves of this invitation, for it is highly desirable that the commendable purpose of the Commission to consult with and meet the views of the people of the State on this subject should be reciprocated.

* * *

The Annual Report of County Collector Sheridan, which appears in this issue, is a clear and concise document, and shows that the affairs of the county are in an excellent and prosperous financial condition, although a large amount of delinquent taxes are due from townships and cities, Rahway standing at the head of the latter, while Plainfield comes "close by, just a little ways off." However, with the aid of the sharp stick that "Sherry" is prodding the officials of delinquent cities and townships with, a large amount of this tax must soon be paid. The County of Union is to be congratulated upon having so efficient a Collector, the Democratic Board of Freeholders are economical enough, (especially where the wicked printer is concerned) the Lord knows.

* * *

The deadlock among the Republican Senators at Albany still continues. The sixteenth ballot taken yesterday shows no gain for Conkling. The deadlock will undoubtedly result in the adjournment of the Legislature without a choice being made.

* * *

There are some fearful liars at Albany. All on account of Conkling.

Sunday School Anniversary.

A grand celebration of the Sunday School connected with the Netherwood Union Chapel, will take place to-morrow afternoon. Exercises will be held in the Chapel at four o'clock—comprising several addresses, singing, etc. The children will have a parade with their new silk banner recently presented to them, and then will return to the Chapel for refreshments.

Saengerbund Parade and Picnic.

One of the grandest affairs of the kind will take place at New Brunswick on Monday, the 20th inst. The Aurora Singing Society of that city have invited its sister societies of the State to be present with its on the occasion, and join in a parade and picnic in celebration of the presentation to the New Brunswickers of a magnificent flag. Marshals, aspistants and a Committee of Arrangements have been appointed—as published in our issue of May 6th—and everything tending towards success, has been accomplished. The Plainfield Saengerbund will send a large delegation of members and lady friends.

Commencement.

The P. H. S. graduates and our citizens will undoubtedly be astonished on reading this to discover that there has arisen a slight probability of there being no public commencement exercises of the class of '81. The Board of Education having been unable to secure the use of the First Baptist church or any other in the city, are now awaiting an answer from the Trustees of the Park avenue church, upon which depends a final decision regarding the public exhibition of the class. Should the answer be averse, then the ceremonies will have to be held in Assembly Hall or some other as contracted place, admittance to which could only be allowed those taking part and their immediate families. All of which goes to show, more than ever, the need in this city of a public hall.

SCOTCH PLAINS SCRATCHINGS.

The Public School will close on June the 30th.

The Floral Service in the M. E. church last Sunday evening was well attended.

The children of the Day School will hold their Annual Picnic, Friday, June 24th.

A family row among residents North of the village, on Sunday night last, caused much annoyance to neighbors.

During the thunder storm of Tuesday morning last, a large tree near the Fur Mills, was struck by lightning and shattered from top to base.

Ground will shortly be broken for the erection of a new church of Lutheran denomination, next to Mr. Radford's residence on Main street.

The annual meeting of Excelsior H. & L. Co. No. 1, will be held at the Truck House next Monday evening. Election of officers will be in order.

The Village of Scotch Plains is slowly but surely drifting back to the days of Washington. No sidewalks, roads covered with water, no new buildings going up, and every obstacle placed in the way of those who make any attempt at improvement. Even the Public school is doomed, unless the citizens bestir themselves.

NORTH PLAINFIELD PARAGRAPHS.

Applications for the position of Principal of the Public School, are as numerous as small boys around a circus tent.

The North Plainfield Public school will hold its Annual Commencement on Thursday evening of next week, in the Warren Mission Chapel.

Watumtka Falls were a splendid sight to witness on Wednesday morning after the heavy rains, with about a foot deep of water running over the same.

Mr. Peter Linzer, formerly a member of Warren Eng. Co., and now engaged in business in Waycross, Ga., is visiting friends in the township.

Judge Dixon, in the Supreme Court, has rendered his decision that the Johnston Drive, Somerset street and Grove street extension assessments can be legally made, but rules that testimony should have been taken in the matter and directs the Circuit Court so to do.

There is a large stone hanging just over the chasm made at the Telford Pavement Company's quarry, which is ready to fall, roll down the steep sides of the mountain, strike a vehicle, mash it to pieces, kill the horse attached to the same, throw the driver into Codington's pond, or kill him—unless said stone is removed from its dangerous position.

A two-year old son of Mr. Gilbert VanNeste, of Stelton Place, was put to bed by its mother on Wednesday afternoon last and left alone. It subsequently procured some matches from the bureau, and in playing with them set the sheets afire. The cries of the child attracted the mother who arrived on the spot in time to put out the flames before much damage was done.

Mr. Samuel Hudson, of Somerset street, has had fine luck with his strawberry bed this season. From a first year's growth of vines of the "Golden Drop" variety he has picked them for five crops of large and delicious berries, and has yet blossoms on some of the vines. Mr. Hudson's success in cultivating such large berries and crops is principally due to the fertilizers he uses, which are of his own manufacture.

The parent who has been so unjustly accused of beating her step-child during Sunday, is naturally much distressed over the false report circulated. The head of the family who denies the charge in full, threatens to seek such redress as is obtainable by means of the laws regarding libel.

FIRE MATTERS.

Warren Engine Co. No. 3 have reduced the mortgage on the purchase of their fine steamer by the payment of another $100 and hope at their coming pic-nic, June 30th, to make enough to wipe out their whole indebtedness on same. Good for Warren, and success to the pic-nic.

At a meeting of Warren Engine Co. No. 3, held on Tuesday evening, the following changes in its officers were made in consequence of the retirement of others: Foreman, Wm. Harding; First Ass't., Geo. Becker; Second Ass't., F. Kellerhorn; First Ass't. Engineer, Wm. Krausse; Second Ass't., F. Utzinger; Third Ass't., E. Zeiss.

Through a misunderstanding "Alert" Hose Co. No. 1 and "Warren" Eng. Co. No. 3, failed to elect but one member each as members of the Firemen's Relief Association at the last Annual Department election, when they were entitled to two members each. Therefore on Monday night last "Alert" elected ex-Chief Wm. H. Voorhees to represent them in the Association along with Mr. Wm. Cook. On Tuesday evening "Warren" selected Wm. Krausse as a new member and Frank Whitely to fill vacancy occasioned by the resignation of Mr. Seibel, the recently elected member from that Company, who has left the city.

Under the supervision of Chief Vail an effort has been made to so arrange the striking apparatus of the fire alarm bell as to cause a louder alarm when the bell is struck. The apparatus, which was constructed by Mr. Wash Reamer, assisted by Mr. Ed. Verity, was tested on Tuesday last, in the presence of members of the Fire Board and citizens. While it is much easier to strike an alarm from the bell by the new method, the sound is certainly not so loud or clear as that caused by ringing. Keep on tinkering at it, gentlemen, and then in the end erect a tower of suitable height and enclose its sides with slats the same as a church steeple. Then you will probably hit it. We are no Vennor, but this is the best point we can give you.

Firemen's Relief Association.

The Annual Meeting of the above Association was held at the House of No. 2 Engine Company on Monday evening last. President Hubbard in the Chair. Representatives from all the Companies, excepting No. 3, were present. An election for Officers, Relief and Finance Committees resulted as follows:

President—J. A. Hubbard.
Vice President—D. W. Rogers.
Secretary—W. R. Cock.
Treasurer—A. D. Mallinson.
Relief Committee—A. L. Force, A. D. Jennings and Chas Seibel.
Finance Committee—N. M. Sebring, W. R. Cock and Chas. Seibel.

The President instructed the Secretary to notify the officers of Warren Engine Company and Alert Hose Company that they were each entitled to two Representatives instead of one, as elected by them at their annual election for Company Officers.

Treasurer Shaw presented his Annual Report, which was referred to Finance Committee for examination. It is as follows:

PLAINFIELD, N. J., June 13th, 1881.

R. J. Shaw, Treasurer, in account with the Firemen's Relief Association.

Something Entirely New!
NO SMOKE! NO SMELL!
NO DIRT! NO ASHES!
TUBULAR HOT-BLAST NON-EXPLOSIVE
Oil or Gas Stoves!

THE REASONS WHY THE TUBULAR HOT-BLAST OIL OR GAS STOVE IS SUPERIOR TO ALL OTHERS:

Its appearance is more like a stove than anything that has yet been offered.

It requires no wire gauze or water tank to make it safe.

A continual current of air passes to the burners over the Oil Pot, preventing the oil from getting warmer than the atmosphere in which it is burning. The bake oven is not in the way of the kettle or boiler.

Baking, roasting, and boiling can all be done at once, and in less time than with any other oil stove.

The No. 3 or Three-Burner Stove will make 12 inches of pure white flame at a cost of 1½ cts. per hour. The reservoir holds four quarts of oil, sufficient to burn for twelve hours.

The No. 4 or 4-Burner Stove will make 16 inches of white flame at a cost of 2 cents per hour. The reservoir holds 5 quarts of oil sufficient to burn for twelve hours.

The No. 3 Stove will consume between three and four cents worth of gas per hour.

The No. 4 will consume between four and five cents worth of gas per hour.

THE Philadelphia train passing through this city about 11 o'clock, a. m., on Monday last, "butted" Michael Carty's goat into eternity near the New street crossing.

AGAIN has the Potter Press Works nine proved its ability at the game of base ball. On Saturday last it defeated a nine picked from our citizens, by a score of 19 to 7.

WEBSTER'S definition of peremptory is, "precluding debate or expostulation." A reference to such authority might have saved the city the censure passed upon it at Trenton, on Tuesday last.

THE Trenton policemen have been furnished with their summer uniforms and make a handsome appearance in them. How would Plainfield's police force (?) look in summer dress, eh! "Bob?"

IF anyone can read Vennor's predictions without searching the revised edition immediately thereafter, we will consider him a hardened mortal who will have a tough time of it hereafter.

THE man who would rob another of his umbrella during such weather as we have had lately, ought to be dipped in a hogshead of mucilage and hung up to dry in front of a furnace in a rolling mill.

THE points of compass on top of the flag staff of Dr. Probasco, on Front street are accurate and correct, as Mr. P. had surveyors on hand to designate such points when the pole was erected.

WE invite the attention of our readers to the article headed "Our Public Schools" in another part of this paper, from the pen of our fellow citizen ex-Judge Good. It is worthy of perusal.

THE establishment of Clare the jeweler has been put through a course of spring cleaning and now presents a most attractive appearance. A handsome standing show-case at the door forms a noticeable sign.

VENNOR writes to the Cincinnati Commercial that he is glad to see that they are having a succession of rain storms. If the editors addressed feel as we do, they will reply that they would be glad to hear of his speedy execution.

EVERYBODY saw the total eclipse of Sunday morning's moon, and in consequence a description would be superfluous. With a regard for the natural curiosity of mortals, the weather was propitious and the exhibition was a complete success.

MR. Chas. Zimmer at No. 19 West Front street, has just purchased new billiard and pool tables of the celebrated makers, Brunswick & Blake. They are of the latest improved pattern and add greatly to the attractions of Mr. Zimmer's billiard parlor.

ANCHOR Lodge, No. 149, A. F. & A. M. was visited by a large delegation from Palestine Lodge No.——of New Brunswick on Tuesday evening last. The work was in the M. M. degree. Mayor Strong of New Brunswick was one of the visiting members.

WE would call the attention of those in need of counter or standing show-cases, to the advertisement of Fraser, at the corner of West Broadway and Reade street, New York. It is one of the oldest established and most satisfactory manufactories in the United States.

MAYOR Strong, of New Brunswick, has come to the sensible conclusion, that to muzzle a dog in hot weather thus preventing the animal from eating or drinking, is a sure plan to make the dog go mad; he will therefore issue no proclamation requiring them to be so muzzled.

WHILE putting up one of Ericsson's Caloric Engines in North Plainfield, the agent, Mr. Wm. Addis, was so unfortunate as to tear the nail from one of his fingers. This will not, however, interfere with his placing of another of the engines in the residence of Mr. John Taylor Johnston.

A TWO-YEAR old bull that was being guided through Park Avenue during Tuesday noon, by a young man at the end of a rope, butted the curved line of beauty out of a wheel of Mr. R. S. Little's phaeton, on Front Street, and breaking away from his conductor flew as a bird to the mountain.

AN open-air exhortor of considerable talent and effective vocal powers, gathered a large assemblage on the corner of Front street and Park avenue on Sunday evening last. The churches were just emptying at the time, and their congregations, attracted in passing by the man's singing, stopped and listened to the very instructive discourse that followed.

THE first sentence case coming before the Bench since Judge Harper took his seat, was that of Mr. Higginbotam, of Elizabeth, who was on Friday last sentenced by Judge McCormack to pay a fine of $500 for kicking up a disturbance among his family. The fine was promptly paid, and Mr. H. is now under $1,500 bonds to keep the peace.

MR. GEORGE ROCKFELLOW, the popular grocer, corner of Park and North avenues, is selling daily 100 quarts of the most delicious strawberries one desires to look at or taste. We do not know the variety, but can say from a test we made of the basket he sent us, that they are large, sweet and run even in size.

MESSRS. Edsall & Price, with that continued enterprise for which they are so noted and which has brought them such deserved success, are now offering for men's wear a handsome fitting and most durable shirt at 99 cents. It is not of a job lot, but made for their trade, of the best material and so thoroughly reinforced at the bosom as to insure their everlasting.

THE sale of the real estate of the late Robert C. Vail, which we advertise today, offers some very choice farming property, wood lots and other desirable lands. One portion consists of 23½ acres on the Rahway road lying both sides of the city line and near the Hotel Netherwood, and will be sold in two parcels at Laing's Hotel, on Saturday the 25th inst., at noon.

MORE big strawberries have come to our sanctum since our last issue. Mr. Michael Kreiger, of New Market, laid on our table several baskets of beautiful and luscious berries known as the "Shopler Seedling," which were very large in size. One of these measured 7½ inches in circumference. He claims he cannot be beaten for size or quality of berries.

SOME person or persons unknown, with malice aforethought and on burglary intent, effected an entrance into the cellar of Parsons & Co's Book Store, on Front Street, sometime during Monday night. The door leading to the store above was then cut through near the lock to enable the insertion of a hand and the reaching of the bolts, but it is supposed the parties at this point were frightened away, as no farther entrance was effected.

VENNOR'S gift of weather prophecy seems to be a good one. The frosts predicted by him for the early part of last week came duly to hand, and though none were found hereabouts, yet in the upper part of the State they were seen. Some damage was done the growing crops near Port Jervis, N. Y. People are generally trusting to Vennor for the accuracy with which he prognosticates the weather condition.

WHEN the excellence of Rice as a diet is fully understood its use will be more frequent and of daily occurrence in every household. At this season of the year especially, it may properly be classed as superior to any of the cereals which are in such general use for the morning and midday meals. No other food is so easy of digestion, and at its present cost it is cheaper than potatoes, oat-meal or grain-grits of any kind.

High Mass.

LAST Sunday morning the services at St. Mary's church were peculiarly interesting, owing to the fact that Rev. Chas. J. Kelley—a Plainfield boy who had grown to manhood, and been ordained a priest of the Catholic church the Tuesday previous at Newark, by Most Rev. M. A. Corrigan, D. D., Coadjutor to his Eminence, Cardinal McCloskey—celebrated his first Mass, and this a solemn High Mass, assisted by his friends Rev. Michael Downes of Jersey City Heights, Deacon, Rev. John Dowd, Vice President of Seton Hall College, sub-Deacon, and Father Morris, Master of Ceremonies. The young priest has been appointed assistant to Father Fleming, of St. Aloysius church, Newark.

The Muhlenberg Bazaar.

In spite of the unpleasant weather that surrounded the opening night of the late Bazaar at Van Deventer Hall, the financial success achieved, as published below, was most satisfactory. It is understood that the First Baptist church will donate an additional $100, making a sufficient total with which to complete and furnish the Hospital and open it for use.

"Peremptory!"

Contrary to the expectations of some and the hopes of many, the Branch Court at Trenton, on Tuesday last, refused to hear the arguments of Corporation Counsel Kimball and Courtlandt Parker, Esq., on behalf of the Treasurer of the City of Plainfield in application for a rehearing regarding the peremptory mandamus against that officer. Attorney-General Stockton for the County Collector objected to any application, holding that the Treasurer was in contempt for not having complied with the order of the Court, and therefore could have no hearing until purged of such contempt. The Court sustained the position and refused a hearing.

The brief presented by Corporation Counsel Kimball we have read with much interest, and are of the opinion that the argument is very complete and thorough. Whether the points are sufficiently well taken to prevail with the Court remains to be seen, but the city's counsel are very confident of securing a rehearing. Mr Kimball yesterday handed the Court the Treasurer's check for between $7,000 and $8,000, asking that it be held until the city shall be heard in its own defence.

Vail-Newhall.

If there be any truth in the old saw—"Happy be the bride whom the sun shines on," there will be no happier than she, who until last Wednesday, was known as Miss Maggie Newhall. The day, perfect in itself, was made, if possible, more so by contrast to those which preceded it. The bride and also the groom, Mr. Walter Vail, belong to well known families of New Market. Mr. Vail has been living for some years in Arkansas, where he will shortly return, but not until he came. Miss Newhall, though not a resident of Plainfield, has been associated with us for some time past, especially among musical circles, and she will be greatly missed by her friends and acquaintances here. The ceremony was performed at three o'clock, at the chapel of the Holy Innocents, and the bridal party was on time, which is both unusual and, in this case, unfortunate, as our reporter reached the church just in time to hear the benediction and to see the party leave. The church was filled to its utmost capacity, many among the spectators being residents of this city. After the ceremony the members of both families and the most intimate friends, repaired to the residence of the bride's mother, where a reception was held. Mr. and Mrs. Vail will go to Halifax for a wedding tour.

A Card.

PLAINFIELD, June 14th.

The Bazar held by the Ladies Auxiliary Board of the Muhlenberg Hospital on June 7th and 8th, was more successful than its best friends hoped for. The large amount realized was a surprise to all, and the ladies desire to return their sincere thanks to our townspeople for coming forward in so generous a manner. The music which was so enjoyable, was made more so by the fact that most of the performers were our own friends, who kindly volunteered their services. To Messrs. D. W. Rogers and J. S. Cotter for their large contributions of strawberries. To Mr. Holmes for moving several loads free of charge. Also to W. L. Gavett who kindly donated the china used. The editors of the Central Press who gave a receipted bill, and also to THE CONSTITUTIONALIST and Bulletin for reduced bills, and last but not least, to our friend Mr. Richmann, who not only gave but printed all the tickets and bills of fare, and in fact, it would be impossible to attempt to enumerate all who have helped us, but to one and all we give our hearty thanks.

MRS. A. ABOT,
Secretary.

The family circle of the Rev. A. V. V. Raymond has been enlarged by the advent of a little girl, on Tuesday last—and thus another link is forged in the chain of love that binds husbands and wives together.

On Tuesday afternoon last, at the late residence of the bride's father, Judge W. J. Roome, deceased, were married Miss Kate Roome and Mr. Benj. A. Hegeman. The couple subsequently left Plainfield for an extended tour through Canada and The Lakes.

It seems as though it would fall upon the shoulders of Mr. Foster Milliken, alone, to represent the male graduates at the P. H. S. Commencement. Sickness and other uncontrollable circumstances, seem to have interfered effectively with the public appearance of the others.

County Attorney Gilhooly is worthy of the highest commendation from tax-payers of the county for the careful attention he bestows to their interests. A great portion of his time is taken up in looking after the mandamus suits against certain townships and cities of this County.

Mr. Fred Busby and wife, former residents of Plainfield, but now of Denver, Col., are visiting friends in this section. Mr. B. speaks in the most flattering and glowing terms of Denver as a place of business for a wide-awake man, with a little capital. Himself and wife started on their return trip yesterday.

Mrs. Dr. Burlingham and Miss E. E. Kenyon were each presented recently with handsome pieces of silver that were purchased at the Muhlenberg Bazaar by the subscription of friends who justly appreciated the valuable services of the ladies in the cause of the Hospital.

Collector A. Berry, of Somerset County, accompanied by his wife, went on a visit to friends at Dover, Morris County, last week. As a consequence of his not divulging to our reporter his intended point of visit when he departed thence, he had a rainy week of it. Mr. and Mrs. B., however, returned to their home in safety on Monday, after experiencing a pleasant visit despite the rainy weather.

Auguste Saltzman, Esq., the popular foreman of "Alert" Hose Co. No. 1, will start for his home here on his return trip from Europe, June 18th, arriving at New York about the 28th. He takes passage on the "Labradour," of the French line of steamers, a twin vessel to the "Amerique" in which Mr. S. sailed for Europe. A number of his friends will go down the bay to meet him on his return.

The many friends of Hon. Charles A. Campbell, of Middlesex County, will learn with sorrow of his sudden illness from an attack of heart disease and paralysis of the left arm and side, which occurred about two o'clock on Saturday afternoon last. Mr. Campbell was seated at the dinner table with his family and friends, at his home in Woodbridge, when without warning, in the midst of hearty laughter, he was suddenly noticed to drop his head to one side and become speechless. Fortunately his brother-in-law, a Mr. Vermeule, of Philadelphia, who is a physician, was present, and through his skill and prompt measures Mr. C., was returned to consciousness. Other medical aid was immediately summoned, and everything done to relieve the sufferer. Our latest advices are that Mr. Campbell is somewhat easier but not out of danger.

The Congregational Festival.

After one postponement "on account of the weather," the Congregationalists opened their Festival in a large tent erected for the purpose at the corner of Eighth street and Washington avenue, on Tuesday evening last. Although a severe shower rather dampened the affair in its beginning, sufficient financial return was experienced to wipe out any discouraging feelings that naturally arose. On Wednesday, just after the labors of the ladies had succeeded in removing all traces of the past rain's ill effects, another unfortunate occurrence took place caused by the breaking of the ropes that upheld one end of the canvass roof. By the accident the sides became so loosened as to sway in and out at the pleasure of the wind, and the tables, one of the head-lights and other accessories were very generally tumbled about. Before evening, however, everything was in order, and no trouble was experienced in catering to the wants and wishes of a large attendance of patrons. The tables at which a feast of freezin' was furnished, the well at which a flow of lemonade was served, and the bower where could be obtained Brower's unequalled buds and blossoms, were all extensively favored with desired custom. A Japanese tea house adjoining, did a large trade in the liquid that cheers but not inebriates, supplied in porcelain receptacles dear to the hearts of lovers of bric a brac. In a barn near by, Mr. Punch and his bride fought their ever ending battle over "the baby" to the delight of the young and the amusement of the old. All these with many other innumerable attractions, combined to reap a large crop of the "root of all evil" for the furnishing fund of the Congregational Church.

Found Dead.

On Tuesday last as the Wiman boys of North Plainfield were driving the cows home, they noticed an old man, as they supposed, asleep in Mr. Stephen O. Horton's wood lot on the top of the mountain between Plainfield and Washington Rock, and adjoining the farm property of Mr. Geo. Demler. The boys passed on without further thought, but seeing the person again the next evening in the same position and place, they examined him and found that he was dead. The residents of the vicinity were notified, and the body was easily identified by them as that of an old peripatetic clock mender, well known in the country thereabouts. He had no particular place of residence, but wandered around from one farm house to another, doing little jobs of mending, playing on the fiddle for the entertainment of the young folks, and sleeping in such barns and outhouses as furnished the most comfortable and convenient shelter.

Justice of the Peace, Moses H. French, the next day telegraphed to County Physician Wagoner at Somerville, but as that gentleman no longer occupies the office and the Board of Freeholders of Somerset County have elected no County Physician, the Justice has been compelled to take entire charge of the case himself. The body is to be buried by Undertaker Alex. Runyon, to-day (Thursday).

There is no doubt that the unfortunate victim dropped dead as he stood or walked. He habitually carried with him a pail, umbrella and cane, the latter of which was found under his body and the two other articles at each side. He was lying upon his face, and certainly the position and surrounding circumstances, together with the fact that his poverty and general kindness of disposition would tempt no murder, points to sudden death from heart affection or other disease of the same action.

COMMUNICATED.

For "THE CONSTITUTIONALIST."

Our Public Schools.

MESSRS. EDITORS:

Through the courtesy and kindness of one of the members of the board of education, I have been invited for three consecutive years to visit the Public Schools of our city. Through your solicitation you have desired that I should give my observations and opinions upon our schools and their general management and operation, and also what comparison they bear with those schools of like grade in European countries. The first impression that the visitor realizes in our common school is the orderly manner in which everything is done throughout the institution. On the opening of the exercises in the morning, we were much impressed in a manner in which the scholars are assembled together in the general reception room for the purpose of listening to a few words read from Scripture, repeating of the Lord's prayer and a song or two from some choice selection. On some previous occasion, we have noticed a pupil, or two, would entertain their associates with an excellent piece for declamation. After these exercises are over, the girls and boys leave the room with a military precision to their respective classes attending to their studies with apparent assiduity. The next matter which naturally calls the visitor's attention is to visit the respective classes in their own rooms and under the personal supervision of their own teachers. It is here in these several rooms where the graded scholar is located that you discern the school machinery at work in perfect uniformity from the higher classes through to the primary department. We must tarry a while in some of these classes, if we wish to discover the labor and pains taken on the part of the teacher toward the pupil in training them in the elementary principles upon those subjects which the pupil has under consideration. In passing through the several grades from the primary to the higher departments of the institution, we readily perceive the intellectual development of the pupil from the a b c to the most abstruse proposition of Euclid. In watching closely these various grades in which these scholars are respectively located in accordance with the acquirements of their intellectual development, that we discover the grandeur of the systematizing of this classification in our Public Schools, not only in this city, but we might say with great propriety it is the American system not any too well known in the European schools.

By virtue of this gradation we discover that the pupil makes most rapid progress and proficiency in their respective studies, all of which is the result of excellent order and splendid government. Then again, the division of studies through a series of years facilitates the methodical manner in which each of these studies are taught through the speciality of a teacher that more proficiency is attained on the part of the pupil. And thus by the co-operative effort of the entire corps of teachers the scholars in a few years attain an excellent common school education. It is noticeable under our American system of training that the pupil is allowed to exercise an independence of mind in giving their ideas independent of the books and clothe their thoughts in their own language. This practice is allowed in the schools from the peculiarity of our political institutions. Whereas under the continental system, independence of thought is not allowed especially in the German States where the common mind is trained with a view of making the scholar a soldier of the nation who is made a moving thing on the checker board of military despotism. Thus you perceive from the practical results of the American and European systems you have in the one the independence of action where the mind is allowed to exercise its normal powers, the grandeur of which developes a splendid manhood and womanhood in all their intellectual and moral faculties and from which our civilization has attained its high standard under our present form of government. We perceive from the other, misery, discord and despotism is the fruit of the want of the exercise of independent action on the part of the pupil who afterwards becomes a subject of the State.

The peculiarity of the Continental and American schools is distinctly discovered in one other respect. There is not a commonalty in purpose of its organization. The American system differs widely from the European in this particular. With us, it is the institution of the people, by the people, and for the people, and supported by and nurtured by the people, and all its scholars are on a level of equality and have an equal chance in the development of their intellectual powers. Whilst on the other hand, it is perceptibly seen in Great Britain, and on the Continent, that their organizations are not for the common purpose of the great masses, schools for the castes of society, the merited poor, not the aristocracy, or the respectable gentry. The differences of these systems we readily perceive arises from the peculiarity of political forms of government and society, and consequently, these schools radiate their influences correspondingly upon the standard of civilization as is seen in the respective systems of government. We might elaborate upon our theme, but suffice it to say from personal inspection of the several schools throughout the Continental States of Europe, and the British Isles, there is nothing in their systems of teaching and government that begin to compare with the common schools of the several States of the Union, and with faults that we may find in our schools, for we have not reached that development that we are gradually drifting thitherward, a more perfect system than yet attained, we ought to rejoice that we have so glorious an institution in training the child in its intellectual, moral and social development who is the ward of the State and from whom the powers of the government are ultimately derived.

To the intelligent enquirer, and observer of human institutions, we are desirous to learn, what is the effect of our American system of education upon the future welfare of the boys and girls who leave our schools, colleges and other institutions of learning. This is a very important question, and being a practical people, we are also ambitious to learn what are the practical effects of our common school system on the industries of the nation. It is by our fruits we are known. The child has graduated with the accomplishments of a cultivated mind, he finds that his training in too many instances has unfitted him for the muscular duties of life. The professions, he discovers are crowded. To attain even a moderate position in any so called honorable occupation where some menial services are required, the tendency of his training, or the influences by which he is surrounded, he looks upon these pursuits with an eye of singular abhorrence. We find to-day under the remarkable inventive genius of the age, the multiplicity of labor saving machinery, that the boy who graduates from our schools and with all the learning he possesses that there is no opportunity of putting his knowledge to a practical purpose for the want of an opening to learn a trade. The master mechanic will not take him to learn the mechanical art, for the simple reason labor saving machinery does the work, or a poor ignorant European will do such menial services which our boasted American system by some means has taught him to despise. And yet on the other hand, the constant cry for some faithful competent employee is wanted in nearly all the avenues of industries, and it is somewhat difficult to fill them from our native element that we have trained and we therefore have to draw from the Celtic or Teutonic races who have been taught not to despise labor which is the source of all wealth. Thus in the European system of common schools they have the advantages over our system in supplying the market with abundance of productive labor. These hordes of emigrants coming to our shores are the only people we may depend upon in the development of our Territories, and where they will realize future homes that will overflow with the abundance of the fruits of the earth, and make the heart glad in their temporal prosperity. Unless our youth put to use their knowledge and not allow their pride, poverty, and intelligence effect them, they will soon discover their much or little learning will make them discontented and unfaithful citizens of society if they do not take a different course in applying their knowledge to the more practical details in life.

These are some of the complaints made with our American system of teaching. But I contend it is not so much the fault of the system as it is that of the graduated pupil. By the time he leaves the school, his common sense certainly ought to have taught him, the schools never promised him that his acquirements should be a matter of adornment. He must put into practice what he has learned, and that by down right mental and physical labor. A generous public has done nobly by him to give the advantages that he has enjoyed in obtaining his education, and he must reciprocate in return for these privileges, in becoming a useful member of the state by his industry, and economizing all his energies in some practical occupation. We were much pleased with the excellent government throughout all the grades in the school. It is evidence of excellent discipline on part of teachers and principal. The buildings, desks, walls and other appurtenances are not cut or marked as is too commonly the case with other schools; this all shows fine government. The reformatory department is worthy of honorable mention in the disciplining of refractory boys, its influence on the other pupils is most salutary as well with the obstinate youth himself.

If we have any kindly suggestions to make, we would recommend a new building upon the site of the old frame structure on Fourth street. It is worn out and really a dangerous school house for the little ones who are regular attendants. The public may complain as more taxation will be required to meet these demands upon us, but ever bear in mind the school population is constantly on the increase, and their requirements must be met. Then again, there is but one other matter to suggest, and that is if we wish to elevate and maintain our system to a superior standard, and also encourage the best talent in the profession of teaching, we must compensate it with better salaries, especially in the Intermediate and Primary departments. It is a crying shame to the American and Continental systems that the compensation for this most noble pursuit is too meagre and inadequate in its support, that our instructors who remain at their posts during the best of their days die at last in indigent circumstances, victims of ungrateful republics, kingdoms and empires.

Services at St. Mary's on Trinity Sunday.

A Solemn High Mass was celebrated at 10:30 A. M., the Celebrant being Rev. Charles J. Kelley, Rev. Michael Downes, of Jersey City Heights, Deacon, and Rev. John Dowd, Vice President of Seton Hall College, sub-Deacon, Rev. John P. Morris, Pastor of St. Mary's, Master of Ceremonies. The occasion was the first grand High Mass by the officiating celebrant, Rev. C. J. Kelley, who was ordained priest by Archbishop Corrigan in the Cathedral, Newark, on Tuesday 7th inst. This young man is a native of Plainfield, where he has always resided, except when attending his theological studies at Seton Hall College. The church was crowded on the occasion to see the young priest, who a few short years since was a child in the parish. An altar boy in our midst in the old church, from his childhood his desire, his vocation, was to be a priest. This impression on his young mind was fostered and encouraged by his good mother. All that was impressive and beautiful in our holy religion, took deep root in his heart and mind. The youthful priest appeared on the altar, with complexion fair and ruddy, the forehead thoughtful, the hair in profusion, light and curling, his countenance benign and full of sweetness and innate modesty. With justifiable pride, he has returned to his native city and the parish in which he was born, to offer up the holy sacrifice of the Mass in our beautiful new church of St. Mary's. The occasion was invested with all the splendor of the Catholic ritual. To the uninitiated, many of the brilliant ceremonials are full of mystery, but to the well instructed Catholic, they convey a solemn and impressive lesson. Everything that he sees and hears, has a deep and significant meaning. The tapers that blaze upon the altar; the flowers that shed their perfume around it; the crucifix placed upon its summit; the vestments of the officiating priests; the music, each and all of these speak to the Catholic of the great mysteries of heavenly beauty. In the little taper he sees the light of faith; in the perfume of the flowers and incense, he breathes the sweet odor of charity; in the image of his crucified Saviour, he reads the history of Calvary illumined with the bright rays of hope; in the vestments of the priest he sees the emblems of the suffering God-man, and in the music he hears the voices of the angels. The sermon was preached by Rev. Father Michael Downes. He took his text from the Gospel for Trinity Sunday. The Rev. gentleman's remarks were befitting the occasion, well chosen and eloquent. He said we had here before us, one well known to most of those present; he came to us fresh with the odor of the oil of consecration, to impart to us his blessing. He also referred in eloquent terms, the dignity of the priesthood, as being next to that of God himself. The heat of summer and the cold of winter, are both by him alike unheeded. If the infant requires baptism; the young, instruction; the betrothed, their marriage; the pious, their communion; the guilty to unburden their conscience; the penitent to be absolved from sin, or the dying to be consoled with the last affecting sacraments of his religion. For all and each of these, the Catholic priest is ready and willing to devote each hour, to surrender all personal comfort, to risk his health or safety, and even to die in the fulfillment of his duty. This is the universal spirit of the true Catholic priest, of which this young man is a prototype. The Rev. speaker remarked, he would have liked that this event had taken place in the old St. Mary's church, where the associations of the past, would commingle with the present. Many of those near and dear, father, mother and brother had gone. Yet I will add truly to us all;

"The sorrows, the joys of which once they were part, Still round us, like visions of yesterday, throng."

"SEMPER FIDELIS."

WESTFIELD WISPS.

The fact that vegetable and fruit men come and go, but Ben Woodruff goes on forever, is true and probably due to the fact that he always keeps a good assortment at reasonable prices. Success attend you, Ben.

Mr. James Boyden, a former resident, is to be congratulated upon the addition to his family of a son. This happy event transpired at Lebanon, Hunterdon Co., this State, on the 8th inst. Accept our congratulations, Jim.

The changing of the lamp posts from the outside to the inside sidewalk line, on Elm Street, is a wise one. The trees previously interfering decidedly with the light. This change was made by Lamp Superintendent Pfeiffer.

McNiel, our artist painter, has completed his decorations to "Aldorado Villa" the property of A. A. Drake, and has been busy during the last week at the Hotel property. His services are evidently appreciated.

Dr. C. E. Aghirre, our popular Dentist, deserves the thanks of the community for his circulation of a very complete letter pamphlet upon the "Teeth, natural and artificial," giving fullest information as to their proper care. Those not already supplied can secure copies upon application at the Doctor's office.

Mr. Nathaniel Ellis, of Elizabeth, read an "Essay on Books," in the Lyceum Course, on Tuesday evening last. Admission was free and the audience, though not large, was very select. Mr. Ellis' subject proved a very interesting one and was attentively listened to. One of the pleasant features of the occasion was the singing of the Vocal Society of Westfield.

The irrepressible "Darsh" still continues his peculiar advertising methods. His horse attached to his business wagon being left standing untied in front of Mr. Woods' residence, by its driver on Friday last, concluded to make for "Home, Sweet Home" and arrived there after leaving a couple of wagon wheels with the post at the turn into the lane on Elm Street.

One of our citizens of trading proclivities became the possessor of a cow last week, but lingering a little too long over the trade, did not start for home until a late hour. As he personally attached the cow to the rear of his wagon, he was decidedly surprised on arriving home to find the animal missing. It was found on the following day at the residence of its original owner.

Mr. Chauncey B. Ripley, while driving his team on the Boulevard last Sunday, left them for a moment to re-place a bar in the fence. The team taking advantage of his absence started on a run for home, fortunately arriving there safely with no greater damage than leaving robes, whip, seat, &c., in the road. The ever faithful "Fritz" drove them back in search of his master, and greatly to his relief found him uninjured.

The thunder storm that visited us on Tuesday morning last at about 5 o'clock, proved to be the most severe that has visited this township in many years. A bolt struck the house of Mr. David Miller on Elm street, demolishing the chimney so that it will have to be rebuilt from the second floor. This bolt appears to have divided, a portion passing down the tin leader and expending its force in the cistern, cutting off in its progress the water connections to the house. Fortunately, although the family were all at home, no one was injured. Mr. Miller's son was asleep in bed within three feet of the chimney, on the second floor, and the marks of the lightning are plainly visible on the wall. His escape is miraculous. The damage altogether to the house was about $100. The Presbyterian church was also struck, the fluid apparently coming down the lightning rod to the roof where imperfect connections of the rod diverted it to the tin gutter and from that to the leader passing down. This it broke out through the side and followed the iron fence until it reached the front gate, which, fortunately being open, stopped its freaks. In its course on the fence it split posts wherever the iron rods failed to connect. The damage is small consisting of half a dozen broken posts, leader and the breaking out of two lengths of lightning rod. It is a fact to not only be surprised about, but thankful for, that in neither case did fire take place, and that the damage was so light.

A fine dog, the property of Mr. H. O. Bates, showing signs of hydrophobia on Friday last, was shot.

The attention of those desiring to purchase horses, carriages, harness, &c., is called to the sale at auction on Thursday next, the 23d inst., of the entire outfit of the Westfield Livery Stable.

The Westfield Athletic Club have decided to give "Club Championship Games" on July 4th. The events will be as follows; 100 yard dash, 120 yard hurdle, 220 yard run, 440 yard run. Handsome silver medals will be given to the winners in each event.

The members of the "Westfield Minstrel Troupe," whose good entertainments have been so thoroughly enjoyed by our citizens in the past, have kindly tendered a "Complimentary Benefit" to their fellow artist and able business manager Mr. A. E. Wilcox. This pleasant event will take place on the evening of Thursday, the 29th inst., and not only deserves but will unquestionably receive the hearty support of our citizens.

Considerable discussion has been caused by the promulgation of the views of one of our leading horsemen, that the interests of our citizens, as to safety and comfort, should induce them to adopt a rule to approach the Depot by one drive and leave it by the other. The idea is a very sensible one and we see no reason against its adoption. The placing of sign boards with the words Entrance and Exit on them at the North Avenue approaches, would do much to inaugurate this desirable change.

The Grand Musical Festival given at Lyceum Hall on Wednesday evening last, under the supervision of W. Henry Elston, the popular principal of our Public school proved indeed a grand one, both as a musical treat and as well as to attendance and consequently financial results, the hall being literally packed. The perfect training of the children of the school, one hundred in number, in the songs rendered by them, was without doubt a great surprise to the audience and could challenge comparison in this respect with any school in the State. The fresh young voices of the children reminding the listener of singing birds. Their singing was all the more remarkable when it is considered that they sang for the first time with an orchestra, and under a strange leader. Prof. Barringer, however, deserves great credit for his leadership, both of the singing and the orchestra. The different portions of the programme were all finely rendered; the solos on Violin, Cornet, Flute and Clarionet deserve especial mention. Prof. Elston's success in this Concert gives our citizens the hope that we may listen to other efforts of his in this line at an early day.

After long continued and urgent solicitation on the part of citizens of this township, our fellow townsman, Mr. J. S. Irving, the proprietor of the Lumber and Coal business in connection with the factory property opposite at the Central avenue crossing of the railroad, finally consented last Spring to add to the facilities of his property by the introduction of steam power. Sufficient time has now elapsed to enable us to render intelligent judgement on the benefits derived, and the result is highly satisfactory. It has enabled the residents of this as well as adjacent townships in want of Doors, Sash, Blinds, Mouldings, Brackets &c., to secure promptly goods needed, where hitherto they had been obliged to purchase at distant points, aside from the fact of the saving in cost. That the enterprise on the part of Mr. Irving has received its due appreciation from the public, may easily be known from the fact that from the day of its opening until the present time, sufficient work has been ordered to keep the factory running almost to its full capacity, and it looks now as if it might be necessary to add additional facilities at an early date. The steam and machinery fitting was done under the supervision of J. N. Schenck of Plainfield, and its use has already demonstrated the thoroughness of his work. The power is given by a twenty-five horse power engine supplied by a boiler of thirty horse power.

One of the pleasantest occasions of the kind that it has ever been our privilege to participate in, was "Children's Day," at the M. E. Church, on Sunday last. Nature itself seemed determined to do its best for the little ones and furnished a bright beautiful day as its offering. The programme published in our last issue was faithfully carried out with the exception of the Address by Dr. A. P. Miller (who was unavoidably prevented from being present). The children assembled promptly at 10 o'clock in the Lecture Room, and under the direction of their beloved Superintendent, Mr. R. R. Sinclair, and his efficient assistants, proceeded to the places assigned them in the body of the Church. The decorations were very beautiful—flags, banners, flowers, birds, &c., being distributed in a very tasteful manner. The Church was literally packed, standing room being at a premium. After the Organ Voluntary, by Miss May Ferris, the Pastor, Rev. Warren L. Hoagland, opened the morning service with prayer, followed by a very able and interesting sermon—taking for his subject "The influence of little things." An appeal being made for $100 to assist the Sunday School in replenishing their Library, it was replied to by a subscription on the part of the audience to the amount of $212. The morning services were then concluded by the entire audience joining in the Doxology. The afternoon services commenced promptly at 2:25. Seats were reserved upon the platform for the clergy of Westfield and the Superintendents of the different Sunday Schools and their assistants, together with the speakers of the day. The services were opened by prayer by the Rev. Valentine Buck. The singing by the children and the members of Zion's Mission School, was very good. The Mission was organized only a year ago by those veteran Sunday School workers, Messrs. David Sayer, Phineas Pearsall and the Rev. Valentine Buck, and considering the necessity of better accommodations for the purpose, has prospered far beyond the expectations of its founders. Mr. John Y. Foster's Address, subject, "Character" based on the life of Jonathan, was very interesting. Rev. Mr. Noall, pastor of the Congregational Church, followed, recognizing the advanced stand taken by the M. E. Church in their "Children's Day," trusting that it would speedily be demonstrated to all the necessity of interesting the youth in divine and Christ-like things. The pastor here relinquished his place upon the programme to the "grandfather" of the children, Mr. Case, who delivered a very effective address, expressing his great joy in being permitted to be present and enjoy the pleasant occasion. The Cornet Accompaniments to the Organ by Mr. Chas. Day, a member of the School, entitle him not only to the thanks of the audience but to their belief that few can use this instrument more effectively. His "Echo Song" and "Sweet By and By" were particularly good. In the evening the pastor delivered a very able discourse upon "Duty to God" and the necessity of early striving to love and serve him. If the credit for this day of so great interest is due to one more than another, we can only state the opinion of the public that the Superintendent of the School, Mr. R. R. Sinclair, deserves the credit. His untiring exertions in this as in all good work, are not only recognized but, we trust, fully appreciated by our citizens.

Who meekly blushed while he began
Her poor dead husband's will to scan;
He smiled while thinking of his fee—
Then said to her, so tenderly,

He wondered what on earth he said?

ROSE COLD AND HAY FEVER.

MESSRS. WHITE & BURDICK, Druggists, Ithaca, N. Y.—I can recommend Ely's Cream Balm to relieve all persons suffering with Rose Cold and Hay Fever. I have been a great sufferer from the same complaints; have had great relief by using the Balm. I have recommended it to many of my friends for Catarrh, and in all cases where they have used the Balm freely have been cured. T. KENNEY, Dry Goods Merchant, Ithaca, New York. Sept. 6, 1880.

MESSRS. WM. HUNT & SONS, Druggists, New Brunswick, N. J.: since boyhood I have been troubled with Catarrh and Hay Fever, and have been unable to obtain permanent relief until I used Ely's Cream Balm, which has cured me. After a few day's use I could sleep all night, which I could not do before. R. L. CLICKENER, New Brunswick, N. J. Price 50 cents. jl7w2

WOMEN WHO SUFFER FROM TERRIBLE HEADACHES.

I used "Favorite Remedy for those severe Sick-headaches I spoke about, and it has entirely cured me. You may use my name, if you choose, among those who so freely testify to the value of your medicine. I owe the restoration of my health to "Kennedy's Favorite Remedy."—Sarah J. Mindruff, Newburgh, N. AND SO DO OTHERS.

A gentleman of Swedesboro, N. J., says: "I have taken 'Kennedy's Favorite Remedy' for Kidney Complaint, and with the best results." So have thousands of other folks. Those who know "Favorite Remedy" never think of taking anything else for Kidney Complaint, Blood Disease, Rheumatism, and scores of common ills. It is a household friend, and costs you only one dollar to put a bottle in your stall. "Favorite Remedy" never fails. Dr. David Kennedy, Rondout, N. Y. jl7w2

RESCUED FROM DEATH.

The following statement of William J. Coughlin, of Somerville, Mass., is so remarkable that we beg to ask for it the attention of our readers. He says: "In the fall of 1876 I was taken with a violent bleeding of the lungs followed by a severe cough. I soon began to loose my appetite and flesh. I was so weak at one time that I could not leave my bed. In the summer of 1877 I was admitted to the City Hospital. While there the doctors said I had a hole in my left lung as big as a half dollar. I expended over a hundred dollars in doctors and medicines. I was so far gone at one time a report went around that I was dead. I gave up hope, but a friend told me of DR. WM. HALL'S BALSAM FOR THE LUNGS. I laughed at my friends, thinking that my case was incurable, but I got a bottle to satisfy them, when to my surprise and gratification, I commenced to feel better. My hope, once dead, began to revive, and to-day I feel in better spirits than I have the past three years.

"I write this hoping you will publish it, so that every one afflicted with Diseased Lungs will be induced to take DR. WM. HALL'S BALSAM FOR THE LUNGS, and be convinced that CONSUMPTION CAN BE CURED. I have taken two bottles and can positively say that it has done more good than all the other medicines I have taken since my sickness. My cough has almost entirely disappeared and I shall soon be able to go to work." Sold by druggists. 1 3

One peculiarity of the A. S. T. Co. Black Tip for children's shoes is, that it is independent of the upper, and fully protects it from wear at the toe without endangering the upper from ripping, as is the case where heavy bungling caps are sewed on to protect the toe.

Statistics often prove unwelcome facts and none more so than that twenty per cent. of the people of this State die from consumption and kindred diseases. The great question now is to reduce this terrible mortality has engaged the minds of our most eminent scholars and physicians. From the testimonials of thousands who have used ANDREWS' ELIXIR OF SULPHUR, nothing in the way of medicine has ever done so much toward that end. In all afflictions of the throat and lungs its remedial effect is simply wonderful. Once introduced into every household it would banish the terror of this disease from the land. Sold by A. PENSION CLAIMS.

The War Department has issued the following circular, which is important to all who have claims for pension: "There being now pending in this department great numbers of volunteer pension claims which cannot be satisfactorily verified for want of information which missing records of discontinued volunteer commands would afford, and it having transpired in many instances that officers of the late volunteer forces have still in their possession or under their control books and other records pertaining to their corps, divisions, brigades, regiments and companies, their attention is called to the fact that all such books and records should be deposited with this office, and they are earnestly requested to cause the same to be forwarded without delay to the Adjutant General of the Army, at Washington, District of Columbia.

No expense, other than postage or proper express charges (when packages exceed four pounds, the limit for mail parcels), can be paid by the government."

Peter U. W. Flynn has been convicted of stuffing ballot boxes in Jersey City at the spring election.

MISCELLANEOUS.

SAD ACCIDENT.

MR. OSCAR CRAIG Blown Up by a Premature Blast in the Rosendale Cement Quarry—Destruction of an Eye—Its Subsequent Removal by Surgical Operation.

Mr. Oscar Craig was foreman in a cement quarry at Rosendale, Ulster Co., N. Y. By an explosion one day in the quarry he lost an eye—lost it totally. Under an impression that the matter was less serious the local physician told Mr. Craig that his eye was not lost wholly, but could be saved by treatment. The experiment was tried and failed. Worse remained behind, for he was in danger of losing the other also, through sympathetic inflammation. In this strait he consulted Dr. David Kennedy, of Rondout, N. Y., who told him the injured eye must be taken out to save the other. To this Mr. Craig demurred, and went back home in doubt. His local physician said: "Go to New York." To New York the patient went, and one of the most eminent oculists in the country, having looked at the case, said: "You have lost one eye entirely, go back and do what you can to save the other." Briefly Dr. Kennedy removed the ruined eye, and treated Mr. Craig with "Kennedy's Favorite Remedy" to build up his system, and the result was successful.

Dr. Kennedy's great success as a Surgeon is due to the use of "Favorite Remedy" in the after treatment.

Are you troubled with Dyspepsia, Liver Complaint, Constipation, or derangement of the Kidneys and Bladder, then use Dr. Kennedy's "Favorite Remedy." It will not disappoint you. "Dr. Kennedy's Favorite Remedy" for sale by all druggists. jun4

SEASON 1881.
IDOL!
[Formerly Peck's IDOL,]

By the great Mambrino Chief founder of the Mambrino family; 1st dam by American Eclipse, son of Duroc (founder of the Star family) by imported Diomed. Dam of American Eclipse, Miller's Damsel, by imported Messenger; 2d dam, Kitty Mate by Bishop's Hambletonian; 3d dam, Emma Jenkins, by Sir William of Transport; 4th dam by Orphan, son of Ball's Florizel; 5th dam by imported Bedford; 6th dam by imported Dove.

IDOL is a rich dark bay, weighs 1,100 lbs., with high hind feet white, full sixteen hands high, a horse of great substance, fine temper, elegant trotting action, record 2:41½ as a four-year old, distancing the field, and at five years old showed 2:33, third heat, to wagon. As a six year old he made his first season in the stud, but the war prevented the development of his progeny. Few of his colts have been trained, but those few are mostly fast. Lady Girl, 16 hands high, won Beacon, Mystic, and Prospect Park stakes for four year olds during 1871, obtained a record of 2:30½. This mare at that age could beat 2:20, and at Prospect Park trotted during her race a half mile in 1:10¼, and a quarter in 33½ seconds—a 2:12 gait. As a five year old she met with an accident which ended her turf career. Barbara Patchen, in 1879, as a big 16½ hand green 5 year old mare, won all her races in a row, and the seventh heat, on a half-mile track, gained record 2:34½. Don, at Topeka, Kansas, won his race in 2:33. Wayne won colt stakes at Hartford. Nannette trotted, 3 years old, in 2:44. Ideal, same age, trotted in 2:46, and John K., in 1880, gained a record of 2:38 on a half mile track at Utah, N. Y., and won first money in all his races. There are others that will drop into the 2:30 list this year without doubt.

IDOL will be limited to 20 mares, besides those engaged, at $50.00 the season, money payable (or secured) at service.

Good care and pasture furnished at $3 per month. All accidents and escapes at owners' risk. IDOL and some of his colts can be seen at the grazing farm of D. F. CARLE, Stirling, Morris Co., New Jersey.

Breeders desiring an outcross should call and see IDOL, and after seeing him, judge for themselves.

THE NEW BUSINESS
OF THE
EQUITABLE
Life Assurance Society of the U. S.
FOR THE YEAR 1880, WAS OVER
Thirty-Five Millions of Dollars,
The Largest Business Done by any Company in the World.

REASONS FOR THIS RESULT.

The Equitable is the strongest Company in the United States.

Its policies are, by their own express terms, made incontestable after three years. (For precise terms see form of policy contract.)

ALL such incontestable policies are paid immediately after receipt of satisfactory proof of the death of the insured, and without even the customary delay of sixty or ninety days.

EACH ordinary policy provides for a definite surrender-value in paid-up assurance, in case the policy is forfeited after three years from its date and is surrendered within a reasonable time thereafter.

BY THE TONTINE SAVINGS FUND plan of assurance, returns to policy-holders, after the expiration of what is called the Tontine period, are greater than are obtainable on any other system. Actual settlements of Tontine policies have been made in which policy-holders have withdrawn amounts varying from eighty to one hundred and twenty per cent. of premiums paid, besides enjoying a life insurance indemnity during the period. No other company can show such results.

THE TONTINE plan is the only one devised by which a person may withdraw from his insurance contract at specified periods, receiving the entire reserve and surplus accumulations in cash.

ALL the ordinary forms of insurance with annual dividends of profits, both cash and reversionary, are issued by this Society.

ASSETS, - $41,108,602.
SURPLUS, - $9,228,294.

No business for the last ten years (represented by the new policies issued) has been larger than that of any other Company.

HER WAITING.

Clarence and Caryl both paused at the sight of her, making the fairest picture they had since they started on their sketching tour, a month before.

It was midsummer now—mid July—a fervent, sunny day; and they had lounged along the country road leisurely; until the ardent heat and weariness, and perhaps just a little laziness, induced them to get off the regular road, in among the great wooded slopes on the hillside, where a little rivulet of clear water foamed and lashed itself down from some icy mountain spring away up in the solemn fastness among the clouds.

And in among the flickering shadows, standing in the crystal brook, holding her blue calico skirts up in her little sunburnt hands, so that the lovely contour of her ankles was so innocently displayed—the little, battered hat of grass-and-daisy-wreathed straw hanging on her bare arm—her dark, lustrous-dark, hair gently blowing in the breeze—her great, wondering, dark eyes shyly watching the approaching travelers, who had halted so suddenly—it certainly was as charming a pastoral picture as imagination could have intended, with all the accessories of flickering sunshine and solemn shadow, purling water and sighing wind.

"What a picture!" Clarence said, almost reverently. "What a face! See those eyes, Caryl!"

Caryl laughed.

"Very pretty—very pretty indeed.—But, as long as she has discovered us, we may as well go forward. Its gloriously cool and refreshing here, but I dare say we've a five-mile tramp ahead of us yet before we catch up with the rest of 'em."

They continue until they came up to the little brook, that effectually cut off their progress.

Then, Clarence lifted his hat, and smiled his own gracious smile that had set so many foolish woman-hearts to thinking of him.

"Tell us, please, if this is Maumee creek; and is there any way of getting over?"

Her little scarlet mouth suddenly parted, in a bright, sunny smile.

"It is Maumee creek, sir, and there are two ways of crossing it, if you don't mind a little trouble."

She looked down at their booted feet then up again at Clarence's admiring face.

"I don't believe we would object to following any advice you would give."

That same sweet caressing tone in his voice that Edith Sartoris thought the sweetest music in all the world—that even at that very minute she was thinking of and yearning to hear, as, sitting in her room at a seaside hotel, she was reading his letter to "his own little darling!"

And Gordon Caryl saw that the same look brightened in this little rustic maiden's eyes, the same half delicious, half-shy flush delicately tinting her clear brunette face, that he had seen in so many other women's faces.

"You can either wade across, sir, or jump over—it isn't more than six or seven feet wide."

A roguish little look rose in her eyes as she suggested both plans.

Clarence turned to Caryl, who had stood all the while quiet and grave; but then Caryl usually was quiet and grave for all he was considered the "best fellow of the lot."

"Shall we draw lots for a decision?" he asked.

And for an answer, Caryl sprang forward and cleared the little, shallow rushing stream with a bound.

Clarence assumed an expression of injured pain.

"I wouldn't have believed it of you, Caryl! I never was an acrobat, but I can assure you I have no intention of being left out in the cold this way."

And, with his matchless grace and coolness, he sat comfortably down on a mossrock and removed his low handsome shoes, and gray, crimson clocked stockings, displayed shapely feet, white as a woman's.

And then he stepped in the stream, and when beside the young girl, paused and bowed.

"Will you let me escort you to the bank in safety?"

It would have been impossible not to have been amused by his mock, elaborate courtesy; and she smiled shaking her head:

"Thank you! It is not at all necessary."

And then they all three stood on the opposite shore, where Clarence donned silk hose and Oxford ties again.

Not till then did Caryl take any part in the conversation.

"We are on our way to Red Rock Lake," he said, courteously. "We are not positively sure we are on the shortest road, or how much further we have to travel. If you could tell us, Miss—"

A grave little smile supplied the interrogative in this question.

"My name is Estelle, and I can tell you what you wish to know; but you are on the wrong road, if you mean to join the camping out party on the lake, up in the mountains. By this road you will have fifteen miles to go."

Clarence gave a dismal exclamation.

"Fifteen miles! and high noon already! That is appalling news, Miss Estelle; but of course you cannot know our knapsacks are empty, and I am expiring of starvation."

She watched his debonair, handsome face so earnestly, yet so modestly, while he spoke; then she turned proudly toward Caryl.

"If you will be willing to stop at our cottage, a half-mile up yonder," and she pointed away up among almost impassable wooden slopes, "I will be glad to give you your dinners. Grandma and Uncle Thuel will be pleased to see you, and it is directly on the right road to the camp. I can show you the tents from our house—the lake is just below, on the other side of the mountain."

Her ready, fluent speech, refined and gentle spoken, her sweet half-reserved, wholly dignified manner, were most charming and girlish, and Caryl accepted her invitation readily.

"We will be only too glad and grateful. Come, Clarence, you're equal to climbing the mountain, I hope?"

Clarence sent a glance to Estelle's eyes.

"With such a guide I'd follow the world over!"

Then, with a swift frown of displeasure darkening on Caryl's face, the meaning of which he well knew, he purposely dropped behind him, and walked side by side with the silent, loving young creature.

"Estelle! It just fits you, that soft, sweet, melodious name." She flushed a trifle.

"I am glad you like it—I never did. I shall now," she added in a curious, solemn little undertone.

And their eyes met—only for a brief look; after that Estelle scarcely spoke a word on the toilsome up-hill journey.

But the arrival! Tired, heated, hungry, though they were, they paused in rapturous ecstasy at the magnificent sight spread below them—the glorious expanse of lake and forest, and lower hills and winding river, distant town and nestling villages. "And you live here?"

Caryle looked at her as though she were a saint.

She laughed—her happy, girlish laugh.

"I have always lived here and I love the place dearly."

With charming delicacy she left them alone with the silent scene that entranced them so; and then, a few minutes afterward returned, accompanied by a middle-aged man, with a bronzed, pleasant face.

"These are the gentlemen, Uncle Thuel," she said, and then flitted away again, to leave the men to become better acquainted.

Then they had dinner, at which a sweet-faced white-haired old lady presided with homely, hearty grace.

Hours afterward when, for the first time in all her life Estelle stole off by herself purposely to think of a man's handsome face and sweet caressing voice, she tried to realize how it all came about that Mr. Algernon Clarence—she knew his name well enough by this time—how he had managed, after dinner, while his friend was talking with Uncle Thuel about hunting and fishing thereabouts, to find her out among the trees, and have a pleasant, long talk with her; when he told her such kindly, friendly things, and how he hoped to be allowed to come again often, while the camping out party remained at the lake.

And then he told her that very night when dark came he should look up to the cottage perched up on the mountain side, and if he saw always a light in the highest front window—the little window away up in the peak of the roof—he would know she was thinking of him. Would she do it, if he would agree to hang a little white flag out every day.

It was something so new to her, so romantic, so strangely, inexpressibly sweet, and, with her young girl's heart thrilled to its very centre, Estelle shyly promised; and—now they were gone. To-morrow would he remember or forget the the little flag—the sign that he thought of her?

And the first thing her eager eyes saw, when she looked down through the clearing mists in the valley, next sunrise, was the pure white flag, blowing exultant in the crisp westerly breeze!

And at night, as handsome Clarence lay stretched on his hammock, ready to go to sleep the last object his lazy, blue eyes saw was a tiny point of light like some near-by star, away up on the silent mountain side!

* * * * *

The bright summer day passed away, and many and many a time Clarence idled away many a delicious hour with the girl, who had learned to watch for his coming, as the flowers crave the glad sunshine.

Often, Caryl came—grave, kindly, always bringing a happy smile to Estelle's face, ever receiving a glad welcome; for—was he not his friend?

And so the summer days past away, and the gay little party that had camped out on Red Rock Lake broke up, each going his way; and the last night that the steady little light, so like a star, shone down upon them from the hillside cottage, Caryl was there without Clarence—for an imperious message from fair Edith that day, had sent him speedily on his way to her, eager to see her and take her in his arms again; while the light burned in the upper window for him!

He had not gone to tell Estelle good-by. He was a little cowardly about it, for he knew he could not promise to see her ever again, and he dared not tell her about Edith Sartoris.

Caryl had spoken sharply to him about it—more sharply than he ever had spoken before—but Clarence had laughed it off.

And gone—out of Estelle's life.

That night the light gleamed steadily all the hour until the usual time for its extinguishment, shining not for the man who had loved her with all his heart and soul—Gordon Caryl, whom she liked because he was his friend.

That next day he went to say farewell, and there was nothing for him to do but to tell her just how it was, and then to witness her anguish, her proud, silent agony, that refused itself plaint or cry.

"If you could but forget him, Estelle! Can you not forget him, and let me love you? Oh, child! If you but only knew how I had loved you from the very first! If you but knew to what rest, and comfort and happiness, I would take you!"

Her quiet, white face awed him, as the face of the dead silences one.

"That can never be," she answered, simply.

"I could never learn to unlove him. And besides," and then a strange, wandering, far-away look came to her eyes that terrified him, because he saw that the awful sorrow was stealing her reason—"besides, I am very sure he will come back again, and if the light should not be burning—"

* * * * *

It has been fifty years since then, and Clarence and his frivolous wife led a cat-and-dog's life, until their grandchildren have learned to hold them in contempt; while away among the solemn and silent mountains there lives a silver-haired old woman, with a sad, silent face, the one chief business of whose life has been, for half a century, to keep ready for its nightly burning a little old-fashioned lamp.

And not a night has it ever been missing, shining like a star from the window of the little cottage, where Gordon Caryl and his sister have lived years and years, the true, fondest friends of the gentle, patient, pitiful old woman, who waits, and waits, and waits!

A LITERAL TRANSLATION.

The translators of the New Testament do not give a literal translation of all passages. In the Sunday School lesson of yesterday the unjust Judge is made to say in the King James version:

"Because this widow troubleth me I will avenge her, lest by her continual coming she weary me."

The new version is much the same, though the Judge is made to say:

"I will excuse her lest she wear me out by her continual coming."

Good Greek scholars say that the Judge, literally translated, says: "I will avenge her lest she box me in the eye." In explanation of this it may be assumed that the Judge is a rough fellow, and talking account of the persistency of this woman, ironically assumes that he is afraid if he refuses her justice that she will give him a black eye.

Proceedings of the Board of Chosen Freeholders of the County of Union, N. J.

[OFFICIAL.]

ELIZABETH, N. J., June 2d, 1881.

The Board of Chosen Freeholders of the county of Union met at the Court House on Thursday, June 2d, 1881, at 2 o'clock p. m. Regular meeting.

Present—Director Martine and Freeholders Briant, Clark, Doty, Eller, Forsyth, Hubbard, Isenmann, Mapes, Melick, Newbury, Runkle, Sullivan, Smith, Thompson—15. Absent, Freeholder Randolph.

The minutes of the last meeting were read (omitting bills ordered paid) and on motion approved as read.

COMMITTEE REPORTS.

The report of the Committee on Appropriations was presented, and reads as follows:

To the Honorable the Board of Chosen Freeholders of Union County:

GENTLEMEN:

Your committee appointed to examine and report the amounts to be raised for county expenses for the present fiscal year, would respectfully report, that after a careful consideration of the subject, comparing the appropriations and disbursements of former years, would recommend the following amounts:

I. CURRENT EXPENSES, TO WIT:

1st.	For courts	$27,000
2d.	For county jail	5,000
3d.	For lunatics	19,000
4th.	For compensation and lawful expenses of Chosen Freeholders, and committees and salaries of their officers	7,000
5th.	For fees of coroners	500
6th.	For elections	1,500
7th.	For stationery	1,200
8th.	For advertising, publishing and printing	1,700
9th.	For incidental expenses and schools	4,000

II. DEBT AND INTEREST, TO WIT:

1st.	Pay of principal of bonded debt	11,000
2d.	Payment of interest on bonded debts	27,000
3d.	Payment of temporary loans	40,000
4th.	Payment of bank interest on temporary loans	3,000

III. PUBLIC WORKS.

1st.	Permanent improvement of public buildings and grounds	4,000
2d.	Erection and repair of culverts and bridges	11,000

The next question for the consideration of your committee was as to the amount of uncollected taxes and cash on hand to deduct from the appropriation made above.

The evil of former years is still apparent, a large amount of taxes is yet unpaid. Some have for several years failed to pay their quota of State and County tax, while others have collected large amounts and expended them on local matters, leaving the State and County unpaid. Taxation in years past throughout the State, was often levied upon the theory that the amount ordered to be raised should be sufficiently large, so that the proportion collected should be ample to pay the demands on the county, and also meet the requirements of the State. This theory your present committee as well as several of the committees that have preceded them, have concluded to abandon, so that the levy may be as light as possible. Therefore we appropriate a portion of the taxes due the county, as well as cash on hand to meet the expenditures of the County during the present year. The amount of assets thus appropriated we recommend should be $48,200 and the balance $115,000 be raised by taxation.

We herewith submit the proper resolution in the matter.

All of which is respectfully submitted.

STARTLING.

The Attorney General of the State of New York has given an opinion in the matter of appointing a Receiver for the Manhattan Elevated Railway Company, and therein made this startling statement:—

Stock issued by the combined Elevated Companies $43,000,000—forty-three million dollars.

Actual cost of their construction $18,358,186.

"Watered," or more appropriately speaking, bogus stock issued $24,641,814 —nearly twenty-five million dollars.

That is startling, because it unquestionably applies to many other capitalized institutions in this country besides the New York Elevated Roads, and shows clearly how innocent investors are liable to be victimized and how sharp manipulators become bloated government bond-holders to the extent of millions.

It is time to not only raise a warning cry, but to adopt and enforce legal restrictions.

The Attorney General gives utterance to sentiments so sound and important that we quote his words as follows:

"Corporations when properly restrained and regulated by law, if they keep within the powers delegated to them and perform all their duties to the public, are useful, nay, indispensable agencies in carrying on the business of the country, and are essential to its growth and prosperity; but when they exceed their powers, violate their charters, issue fraudulent stock, refuse to pay their taxes and discharge other duties to the public, and are insolvent, the question is one that interests the whole people, and the people have the right to demand of the Attorney General that he take such proceedings as the law requires in the premises.

"The power of corporations for mischief and oppression as well as for good is very great.

"It is only by rigidly enforcing the laws in regard to them, and not permitting them to usurp any powers not granted that the people can be protected.

"The more powerful and aggressive the corporation is, the greater need exists on the part of the Courts and the Attorney General for active vigilance."

That is the right kind of talk and very seasonable.

THE CONTRAST.

The contrast between the Democratic party and its organised opposition was never more distinctly marked than at the present time, and nobly does it credit Democracy.

Confident in the high integrity of its avowed principles and the practical utility of its proposed measures, and trustingly relying upon the people for support, the party of Democracy occupies as strong a position before the whole country to-day as at any former period of its history.

Not so the Republican. Torn asunder by bitter personal animosities among its aspiring leaders, and sadly blotched with official and partisan corruption, its hold upon public favor is fast passing away.

We desire to deal only in facts, and charging corruption upon the Republican as an organized political party must be accepted as such, because recent developments afford positive proof. For the honor of the Republic we would it were otherwise.

The Republican party had origin in specific issues long since settled. It has outlived its purpose and, unfortunately, become more than aught else a wrangling arena for spoilsmen. That thousands of its most worthy members now deploringly admit.

Entirely different is the Democratic. Born with the Constitution and for the maintenance of the rights of States and People as guaranteed by that glorious compact of freedom and equity, it defends to-day the same principles of justice Jefferson boldly espoused, and seeks to reinaugurate the same policy of government that expanded the Union from thirteen feeble to nigh twoscore mighty commonwealths and made American citizenship the proudest title on earth.

Repulsed by a combination of powers not of the sovereign people, the Democratic party remains intact and fully prepared to renew the contest. One national defeat would be to the Republican an irreparable Waterloo.

THE CITY TO BE DIVIDED INTO WARDS, AND WHY.

It will be seen by reference to our report of the Council proceedings in another column, that an ordinance has been presented before that body, ordered engrossed and passed to its third reading, providing for the division of the city of Plainfield into four wards. The authority under which this is done may be found in Chapter CXLIII of the laws passed at the last session of the Legislature, the full text of which may be found in our issue of April 22d and the substance of which is as follows: "All cities not already divided into wards may be divided into two or more wards * * * The Common Council in any such city is hereby authorized and empowered to determine the number of wards into which such city shall be divided, and the boundaries of said wards, and is authorized and empowered to make such division accordingly." While the division is thus seen to be legal, it is not especially required by the act; and to the uninformed the reason why a partisan Council should thus allow the minority any chance of securing a representation, is not apparent on the face. The reason may be (we are only imagining) because if the city remains undivided as provided for by the law, Plainfield would then lose one of its present representation of two Republicans in the Board of Freeholders. A later law, Chapter CXCVIII—published by us, May 6th—enacts as shown by the following extracts: "All cities in this State shall be entitled to be represented by not less than two Freeholders * * * provided, that whenever any city shall, under the provisions of this act, be represented by two freeholders, they shall not be elected from the same ward * * * and provided further, that any city which has not been divided into wards shall be deemed to constitute one ward for the purposes of this act."

This, it will be understood, constitutes an excellent reason for the adoption of the ordinance, although, possibly, it may not have impelled its favorable consideration. Two Councilmen will henceforth be elected from each ward and three at large; thus allowing a chance for the minority to carry at least one ward—the fourth—although the residence therein of Messrs. Flanagan and Lyon may "wheel it into the Republican line." While we should have more fully endorsed the action had five been the number adopted, thus necessitating the election of but one Councilman at large, yet the long delayed division cannot but be a satisfactory change from the past state of affairs.

The Firemen's Relief Fund, which now amounts to $9,000 and is in the hands of Secretary Kelsey, is to be equally divided among 29 fire departments in this State.

James Vick, the florist, says that "white worms," or any other worms, in pots, may be destroyed by sticking three or four common matches down into the soil, also one or two up into the drain opening. The phosphorus on the match is certain death to animal life, and a powerful fertilizer for plants.

The balloting for Senators at Albany took a new phase on Wednesday last. On the 22d ballot, the name of Senator Jacobs was suddenly withdrawn, and for a time there was surprise and consternation depicted on the faces of Democrats. The withdrawal of Jacobs was at the request of the Senator himself, who stated that he was informed it was the intention of Governor Cornell to refuse to count any of the votes cast for him, as he considered Jacobs disqualified under the State Constitution from being elected to the United States Senate while serving as a member of the Legislature. In joint caucus the Democrats then selected Mr. Clarkson N. Potter as their candidate for the short term.

Common Council Proceedings.

MONDAY EV'G, June 20th, 1881.

Council met pursuant to adjournment. Members all present except Mr. Finch. Pres. Whiton in the chair.

Minutes of last meeting read and approved.

By Mr. Guion, claim of D. J. Marshall, one of the Com'rs of Assessment in the widening of Plainfield ave. in the year 1875, amounting, with interest, to $76.62. A com'n accompanied the claim asking for its payment. Also, claim of Bridget Quase, excess of damages in the widening of Plainfield ave., $52 62, with interest. On motion, ref'd to Law Com. Also claim of J. S. Cutter, rent of Council chamber and gas, $77 11. Ref'd to Salary Com.

By Mr. Tyler, an assigned claim of Rogers & Sayre to Berry & Thorn, surveys, etc., on Park avenue, action having been commenced to recover the amount with interest.

Mr. Tyler, by way of explanation, said that Mr. Berry was willing to settle the matter for the face of the claim, without interest, provided the Council would order an early settlement of the claim. He thought the proposition a fair one, and an easy way for the Council to get out of the difficulty. After some further discussion the claim was ref'd to Law Com., with instructions to confer with Corporation Counsel.

By Mr. Whiton, a com'n from His Honor, Mayor Randolph, in relation to having Council represented at a meeting of the Constitutional Commission to be held at Long Branch on Saturday, July 2d, 1881. On motion, tabled for action at a later stage of the proceedings.

By the same, a com'n from the Mayor submitting the name of James Martin as special policeman, and Richard Hapenny as an officer in relation to dogs. On motion, the above named were confirmed by acclamation.

By Mr. H. Smith, from Aud. Com., the following claims as correct: Plainfield Relief Ass'n, $40 45; D. J. Bolce, 35 45; A. D. Cook & Bro., 113 88. On motion, report rec'd and warrants ordered drawn for the several amounts. All aye, except Mr. Coriell, who stated that he could not vote for "interest-bearing warrants."

By Mr. Waring, from Fire, Water & Lamp Com., reporting adversely to petition of Wm. M. Jennings for a lean-to to his barn, and petition of Mr. Stickle to keep standing sign-post in front of his place of business on Madison ave. On motion, report rec'd and recommendation adopted.

By Mr. Guion, from Printing Com., as correct claims of Runyon & Leonard and W. L. Force & Bro., each $90 90. Ref'd to Aud Com.

By Mr. Coriell, from St. Com., as favorably upon petition of property owners residing on 7th St., for a change of grade. On motion, report accepted.

By the same, reported back claim of St. Com'r Wm. Hand. He said the work was not authorized to be done by him, (Coriell.) Considerable discussion prevailed, the St. Com'r wanted to explain but was ruled out of order by the Pres. Mr. Darling arose and said that it was personal feelings that Mr. Coriell had toward St. Com'r Hand, hence the reason for not signing the bill. Mr. Coriell emphatically denied the charge. He had no personal feelings against Mr. Hand or any other person.

Mr. Gilbert arose and said he did not think it was the right thing for one member to accuse another. He said he was a member of Council some years ago, and as a conscientious member he always found Mr. Coriell to be in the discharge of his every duty. After some further discussion the claim was ref'd back for further action by the St. Com.

The com'n of His Honor the Mayor in reference to the Constitutional Commission, was on motion of Mr. Tyler taken from the table.

Mr. Gilbert moved that the com'n be received, and that the chair appoint a committee to represent this Council at the Convention. Carried.

The Pres. stated that he would announce the Com. at a later stage of the meeting.

By Mr. Tyler, an ord. relative to dividing the city into 4 wards. On motion ordered to a 2d reading, engrossed and to a 3d reading. All aye, except Mr. Coriell, who was excused from voting.

By Mr. Coriell, an ord. to change grade of a portion of 7th St. On motion, ord. read 2d time, and ordered engrossed and to a 3d reading. All aye, except Mr. Whiton, who voted no.

By the same, a res. that Council appropriate $100 toward making the proposed change of grade on 7th St.

Mr. Gilbert thought that the res. was rather premature, and moved that the res. lie upon the table. Carried.

By Mr. Coriell, a res. that the Corporation Counsel be requested to give his written opinion in relation to the legality of that section of the tax ord. which provides for the raising of $900 for the support of a public library. Mr. C. was of the opinion that no section could be attached to an ord. after it had had its 2d reading and ordered to a 3d reading. He said his attention had been called several times by citizens to this portion of the tax ord. On motion, the res. was adopted, all aye.

By Mr. Tyler, that the res. laid upon the table at a meeting in May last in reference to curtailing the city's expenses, be taken from the table for action thereon. Carried.

After the reading of the res. by the clerk, and remarks by Messrs. Tyler, Gilbert and other members of the Council in the premises, it was on motion, ref'd to a Special Com. of three to be appointed by the chair, to take such action as they may deem best for the city's interest. The Pres. announced as the Com. Messrs. Tyler, Waring and Guion.

Mr. Gilbert moved that the com. to attend the Constitutional convention, consist of two, the number not being named in his former res. Carried.

The Pres. appointed Messrs. Gilbert and Tyler as the com.

By Mr. Tyler, a res. that the Collector of the city be directed by the Council not to receive any taxes due the city for the year 1880, warrants for which are now in the hands of Geo. W. Moore, unless authorized by Mr. Moore, and then that he be instructed to receive the taxes and arrears of interest and costs.

Upon a question being asked by Mr. Darling of Mr. Tyler for his reason in presenting the res., Mr. Tyler replied that the Constable was complaining that delinquent taxes at a less rate of interest than the legal rate, had been received by the Collector. He thought it was the duty of the Constable to have charge of the whole business.

After some further discussion, Mr. Gilbert offered as an amendment the striking out after the word "unless" and substituting "costs and interest shall be included in the payment." On motion, the amendment was carried, and the res. as amended, adopted.

By Mr. Coriell, an ord. relative to public pound. On motion, ref'd to Law Com.

By Mr. Tyler, a res. that the Council meet on Monday evening, July 11th, 1881, for the transaction of any business that may come before them. Adopted.

By Mr. Coriell, a res. that Corp. Counsel be instructed to take legal steps toward the collecting of State and County taxes.

This res. occasioned considerable discussion pro and con, and, upon a vote being taken upon the res. it was lost—Messrs. Coriell, Darling and A. H. Smith voting for, and Messrs. Guion, Gilbert, Hamilton, H. Smith, Tyler, Waring and Whiton against.

On motion, the rules were suspended in order to allow Mr. Waring, from Fire, Water & Lamp Com. to present the following claims: Plainfield Gas Co., $398 41; N. Y. & N. J. Globe Gas Co., 4 bills, amounting to $299 17. Ref'd.

On motion, Council then adjourned.

The Ball and Bat.

As a return for the defeat of two weeks previous, a nine composed of members of No's 1, 2 and 3 Hose companies, on Saturday last, won a very exciting match against the Plainfield Base Ball Association made up of young men employed in the Potter Press Works. The game was closely contested, although the Hose nine led from the start; and the score in detail is given below. Two wild throws of Sneiderwind, in the fifth and eighth innings, added eight unearned runs to the credit of the Hose nine, and naturally discouraged the other side. These were almost the only errors of the Potter men, however, who played the more brilliantly of the two nines—making double plays in the third, sixth and seventh innings, and a triple play in the ninth. The Hose nine although weak at second base, outbatted their opponents—seemingly able to knock Buckley's pitching all out of shape, while Snedeker's balls rolled off the bats of the Potter men in provoking fouls that were beautifully captured by Marsh and Nelson. The Hose nine's catcher also was very effective in guarding the "home plate"—putting out three at that point, who might otherwise have gained very much needed "tallies." Only one base was taken on called balls during the game, and that in the eighth inning when Flynn was pitching in Buckley's place. The catchers of both sides were very able players, and did much effective work. Nelson took a foul fly in the ninth inning and passed it to second base in time to make the only double play of the game for his nine. As now organized the two sides are very nearly matched, and it is not yet settled as to which is the stronger. Many other interesting games may, consequently, be expected before either can claim superiority. We would mildly advise the scorers to be a little more accurate regarding who is at the bat at the beginning of the innings. At two different times, when the Hose boys went to the bat, the wrong striker was called up and allowed to strike out of turn. The following is the score:

It would have been marvelous if a Sabbath had passed in New York city without a homicide or an attempt at one. John Short was stabbed at his own door in Charlton street last Sunday.

"Cool and pleasant and homelike," advertises a country boarding house. Cool and pleasant is all well enough, but homelike—never! We distinctly object to sailing hash for dinner on wash-day during the summer; and it is hardly fair that the country boarding house should encroach upon our winter domestic privileges.

Mr. Francis Oliver, of Mendham, narrowly escaped death by lightning one day last week. He had taken refuge from a shower under a huge tree but decided it was not the safest place in the world and left it, and had hardly proceeded fifty feet when a descending bolt of electricity shattered the tree and covered the ground recently occupied by him with splinters.

TUBULAR HOT-BLAST NON-EXPLOSIVE
Oil or Gas Stoves!
THE REASONS WHY THE TUBULAR HOT-BLAST OIL OR GAS STOVE IS SUPERIOR TO ALL OTHERS:

Its appearance is more like a stove than anything that has yet been offered.
It requires no wire gauze or water tank to make it safe.
A continual current of air passes to the burners over the Oil Pot, preventing the oil from getting warmer than the atmosphere in which it is burning. The bake oven is not in the way of the kettle or boiler.
Baking, roasting, and boiling can all be done at once, and in less time than with any other oil stove.
The No. 3 or Three-Burner Stove will make 12 inches of pure white flame at a cost of 1½ cts per hour. The reservoir holds four quarts of oil, sufficient to burn for twelve hours.
The No. 4 or 4-Burner Stove will make 16 inches of white flame at a cost of 2 cents per hour.
The reservoir holds 5 quarts of oil sufficient to burn for twelve hours.
The No. 3 Stove will consume between three and four cents worth of gas per hour.
The No. 4 will consume between four and five cents worth of gas per hour.

THE closing exercises of the Misses Butler's school for little ones, were very successfully carried out on Friday morning of last week.

A SPECIAL Communication of Jerusalem Lodge, No. 26 A. F. & A. M. will be held this (Friday) evening for the purpose of conferring the E. A. Degree.

THE Trenton authorities have thus far been unable to find a person to act as dog-pounder. The dogs won't get mad because the office remains vacant.

OF all delectable fluids ever invented for quenching the thirst, cooling the body and refreshing the palate, Reynolds' "root beer" takes the prize-package.

A STRANGE dog, supposed to be rabid, attracted a crowd about him on Front street, last Wednesday evening. Some one final procured a pistol and shot the animal.

STEAMBOAT inspectors in plain clothes were employed Sunday in counting passengers on the excursion boats, to prevent overcrowding. This was something like practical reform.

TO judge by the press-work of some of our State exchanges recently received, the devil must have been running the office while the boss was off with the "editorial excursion."

RICHARD HAFENNY has been appointed pound-keeper of stray dogs by Mayor Randolph, but as yet no place has been designated where the animals are to be taken when captured, or when the time for capture commences.

HE was noticed on "three consecutive days in succession," on his way to New York with fractured parts of his bicycle. We subsequently missed him for a day or two and met him afterwards walking with the aid of a cane.

ALTHOUGH there will be no regular celebration at Washington Rock on the Fourth, there will be dancing, music, picnicing, &c., on the grounds. Undoubtedly the "Rock" will be visited by large numbers on that day.

AS usual, there will be fine displays of fireworks from private residences in our city on the night of the Fourth. Particularly fine will be those from the Mansion House and at the residence of Mr. R. S. Little, on Park avenue.

BIOLOGICAL study is to be encouraged at Princeton College which is to have a new post graduate course in biology. This is a step in the right direction and cannot fail to foster a spirit of research in the graduates of that seat of learning.

STRAWBERRY festivals have not flourished as they should have done this season, considering the excellence of the crop of this fruit. There is time enough yet, however, for the improvement of festivals and all things thereunto appertaining.

THE P. H. S. classes of '79 and '80 will give the customary reception to that of '81, in Assembly Hall on Thursday evening, at the close of the Commencement exercises. Extensive preparations are being made by willing hands, to insure an enjoyable and successful affair throughout.

THE Messrs. Kelly Bros., auctioneers, of 189 Broadway, N. Y., recently effected a transfer of property between ex-Councilman Henry Redfield, of this city, and a Mr. Lovell, of New York city, whereby the former has disposed of his elegant new residence on Central avenue to the latter gentleman.

WE have received our annual visit from Mr. James Barker in the form of a basket of magnificent strawberries—delicious in flavor, enormous in size, solid in construction and rich in color. They are undoubtedly one of the best varieties that come to our market, and orders for them are being taken by Mr. A. V. Searing.

IN a railroad collision the other day a young lady's old style bonnet was crushed and dented in seventeen different places. She took it home, put a flower and two yards of ribbon on it, and now has a bonnet of the latest style worth eleven dollars and a half. Besides which she now claims $1,000 damages from the railway company.

FEW of the thousands of people who travel daily on the cars have any idea what an ordinary passenger car costs, and the wildest guesses are often heard, ranging from $500 to an indefinite number of thousands. The average price of a passenger car is about $4,500; Pullman cars average from $6,000 to $10,000; a locomotive spoils $11,000 or $12,000, while an ordinary freight or box car costs about $625.

THE Jersey City Journal has a little paragraph which is local to most places. "A society," it says, "has a hundred members. To notify them of a meeting by postal card would cost one dollar, and they would pay it without comment. But if it cost a quarter to notify the members through the paper they would prefer the postal card system. However, if a notice in the paper costs nothing, they jump at it as a lucky chance."

ON Monday evening last, Mrs. Clarissa Johnson, about sixty years of age, residing in one of the old-church houses on New street, met with an unfortunate accident. In rushing out of the basement door to pick up her little grandchild that had fallen, she tripped and pitched violently against the brick foundation of the house. Her left wrist was broken and her left shoulder knocked out of place by the occurrence. The attendance of Dr. Endicott was secured immediately and the case ably treated.

WHILE staggering under a liquid load of those beverages that superinduce unsteady brains and weak knees, an inhabitant of this city fell against a store window at the corner of Front street and Madison avenue on Monday last, with such force as to break through a pane of glass. Captain Dodd was called in, but the "City Jail" loomed before the aggressor in such awful proportions as to induce his offering a five-dollar bill, which was accepted in settlement.

THE jury in the case of the traveling watch mender Keisger who was found dead under the circumstances recorded in our last issue, brought in a verdict of death from natural causes; and the body was buried in the Presbyterian grave yard, North Plainfield, on Thursday. The man was struck down by a fit of apoplexy, and probably neither moved again nor was even conscious of the attack. Sewed in his clothing in small amounts and different places, was found $30.96.

ABOUT sixty members of the Plainfield Saengerbund took part in the parade, picnic and flag dedication arranged and managed by the German Singing Society Aurora of New Brunswick, at that city on Monday last. The Plainfielders experienced a most enjoyable day and are loud in their praises of the generosity of their hosts. Most of the business places were closed and everything passed off very successfully. The parade was a grand sight and was reviewed by Gov. Ludlow from the balcony of the Masonic Hall. The Saengerbund sang "Das [illegible]" at the flag dedication, which was afterwards held in Nelson's woods.

ON Tuesday afternoon, Treasurer Van Winkle accompanied by Corporation Counsel Kimball and Courtlandt Parker Esq., appeared before Judge Dixon at the Supreme Court in Trenton, to answer a motion made on behalf of the County to commit the Treasurer of Plainfield for contempt in not obeying the peremptory mandamus of the Court ordering him to pay the County Collector the arrearages of the State and County taxes to be raised in Plainfield for the years '78 '79 and '80. The Court announced that it had no time to hear the argument and took the papers; while the Treasurer returned home greatly relieved and with the check he had drawn for the amount of money in the bank, still in his possession. During the past two weeks more than one attempt has been made to pay over the money, but it still remains where deposited.

AGAIN has Park avenue, between the Railroad and Front street, been thoroughly cleaned by our Street Commissioner, Captain Hand.

THE world did not come to an end on Sunday after all. The Second Adventists, "Mother Shipton" and others must have lost their reckoning.

ANOTHER new-time table is promised from the C. R. R., on Monday. It is expected that more connections from this city to Long Branch, will be arranged.

TWO large excursion trains from Philadelphia to Coney Island, and one from High Bridge branch, to Long Branch, passed over the railroad through this city on Thursday morning.

UNDER the management of Mr. Charles King, the Hotel Netherwood seems to increase in popularity each year. Although additional rooms were arranged this Spring, the accommodations of the house are almost entirely rented, and a prosperous season is assured.

IF you once try Hornish's ice cream you will be satisfied there is none better. Those who use it are most sincere in their praise of its good qualities, and we can heartily recommend it. To be obtained at the headquarters, next to the First National Bank.

THE Plainfield Dime Saving's Institution began on Monday the payment of another ten per cent. dividend to those who were creditors at the time of its suspension. It makes a total of seventy per cent. thus far returned to depositors, and in time, the full amount will undoubtedly be paid over.

THREE young lads, Frank Humpston, Joseph Martin and James Farley, of Dunellen, concluded to take a swim in Hyde's pond, near Farragut avenue and Brookside avenue, on Monday last, and but for the presence of those near by one at least of the lads would have been drowned. The boys had gone into the water beyond their depth, when a man hearing their cries for succor, sprang into the water and rescued one of them (Humpston, aged about 16) as he was going down for the last time.

THE coachman of Mr. Wm. Taylor of "Edgewood," North Plainfield, in his hurry to reach the station on Tuesday morning last, turned too short into Somerset street from the drive and overturned the carriage. Mr. and Mrs. Taylor, who were in the carriage, were thrown out and the gentleman's head striking a sharp stone was severely cut. His wife, however, falling upon him, escaped any serious injury. Mr. Taylor, although suffering some pain, was able to be driven to the residence of Dr. E. W. South who administered such treatment as was necessary.

A Rare Chance.

Attention is directed to the peremptory sale of a valuable dwelling, situated on Raymond avenue, Plainfield, N. J. This property is a really most desirable one, and will be sold on the day advertised, Wednesday, June 29th.

Another Fractious Horse.

Mrs. Chas. I. Hudson of Rockview avenue North Plainfield, was returning from the depot with her husband and child on Tuesday afternoon last, when the very spirited sorrel horse she was driving to a cottage-cart, became frightened on Washington avenue and threw the three out near the residence of Mrs. W. J. Roome. The gentleman and child escaped all injury excepting a few bruises, but Mrs. Hudson was so violently thrown as to break her wrist and possibly cause internal and more serious trouble. Dr. Stillman is attending the case which he considers a critical one.

Fraternal Visit

About 40 members of Plainfield Lodge, No. 44, I. O. O. F., paid a fraternal visit to Magnolia Lodge, No. 166, of Brooklyn, N. Y., on Friday night of last week. There were also present members of other Lodges from Somerville and Westfield. Plainfield Lodge presented to their brethren of Magnolia Lodge a beautiful wreath composed of magnolias and roses. The former flowers were gathered in this vicinity by members of the presenting Lodge. Speeches were made by brothers S. Alpheus Smith of this city, Judge Wheeler of Lambertville, and others. Before their departure for home the visiting brethren were handsomely entertained by "Magnolia," a grand supper being one of the features, of which some 200 persons were partakers.

The First Annual Picnic.

Warren Hose Co., No. 3 is to be congratulated upon the large attendance of many couples that patronized its First Annual Picnic on Thursday evening last and who keeping time to the gay music of Prof. Cahill's orchestra, made Stelle's woods a scene of unalloyed pleasure and happiness throughout the night. The weather did not promise much, but the occasion being the first of the season and the boys' generosity so notorious, all went and enjoyed themselves beyond their expectations. A well supplied refreshment stand was one of the many admirable features, and although no intoxicating liquors were sold on the ground, any quantity of "sarsaparilla" was obtainable. The company broke up during the early hours of Friday morn.

Chautauqua's Summer Programme.

The following is the programme for the annual gathering at Chautauqua: Chautauqua school of languages, commences Thursday, August 8. Chautauqua teachers' retreat, commences Tuesday July 19 and ends Tuesday August 2. Chautauqua Sunday School assembly commences Tuesday August 2, and ends Monday August 22. The special days are the grand opening on Saturday July 30, and the close on Monday August 22. A new railroad is to be constructed to the Assembly grounds from Mayville, to be completed next month, which will prove a great convenience, as it will obviate the necessity of changing from the cars to the boat at Mayville. Eminent lecturers from all parts of the country have been engaged. Dr. D. H. Muller, of Erie, will also lecture, his subject being "The Church Lyceum." The Fisk university jubilee singers are to be on hand. It is claimed that there are to be over 3,000 cottages and tents on the grounds during the assembly.

The Championship of New Jersey.

A one-hundred yard race at Rahway on Monday, drew together a large attendance to witness the meeting of Burns of that city (who claimed the championship of the State) Perrine of South Amboy (whose friends considered him invincible) and Mr. W. H. Marsh, Jr., of Plainfield. At the firing of the pistol all got off with Perrine and Marsh abreast for the first fifty yards, when the former cut in ahead and fouled his opponent with, however, no effect, as Marsh won easily. It was then discovered that Burns had not finished—he thinking he had an unsatisfactory start—and in spite of justice, the rules of foot racing and the opinion of all excepting Burns' backers, the starter ruled that the race should be run over again. In the second heat, Marsh impatiently got away before the pistol shot and was told that another false start would disqualify him. In consequence he waited until the other two were well over the mark and then overhauled, passed them and won again with slight exertion, Burns being second and Perrine bringing up in the rear. A handsome gold medal was the prize, which is now held by Marsh against all comers.

The Netherwood Sunday School.

Although only five months of age, the Sunday School connected with the Netherwood Union Chapel has grown so rapidly as to allow of a most successful celebration at that suburb on Saturday afternoon last. The exercises included singing by the scholars, responsive reading lead by the Superintendent, an opening prayer by the Rev. Dr. Yerkes and addresses by that gentleman, Dean Rodman and Messrs. John F. Plummer and Henry E Bowen. The Superintendent presented handsome prizes to the young folks who had brought the largest number of scholars into the school since its organization, and the decidedly auspicious occasion was closed with a street parade, and bountiful refreshments.

The Netherwood Union Chapel was organized January 23d, and the following are the officers of the Sunday School: Mr. A. G. Conant, Sup't; W. B. Graham, Treas; R. Dillon, Sec; H. E. Bowen, Librarian. The Ladies' Festival Committee was composed of Mrs. John F. Plummer, Mrs. Henry E. Bowen, Mrs. Walter B. Graham, Mrs. Lucian F. Brigham, Mrs. Henry P. Talmadge, Mrs. W. N. Darling, Mrs. Thos. Schmidt, Mrs. Karl T. Fulak, Mrs. G. W. Strong, Mrs. T. R. Bleecker, Mrs. Robert Dillon, Mrs. L. W. Briggs, Mrs. Whiting, and Miss Jennie Rankin.

Commencement Exercises.

At Miss Burrows' Seminary.

"That which we call a rose, by any other name, would smell as sweet"—is an immortal utterance of the deceased Shakespeare. Whether the intensely interesting exercises given by the young ladies of Miss Burrows' Seminary at the Holy Cross Chapel on Tuesday evening, were intended as an exhibition, a commencement or the closing performances of the term, matters not; the affair was one of the most successful displays of oratorical power and vocal and instrumental musical ability ever shown by the softer sex in our midst. Steel engraved invitations influenced the presence of a very select audience from the "flower" of Plainfield's upper ten on both sides of the brook, which both the seating and standing capacity of the Chapel was necessary to accommodate. Messrs. Walter McGee and Joseph Yerkes as ushers, performed their customary duties with the most admirable courtesy, while the additional attention of Mr. W. M. Burrows to the comfort of all, caused entire satisfaction. The walls of the room were most tastefully dressed with festooned flags and other adornments, and the sills of the gothic windows were transformed into thick cushions of daisies and dandelions in the midst of which stood tapering vases holding fragrant flowers and blossoms. On the black-boards at either side, was written the programme of the evening as printed below—forming a convenient reference that enabled all to understandingly follow the progress of the different numbers. Part first included:

1. Duett—Piano—La Fanfare des Dragons.	Lizzie Hasbrouck & Lottie Remsen.
2. Anthem—O Come, Let Us Sing.	School.
3. Reading—Omar's Scheme of Life—Dr. Johnson.	Louise H. Taylor.
4. Chorus—May Morning.
5. Solo—Piano—Les Courriers,	Emma McGee.
6. Reading—L'Exil—Louis Napoleon,	Nettie L. French.
7. Duett—Alpine Morning—Kucken,	Addie & Emma McGee.
8. Recitation—Maid Cherry's Simple Cap—(A. D. 1670),	Addie Gardner.
9. Inflammatus,	Miss Henson & School.

PART II.

1. Solo—Piano—Le Jet D'Eau,	Lottie Remsen.
2. Reading—Mr. Barlow—Charles Dickens,	Hattie French.
3. Recitation—The Luck of One Day's Fishing,	Addie McGee.
4. Bolero—From Sicilian Vespers,	Miss Henson.
5. Recitation—The Courting—Lowell,	Kate P. Matthews.
6. Chorus—Gentle Fall the Dews of Eve.
7. Recitation—The Lily—Henry Thorod,	Grace Yerkes.
8. Parting Song,	School.
Accompanist—Mrs. J. A. H. Hasbrouck.

Where all were perfect, it would be unjust and unwise to particularly praise any. Miss Dora Henson, whom many will remember as appearing with the Vocal Society in its Charity Concert, was of course greatly appreciated. Her singing of "Bolero" called forth a hearty encore, and the rendition of "Inflammatus," with a chorus by the school assisted by Messrs. O. T. Roberts, S. McCutchen and W. McGee, had to be repeated to satisfy the demands of the audience. The instrumental music, as well as the vocal, was praiseworthy, the duett of the Miss McGees showing some talent, in spite of the embarassment of the alto. The elocutionary efforts all received much applause, and, in a few cases, testimonial boquets evidenced the regard of some one. Miss Burrows is greatly deserving of commendation upon the result of her training; and parents entrusting their offspring to her care, cannot appreciate too highly the advantages secured thereby.

North Plainfield's Public School.

As we went to press last evening (Thursday) the Public School of North Plainfield held its Annual Commencement in the Warren Mission Chapel. It was the first affair of the sort occuring under the management of Miss Dora B. Skillman who has had charge of the school since the absence of Mr. Rarick; and although we cannot speak until next week from personal experience, yet we feel safe in asserting—with a knowledge of the lady's efficiency—that the occasion was a successful one. The following is the programme of the evening:

Craig Place School.

By ten o'clock on Thursday morning, a large gathering of parents and friends had assembled to enjoy the closing exercises of Mrs. Austin's scholars, at the Craig Place School. After the opening by a repeating of a psalm, the Lord's Prayer and the singing of "When He Cometh," the following programme was given in a manner that by its perfection would have caused many schools of older date to grow envious:

Concert exercises by the Class in 3d Reader.

The exercises closed with the awarding by the teacher of very handsome cards, given the young ladies, not for their intellectual attainments and punctuality but for politeness and kindness towards each other, and to the young gentlemen for their use of clean language and gentlemanly conduct in the play ground.

Mrs. Austin is to be greatly congratulated upon the high standing of excellence shown by her school in general. The exercises in history evidenced careful training on her part, and the elocutionary ability displayed by those who spoke proved her careful superintendence of their memory and vocal powers. The good order apparent and the control the school seemed to be under, were features not to be overlooked in our commendation. It is seldom, if ever, that a more perfect showing in a school of its kind is exhibited.

The scholars will this afternoon (Friday) commencing at two o'clock, hold a fair for the benefit of the Children's Relief Association. They have been untiring in their labors, and have contributed many very pretty and useful articles to be sold on the occasion. Admission will be free and it is to be hoped that a liberal patronage will be accorded them.

[illegible] Tale of a Theoretical Thomas.

In this epoch of wonderful inventions, ingenious contrivances and surprising achievements, the powers of the Keely Motor, the practicability of the telephone and the success of American horses in foreign countries, pale before the instinct of a mere street cat. He (the animal) will go down to fame honored and unsung as an exponent of the principal that being possessed of nine lives must naturally be favored with, at least, so keen a sense of reasoning as a human who shuffles off the mortal coil but once. This cat belongs to Mrs. James C. Ayres, residing at the corner of Peace and Sixth streets, and we fully establish the animal's claims as a hero when we state that he jumps up on the edge of the sink, works the pump handle in his paws and gets himself a drink whenever thirsty. He was never trained to do it—getting his knowledge entirely by observation. Competition is desired, but until beaten we shall claim for this animal the proverbial cake.

The High School Commencement.

As we intimated last week, the public exercises usual upon the completion of the course of studies adopted at our High School, were in danger of being done away with. In spite of the fact that education forms the character to a certain extent, and so tones the mind and disposition as to christianize communities and populate religious organizations, the churches of our city all refused to permit the Commencement exercises to be held in their buildings, with one exception. On Thursday evening of last week, the Board of Education at its adjourned meeting, received a report from a member appointed for the purpose, to the effect that the Trustees of the Park avenue Baptist Church had consented to allow the use of that church for the annual exercises of the graduating class. Some discussion then arose in the Board as to whether it would be politic to accept such permission with the understanding that tickets of admission should be issued as on former occasions. A great deal of dissatisfaction had always arisen, for the reason that every citizen paying a school tax considered himself entitled to so many tickets as he desired and so favorable a position in the church as was to be obtained—the impossibility of giving front seats to twenty-five hundred people in a church holding one thousand, to the contrary notwithstanding. A vote was taken, and the motion that the offer of the Park avenue Trustees be accepted, was lost—Messrs. Harper and Stewart voting for, and Messrs. Stillman and Murray against the resolution. When the decision of the Board became known, public opinion was naturally aroused. It was a duty owed the class of '81 to allow it the same opportunities to display its abilities as were accorded previous graduates, and the same reward of public praise and appreciation. Consideration was also due the efforts of Miss Buckley who had trained the scholars to their respective conditions of efficiency, and the feelings of parents who justly desired as extensive a display at the close of the high school course of their heirs and heiresses, as had been allowed the children of others. As a result of the disapprobation that was occasioned, the Board on Monday evening last decided to give the usual programme of exercises, and in the Park avenue church. Tickets will be given the friends and families of the graduates, the teachers of the school, the members of the "star roll of honor," and—we presume—the School Trustees, Common Councilmen, Clergy, etc., and their families. These tickets will admit the holder by a side door into the church, while the main entrances will be thrown wide open and whoever and whatever wishes to enter, may. Against their own judgment the members of the Board of Education have acceded, at last, to the demand of the fault-finding public. On Thursday evening next all may go and take as many members of their families as they choose without regard to race, color or age. When the Trustees of the church shall consider it full, they will close the doors—not the Board of Education. The latter will, this time, allow the community to run the affair so far as the admission is concerned, and undoubtedly the community will, for once and all time, be satisfied—satisfied to leave it alone in the future.

The death in Europe, has been announced, of Mr. J. C. Vertu of Crescent avenue. His wife who was with him, has sailed for this country with the remains.

Judge P. P. Good will leave our city about July 1st, on an extended visit through the West. We hope to hear from him during his absence in a series of pen sketches.

Mrs. Loyal Farragut of this city, was one of the invited guests that were present at the reception last week of the Morristown Y.M.C.A.—"Young Maiden's Cooking Association."

Mr. John Honeyman, representing Honeyman & Co., of Front street, opened a branch of their establishment at Asbury Park this week. He left for his new field of business on Monday.

Hon. Chas. A. Campbell, who was stricken with partial paralysis on Saturday week, mention of which was made in these columns in our last issue, still lies seriously ill at his residence in Woodbridge.

Mr. Andrew Vanderbeek, Plainfield's Commissioner of Alms, started on a brief fishing excursion, Monday last. He is one of Isaak Walton's most persevering duplicates, and meets with universal success.

Mr. Warren Randolph one of our many popular (with the public) and admired (by the softer sex) drug clerks, has accepted a more lucrative situation in a New York house and will transfer thereto his efficient services.

Faithful Ben Wright has now a wife and a home of his own to watch. We most heartily congratulate the happy bride upon her securing so worthy a spouse; and a knowledge of the husband's taste is a surety that he has selected a treasure.

Exceedingly pleasant gatherings were held by the congregations of the Methodist and Congregational churches on Thursday evening of last week, to bid farewell to their respective pastors before the departure of these gentlemen for Europe on the Saturday following.

Our thanks are due Dr. E. Rushmore for pamphlet copies of the address on "The Philosophy of Homœopathy," delivered at the meeting of the International Hahnemannian Association, by its President, P. P. Wells M. D., at the recent meeting of its members at Brighton Beach.

Mr. Gerome Pack, the Park avenue confectioner, was suddenly seized with a fainting fit at his residence on Saturday evening last, and for a time considerable excitement was created in the neighborhood in consequence. Mr. Pack's illness, which was superinduced by biliousness, has confined him to his bed since his fainting attack.

The marriage of Miss Mary McCarthy of this city to Mr. Timothy McCarthy of the C. R. R., and one of the "Jolly 3," took place at St. Mary's church on Saturday morning last. At the close of the ceremony the friends of the happy couple were most generously entertained at the house of the bride's father, and the pair subsequently left for Philadelphia and an extended wedding trip.

THE estimable wife of our young friend Edward Pack, was suddenly stricken with a painful and mysterious malady on the morning of Tuesday, June 14th. From some cause the optic nerve of her left eye became affected, and she has since been unable to see plainly and suffers great pain. Dr. Fritts is attending the case, and forbids her leaving a darkened room for some weeks to come. The many friends of Mr. and Mrs. Pack will sympathize with them in their affliction.

FIRE MATTERS.

The lace curtains of a window in the second story of Mr. L. E. Hart's residence, on Second street, took fire about 9 o'clock Tuesday evening last, by coming in contact with a lighted gas burner, and for a time there was a lively scene in the vicinity. A quicker fire alarm was never sent out or a more prompt response by the firemen. Luckily the services of the latter were not found necessary, as the flames were extinguished by inmates of the house.

The Fireman's Relief Association meet on Monday evening next, at the parlors of No. 2 Engine House.

Asbury Park has five church edifices—Episcopalian, Reformed, Baptist, Catholic and Presbyterian; also a Methodist society which will soon build. Hotels, boarding houses, stores of every variety necessary to a large population are established; a weekly paper with a circulation of 3,200 copies; a post office; two public halls, one, Educational Hall, being the same name it bore when it stood on the Centennial grounds at Philadelphia, seating 2,000 people.

SPORTSMEN'S CORNER.

The well-known fast trotting mare "Helena," is trotting in the Michigan Circuit. She has won races in 2:36, 2:26½, which time is below her record.

Mr. J. Wesley Johnson's trotting mare "Selada," is trotting in the Iowa Circuit. On June 17th, at Cedar Rapids, she took second money, trotting in 2:34, on a half mile track. There were ten or more entries in the race. The mare trots this week at Marshaltown.

There was some interesting trial heats on Peter Osborne's race track, near New Market, on Saturday last. J. W. Johnson's fine stallion, "John Lambert," was driven by Mr. O. a mile in 2:32, by doing which "Pete" won a suit of clothes, as he said he would beat 2:35. Mr. John I. Holly's b. m. "Music" was driven a half mile in 1:25, and Councilman A. H. Smith's "Calvin" a half mile in 1:30. Mr. Osborne has a fine stock farm and the care of some valuable animals.

From a lady correspondent and friend of Green Village, Morris County, we are in receipt of a clipping from the Madison Journal, which speaks in pronounced terms of a man (?) who is in the habit of shooting robins and other insectiverous birds, and destroying their nests, contrary to a State law, and in direct opposition to all feelings of humanity. We can only say to our fair correspondent that we share alike with her a feeling of abhorrence against such a man (?) who thus violates a law, which ought to protect the song birds. We can only hope that he will yet fall into the hands of some member of a Game Protective Society and be brought to the bar of justice. The law is very plain on the subject of killing insectiverous birds or destroying their nests. Ignorance of the law is no excuse. Let some person arrest this violator of the law and and give him a dose of it. He will never want to shoot another robin.

There was quite a large assemblage of sportsmen at Campbell's Club House on Park avenue last Friday, to witness the match between two of our city's crack shots, Messrs. C. H. Thiers and J. H. Force. The terms of this match was 15 birds for Thiers and 13 for Force, 21 yards rise, 80 yards boundary, single barrel. After a close and exciting contest, Force won by one bird. The birds were a good lot, as the Dr. found out before the arrival of his "coach," when three of his birds fell dead out of bounds. After this match there was a friendly contest between the Field Editor of THE CONSTITUTIONALIST and Mr. Herbert Chapman which resulted in a tie, each killing 4 out of 5 birds. Then followed a sweepstake match, with 7 entries. After the birds were exhausted, glass ball sweepstakes took their place, in which Mr. Al. Seedlker came out ahead, with a very creditable score. At the conclusion of the sport all hands were regaled with a clam bake, to which every one did justice. At the next shoot it is to be hoped that a larger number of birds will be furnished.

NORTH PLAINFIELD PARAGRAPHS.

On July 1st will be elected a School Trustee to take the place of Mr. Israel Lewis whose term expires. There is every reason to expect a renomination for the retiring officers.

SCOTCH PLAINS SCRATCHINGS.

The M. E. Church will shortly be closed for repairs.

Mr. John Taylor Johnston having set his fence back in compliance with the law as set forth by the power behind the throne, will the Road Master please remove the fence on the adjoining land? It is at present a dangerous obstruction.

The Parish Aid Society of the Episcopal Church in Scotch Plains, will hold a sale of fancy articles and refreshments, in aid of the building fund, in the Republican club rooms, on Wednesday, June 29th. The sale will open at 2 p. m. Admission 15 cents.

For "The Constitutionalist."

Your correspondent who was doing the amiable for Scotch Plains in last week's "Scratchings," who saw (or thought he saw) our "streets covered with water," must have been troubled with water (or something stronger) on the brains, and perhaps that may account for his inability to find the sidewalks—as a general thing people who growl so loudly about lack of improvements are the last ones to turn in and help make them—as a matter of fact our roads are fully as good as any in this section, and have been very much improved within a few years—our side walks are generally in good order and are also being rapidly improved,—and I haven't heard of any one putting "obstacles" in the way—and will venture to assure your correspondent he can go on and improve the roads and make the sidewalks better, and "none will molest or make him afraid;" but when he speaks of our Public School, he shows that he at least is not "going back to the days of Washington." Oh, no, he is a long way ahead of him (you know Washington couldn't tell a no such thing). We have a good school house, well furnished, an average attendance that has doubled in the past few years, and Scotch Plains Public School under its present efficient Board of Trustees and excellent trio of teachers will compare favorable with the best in the county. This is the general opinion of parents whose children attend it, and of our County Superintendent, as well as of an OLD RESIDENT.

WESTFIELD WISPS.

The next improvement in order by the Village Improvement Committee will be the painting of the lamp posts.

The agent of the Jeffrey and Taylor Spring Bed, visited us on Monday last, and we understand made a successful canvass of Westfield.

Mr. Edward Edgar, otherwise "Goat," claims to be "Champion Bill Poster" of this township, and from our knowledge of his abilities we accord him the honor.

Our citizens are promised a sensational social earthquake at an early date. This however, is not our prediction, as we have little faith in prophecies of the Mother Shipton kind.

The agent of Sweet Saponax tooth wash, astonished many of our citizens this week by presenting them with bottles. This appears to be a style of advertisement that is popular.

The members of Atlas Lodge No. 129, F. A. M., have decided to give an Excursion at an early date. The pleasures of the last given by this Lodge are still fresh in the minds of our citizens.

Our popular and efficient Superintendent of Lamps appears this week with a bran new dicer, its breadth of beam indicates a desire on his part to protect his eyes from the lights whose brilliancy is due to his perfect care.

Considerable complaint is heard already because Mr. Moffett proposes withdrawing the hack service from the depot. This is easily arranged; gentlemen, patronize him and don't grumble if you are charged fair rates for good services.

One of our citizens desirous of ornamenting his grounds, placed boxes filled with choice plants on his gate posts, only to find the next morning that some miscreant had removed a portion of their contents. We trust the rascal may be found out.

Mr. Louis C. Thies, of this township, is the agent for this locality for the Osborn Plow Sulky and the Champion Rake, together with other agricultural machinery. An inspection of Mr. Thies' farm is sufficient proof of his knowledge in his line of goods.

"Music in the air" on Tuesday last, caused by a conflict of opinion between two of our citizens, relative to their ownership of a (Banjo and Cap). Squire Jacques was appealed to in the matter, but declined to issue warrants. Whereabouts of (Banjo and Cap) unknown.

Generally speaking, the practice of Amateurs upon Flute, Cornet, &c., are decidedly irritating to the adjacent residents of the would-be artist. We rejoice to name an exception, as the practice of our friend Chas. Day, on Elm street, is a pleasure to our citizens residing there.

The time for the periodical return of the Photographic Car has arrived, and that not altogether ornamental object is here, located on Broad street, opposite "Bayard's Drug store." Commodore J. M. Beekman is in charge of the craft and appears to be sailing into the pockets of our citizens on a twelve knot breeze.

Mr. John Roulston has been adding to the attractions of his "Holsterie" by making extensive alterations and improvements. The knowledge that the wood work was under the supervision of Mr. Joseph Moffett, and that the decorations were supervised by McNeil, the artist, silences all questions as to the quality of the work done. We regret, however, to feel obliged from an artistic standpoint, to object to this artist using his colors in base decorations.

The reported ill treatment of the children of the late Amos Roll, by the administrator James Dunham, proves to be a canard, and is not in any way sustained by the facts in the case. Mr. Dunham under the will was made a co-heir as well as administrator, and desired the children, three in number, to remain on the property and take care of it, but very unwisely they concluded to seek their fortunes elsewhere. While wishing them success, we do so to the detriment of the administrator, who against his own best interests was obliged to take charge and care of the property.

It is rumored that Mr. Wm. B. Chamberlain claims to be the Champion Grain Harvester of this township, upon a reported record of having cradled 6 acres in a day (usual hours) this statement having been questioned, it is now said that the Champion intends to issue a challenge and defy the doubters of his powers. A splendid opportunity will soon be offered to test the question on the rye crop. Who is ready?

The members of Westfield Lodge No. 169, I. O. O. F., in company with the members of Plainfield Lodge No. 44, paid a visit to Magnolia Lodge No. 166 of Brooklyn, N. Y., on Friday evening last, and participated in a truly enjoyable time. Thanks are due to a member of the Plainfield Lodge for presenting the visiting gentlemen with magnolia blossoms, which were left with the members of the Brooklyn Lodge.

The complimentary benefit on the 30th inst., to Mr. A. Ed. Wilcox, promises to prove very successful. The following well know artists will positively appear: Wm. Applegate, tamborine, bones and sketch artist; R. P. Davis, (the unrivalled) banjoist; John E. Logan, (the unsurpassed) character artist; Edw. Edgar, female impersonator. Layfaette Moffett, bones, song and dance artist; Wm. H. Trano, song and character artist; Chas. Crossman, champion clog; Tracy Watson, Discourses. The music will be under the leadership of Prof. Henry Ordstadt.

Upon the arrival of Mr. Wm. Schoonover at his butcher shop on Broad street, on Wednesday afternoon last, he found upon entering his store that an attempt at burglary upon the premises had been made. The door leading from the shop to the office had been blockaded, and everything was in general disorder. After further investigation, the perpetrator was found in the shape of a stuffed man, who was gracefully reclining in a rear window. This practical joke seems to have been well known, for a crowd congregated immediately upon the proprietor's appearance. Mr. Schoonover as usual in all things, accepted the matter gracefully.

The recent Sunday School Anniversaries of the Baptist, Congregationalist and Methodist churches have all proved occasions of great interest, not only to members of the different churches but as well to our citizens at large, whose well known interest in all things connected with the good and improvement of our town, prove an entire absence of what might be termed sectarian bias. The Sixty-second Anniversary of the Presbyterian Sunday School on Sunday last proved no exception to this general rule and proved decidedly pleasant and interesting. The day fortunately proved one of the exceptions during this month and was both warm and pleasant. The services began in the church at 4 p. m., and the children of the school under the directorship of Prof. W. H. Elston were marshalled in the Sunday School and proceeded to the place assigned them. The pastor of the church as well as Supt. of the Sunday School, Rev. W. H. Gill, conducted the services. The principal address of the day was made by Prof. Wm. N. Barringer, Supt. of Public Instruction for the city of Newark, who took for his subject "Childhood and its mission on earth." It was both ably and interestingly handled and held the attention of the large audience present, both young and old, until its close. Among others who made short addresses to the assemblage were the Revs. Mr. Hoagland, pastor of the Methodist church, Mr. Bronson of the Baptist church, Father Buck and the Pastor, all of which were suited to the occasion commemorated. The reports of both the Secretary, Librarian and Treasurer were all very satisfactory and certainly entitle these able officers to the gratitude of our citizens. The organ (a very superior one) under the hands of Miss Jennie Pierson discoursed excellent music. The children's singing was extremely good, and the church was beautifully decorated. In fact all who attended, old and young, must have found fresh inspiration from the lessons and pleasures of the day to continue in the good work. Great credit should be accorded Prof. Elston for his share in the arrangements o the day.

MEETING TOWN COMMITTEE.

Thursday evening, June 16th, 1881.

Meeting called to order at 8 o'clock. Present—H. F. Alpers, James Moffett, R. R. Sinclair and L. M. Whitaker, clerk.

Minutes of last meeting, April 27, read and on motion approved.

Communication received from Mr. R. V. Lindabury, Town Counsel, as follows:

ELIZABETH, N. J., May 12. 1881.

Henry F. Alpers, Esq., Chairman Town Committee, Westfield, N. J.:

DEAR SIR:—As requested by you, I have examined the certificate of incorporation of the Westfield Hook & Ladder Co. No. 1, and also the law under which it was filed, and all subsequent laws affecting the company, to ascertain whether the members of the company are entitled to the tax exemption given by the law of March 24th, 1881. By that law the fire company must be under the control of the Town Committee to bring its members within the privilege of the act. I can find nothing, either in the certificate of incorporation or in the act under which it was filed, giving the Town Committee any control over the company. But I find an act passed March 29th, 1878, providing that any township may annually raise money by taxation, for the support and maintenance of any fire apparatus located in the township, and of the organization using the same and giving the Town Committee of any township making such appropriation, control to a certain extent over the apparatus and the organization using the same. I am informed that your township has added this company in this way from year to year for two or three years. In my opinion any fire company accepting an appropriation from a township under this act thereby puts itself under the control of the Town Committee of that township. If your company has accepted such appropriation and is now receiving the same, it is, in my opinion, under the control of the Town Committee and entitled to the exemption.

Yours respectfully,

R. V. LINDABURY.

On motion the communication was ordered placed on file and the clerk instructed to forward a copy to the Fire Company and to the Township Collector.

Treasurer reported lease of town rooms from May 1st for one year at the annual rental of $100.

The following bills were on motion ordered paid: Samuel E. Young, Overseer of the Poor (board of Stephen Clark March 1st to June 1st) $39; (board of Louis Carl, colored, 6 weeks) $6; bill James R. Ferris (rent of town rooms to May 1st) $22.50.

Communication from R. V. Lindabury addressed to L. V. Clark, dated June 4th, '81, relating to drain on Brown's lot and the Railroad culvert, was on motion referred to counsel for his opinion as to the Town Committees' jurisdiction.

Resolved, That a quit claim deed be made to Peter F. Randolph for house and lot on Road District No. 9, on the south side of South avenue, taxed to James L. Brush, and being a part of premises conveyed to Westfield township by W. W. Connolly, Collector, by deed dated Nov. 19th, 1880, upon payment of $42.66 being the amount of tax, cost and interest due township for 1879.

On motion decided to borrow $800 for 3 months on their note in part payment of bond and interest on School District No. 10.

On motion adjourned.

L. M. WHITAKER,
Town Clerk.

A LITTLE OF EVERYTHING.

ROSE COLD AND HAY FEVER.

MESSRS. WHITE & BURBECK, Druggists, Ithaca, N. Y.—I can recommend Ely's Cream Balm to relieve all persons suffering with Rose Cold and Hay Fever. I have been a great sufferer from the same complaints; have had great relief by using the Balm. I have recommended it to many of my friends for Catarrh, and in all cases where they have used the Balm freely have been cured. T. KENNEY, Dry Goods Merchant, Ithaca, New York. Sept. 3, 1880.

MESSRS. WM. RUST & SONS, Druggists, New Brunswick, N. J.: Since boyhood I have been troubled with Catarrh and Hay Fever, and have been unable to obtain permanent relief until I used Ely's Cream Balm, which has cured me. After a few day's use I could sleep at night, which I could not do before. E. L. CLICKENER, New Brunswick, N. J. Price 50 cents. jl1w4

WHY WEAR PLASTERS?

They may relieve, but they can't cure that lame back for the kidneys are the trouble and you want a remedy to act directly on their secretions, to purify and restore their healthy condition. Kidney-Wort has that specific action—and at the same time it regulates the bowels perfectly. Don't wait to get sick, but get a package to-day, and cure yourself. STATE ITEMS.

A water company, with a capital stock of $56,000, has been established in Somerville.

The recent storm at Atlantic City, swept away about a square of the beach board walk and three sections of the new pier.

The Central Railroad Company of New Jersey will lay an additional track on the Long Branch division of the road, from Red Bank to Long Branch, in time for the Summer schedule.

The foundations for the sugar mill at Seaville are laid and the chimney stack is well advanced. Two thousand acres of sorghum have been planted in Cape May county to supply this mill.

Senator McPherson positively asserts that he voted against the confirmation of Stanley Matthews. The Republican papers, especially the Trenton State Gazette, have given currency to the report that he voted otherwise and it is now in order for them to retract. Now how did Senator Sewell vote?

Rahway has considerable business before the present term of the Supreme Court. Two mandamuses on application of Collector Sheridan, to pay taxes of 1879 and 1880; two of Mundy, Metuchen, to put certain bonds in tax levy; one of Continental Bank, on the $20,000 Brewster note.

Mayor Savage, of Rahway, has closed a contract with the Penn. R. R. Co., to furnish them with water for three years at the rate of $4,000 per year. Orders have been given by the company to have the tracks arranged at once with the trench in the center, toward Linden, so that the locomotives can take up the water as they run.

On Wednesday of last week, the youngest child of A. E. Woodruff, Esq., fell from a third story window to the ground, a distance of about thirty feet, but strange to say escaped injury so far as is known. When picked up the child was insensible, but upon restoratives being applied, recovered in about fifteen minutes. Although somewhat sore from the fall, the child was playing about as usual in a day or so. Its escape from serious injury or death seems almost miraculous.—Rahway Times.

On complaint of Agent Benson, of the Newark Bottlers' Association, Daniel J. Deegan, of Orange, was arraigned before Justice Otto, in Newark, on Tuesday, on complaint of Wm. Harrigan, Henry Hausling, Otto Brandt and C. C. Haley, of Newark, each of whom claimed to be owners of some sixty bottles found in his possession. After a hearing the justice fined Deegan $25 on one of the complaints, and suspended sentence upon the others.

Assemblyman John T. Dunn, of Elizabeth, was on Wednesday of last week, again refused an examination for an attorney's diploma, because he had, like an honest and industrious man, supported his family by hard work while prosecuting his law studies. Rather small business on the part of the opposing lawyers.—New Brunswick Fredonian.

The latest wonder of science is the electric railroad engine. The time is not far distant when the screeching and boiler exploding steam locomotive will be superseded by the noiseless electric engine. It is claimed that scientists have succeeded in constructing a locomotive of this kind which has made a run of 30 miles, an hour at Berlin.

SPORTSMEN'S CORNER.

Major E. J. Anderson, State Fish Commissioner, expresses a desire to obtain any facts concerning the catching of shad otherwise than by net during the coming Summer, whether by fly, worms or live bait.

Woodcock are reported as being unusually plentiful this summer. The true sportsman will remember that the open season for killing them does not begin until July 1st. Pot hunters should be made to remember it if caught violating the law.

Any non-resident of this State is liable to a fine of $50, or imprisonment, if found shooting game birds, even during the "open seasons" within its jurisdiction, without first complying with the By-laws of the Game Protective Societies of the State, which provide that such non-residents shall first become a member of some such Society. Take heed!

The well-known trotting horse John S. Clark, the property of one of Trenton's prominent manufacturers, has been transferred from the care of Mr. Scott Quintin to Mr. Goodwin, of Belmont track, Philadelphia; Mr. Quintin, with his father, Mr. D. S. Quintin, having taken charge of the handling of all the stock at the Fashion Stud Farm.

Mr. Benjamin McDowell, of Bedminster, while after a load of fire wood in the woods on his farm a few weeks ago discovered a partridge's nest in which were nine eggs, which he carefully conveyed to his home and put them under a sitting hen; and in due course of time nine young chicks were brought forth livelier than crickets, and with the exception of two are still living and doing well at last accounts.—Somerset Messenger.

On the 1st of May Henry Hales liberated at Ridgewood, Bergen county, N. J., seventy-four of the skylarks imported by I. W. England, and reports the entire success of the experiment. After a few days' enjoyment of the sweets of liberty the birds set about housekeeping. They stole away by pairs in the fields and began nest building. The males became more and more vocal, and soared aloft above their setting mates and poured forth their sweet strains. The nests, hidden in the grass or grain, were not easily discovered, but some of them were found. They contained four or five freckled eggs of a greenish-gray cast. Like other nests placed on the ground, some of them have been visited by the cats or other predatory animals, but in other cases the eggs have gone safely through the process of incubation, and the young larks—real American born skylarks—have appeared. There is no question that the youngsters will take care of themselves and, barring accidents common to all birdlings, reach maturity.

Foxhall, the young American horse, owned by Mr. James R. Keene, of New York, won the race for the Grand Prix of Paris on the 12th inst, the stakes amounting to about $35,000, the greater portion of which was immediately made gifts of to those who made the race a success, the successful rider, Fordham, receiving $2,500, with the same amount to Foxhall's trainer. The winning of the "Grand Prix" of Paris by Mr. Keene's horse Foxhall, coming, as it does, right after the winning of the Derby by Mr. Lorillard's Iroquois, will greatly and justly elate American sportsmen. The two events are the most notable of their kind in Europe during the year. They speak volumes for American training, and will draw attention to American horses throughout Europe. Americans have already competed successfully in various branches of material progress against heavy odds. On the 15th inst, Mr. Lorillard's Iroquois won the Prince of Wales stakes. All hail to our country and noble horse.

A VERDICT IN THE WHITTAKER TRIAL.

Late on Friday afternoon the 10th inst, the court martial in the Whittaker case arrived at a verdict. What it is they have sworn not to make known. The verdict and evidence must be forwarded to Judge Advocate-General Swaim for revision, and he will advise the President as to whether the findings and facts accord, in his opinion. The President then announces the verdict. It is believed to be an unfavorable one to Whittaker.

The dispute as to the boundary line between Union and Essex Counties has been decided in favor of Union County.

A legal fence in this State must be four feet two inches high, if of wood, brick or stone, and four and a half feet if of other materials.

The Philadelphia and Long Branch Railroad is well under way, and in a few days trains will be running across Barnegat Bay. The new line passes near Toms river and the Island Heights camp meeting grounds, and will be in operation soon.

The sale of the Panama Railroad to the De Lesseps Canal Company was arranged on the 3d inst. $20,000,000, it is said, was paid for the road. It cost $7,500,000. This crowds off all the American interests from the Isthmus.

The next fair of the Delaware Valley F. & M. Agricultural Society, will be held on the 13th, 14th, 15th and 16th of September next, on their grounds near Lambertville. The Directors are using efforts to make it a successful exhibition.

Ground will probably be broken for the large silk factory in Boonton, sometime this month. It will be located on the east side of the Rockaway river, near the railroad bridge. The factory will cost, when completed, about $50,000.

The New Jersey editorial re-union this year will be held at the Catskill Mountains. The party will start from New York on the steamer City of Catskill, on Tuesday, June 28th, arriving in New York on the same steamer early the following Saturday morning.

The admirer of two girls at Waupaca, Oregon, could not choose between them, and neither was willing to relinquish her claims in favor of the other. They therefore agreed to decide the question by the toss of a coin, and the tossing was done carefully and fairly, in the presence of an invited company. The loser accepted her luck uncomplainingly, and is to be first bridesmaid at the wedding.

Senators Vail and Beekman and Assemblymen Munn, Murphy and Johnson, the Committee appointed by the last Legislature to investigate the rights of the Board of Proprietors of East Jersey, met on Saturday the 11th at Newark, and organized by the election of Senator Vail as Chairman and James S. Yard as Secretary. Last Winter great excitement was created in consequence of the sale, by the East Jersey Proprietors, of Shark river and part of Lake Hopatcong, property which is claimed to be owned by the State. The matter was brought to the attention of the Legislature, and the Investigating Committee appointed. The Committee will meet at Perth Amboy next Saturday.

The unprecedented rainy and cold weather of the first two weeks, and especially the first ten days of June, has not only seriously interfered with business throughout the country, but has caused much damage along the sea coast. At Long Branch all of the Spring piling was knocked out of the great ocean pier, and strewed the beach for miles. The force of the wind was so great as to blow out the windows of the Central Hotel which is at least half a mile from the shore. Serious wash-outs also occurred. At Pt. Pleasant, N. J., the beach was strewn with wreck stuff, vegetables, onions, potatoes and all kinds of merchandise. The patrolmen of the life-saving stations, who had been discharged April 1st, went on duty gratuitously again on Friday, as wrecks of vessels were reported and others likely to be so before the next morning. The rain-fall during the first ten days of June was greater than that of any like period during the same month for many years.

Suppression of Juvenile Patriotism.

Fire-crackers are to be suppressed in Philadelphia on July 4th, if the Mayor can in any way manage it. The ordinances are rigid enough and he has much power to enforce them, but there is the small boy. He counts without his host, who reckons not upon him. The Mayor, however, means to try and take the bull by the horns by warring upon the manufacturer and large selling. If he can prevent large sales he can circumvent the small boy, but not otherwise. It would be a great luxury, if the practice could extend everywhere. There is no time that is more dangerous for property, and surely there are other ways of spending a holiday than by tormenting all sensitive people.

The New Jersey Firemen's Association will convene in September in Burlington. At a late meeting of the same at Trenton a committee was appointed to select subjects for each department in relation to its experience with engines, hose, the best and most economical method of running departments, and other matters of value to firemen generally, as well as those insuring property in this State. These papers will be read at the forthcoming meeting.

THE Commencement Exercises of Lafayette College begin with the Baccalaureate Sermon by Rev. Dr. Knox, of Bristol, on June 26th. Judge William Strong, of the Supreme Court, delivers the Commencement Oration on Tuesday morning the 28th. The Senior Class numbers 57, of whom 13 are candidates for degrees in the Technical and Scientific courses of study, and 44 in the Classical course. The graduation exercises take place on the 29th. Those who pay full fare in coming to Easton by the main line of the Central Railroad of New Jersey, the main line of the Delaware, Lackawanna and Western Railroad, the Morris and Essex Division, or by the Sussex Railroad, can obtain cards, signed by President Cattell, entitling them to return free, good till July 1st. These cards are to be obtained only by calling at the Railroad Desk, in the College Reading Room, immediately after the public exercises of Monday and Tuesday afternoons, or on Wednesday before 9½ a. m.

The man that does not love
Wine, women and song,
May not have as good a time,
But he'll live five times as long.

There was a school mistress in Salem,
Her troubles she'd often bewail 'em,
Because the big boys
In the school made a noise,
And she was too small for to whale 'em.

SAD ACCIDENT.

MR. OSCAR CRAIG Blown Up by a Premature Blast in the Rosendale Cement Quarry—Destruction of an Eye—Its Subsequent Removal by Surgical Operation.

Mr. Oscar Craig was foreman in a cement quarry at Rosendale, Ulster Co., N. Y. By an explosion one day in the quarry he lost an eye—lost it totally. Under an impression that the matter was less serious the local physician told Mr. Craig that his eye was not lost wholly, but could be saved by treatment. The experiment was tried and failed. Worse remained behind, for he was in danger of losing the other also, through sympathetic inflammation. In this strait he consulted Dr. David Kennedy, of Rondout, N. Y., who told him the injured eye must be taken out to save the other. To this Mr. Craig demurred, and went back home in doubt. His local physician said: "Go to New York." To New York the patient went, and one of the most eminent oculists in the country, having looked at the case, said: "You have lost one eye entirely; go back and do what you can to save the other." Briefly Dr. Kennedy removed the ruined eye, and treated Mr. Craig with "Kennedy's Favorite Remedy" to build up his system, and the result was successful.

Dr. Kennedy's great success as a Surgeon is due to the use of "Favorite Remedy" in the after treatment.

Are you troubled with Dyspepsia, Liver Complaint, Constipation, or derangement of the Kidneys and Bladder, then use Dr. Kennedy's "Favorite Remedy." It will not disappoint you. "Dr. Kennedy's Favorite Remedy" for sale by all druggists.

NATHAN HARPER.

THE NEW BUSINESS OF THE EQUITABLE Life Assurance Society of the U. S. For the Year 1880, was over Thirty-Five Millions of Dollars, The Largest Business Done by any Company in the World.

REASONS FOR THIS RESULT.

The Equitable is the strongest Company in the United States.

Its policies are, by their own express terms, made incontestable after three years. [For precise terms see form of policy contract.]

All such incontestable policies are paid immediately after receipt of satisfactory proof of the death of the insured, and without even the customary delay of sixty or ninety days.

Each ordinary policy provides for a definite surrender-value in paid-up assurance, in case the policy is forfeited after three years from its date and is surrendered within a reasonable time thereafter.

By The Tontine Savings Fund plan of assurance, returns to policy-holders, after the expiration of what is called the Tontine period, are greater than are obtainable on any other system. Actual settlements of Tontine policies have been made in which policy-holders have withdrawn amounts varying from eighty to one hundred and twenty per cent. of premiums paid, besides enjoying a life insurance indemnity during the period. No other company can show such results.

The Tontine plan is the only one devised by which a person may withdraw from his insurance contract at specified periods, receiving the entire reserve and surplus accumulations in cash.

All the ordinary forms of insurance with annual dividends of profits, both cash and reversionary, are issued by this Society.

ASSETS,	-	$41,108,602.
SURPLUS,	-	$9,228,294.

Its business for the last ten years (represented by the new policies issued) has been larger than that of any other Company.

POETRY.

THE UPLIFTED GATES.

Silent and soft from a measureless circle,
Cloudy battalions in royal array,
Move on to Westward in billowy splendor,
Follow, majestic, the monarch of day.

Flashing, he wheels toward a radiant horizon,
Imbuing in vistas of heavenly hue;
Gold, like the radiance of pavement celestial,
Crimson and silver abreast of the blue.

Up toward the cloud ranks that noiselessly follow,
Streams a new glory, effulgent, divine;
Each floating billow shines lustrous and tender,
Shining in radiance ethereal, sublime.

Down, past the distant and shadowy mountains,
Sinks the great dazzling and glittering sun,
Each tinted cloud floats away with new splendor,
Soft in the blue hangs the pearl-tinted moon.

Was it a strain from the choir angelic,
Borne on the silence and lost in mid-air?
Are those the wings of the cherubim, hastening
On to the great host whose rapture they share?

O gates of glory, stand open yet longer!
Trembling, I gaze at the luminous doors,
Yearning to win but one word from the silence,
Only one sign from the unfading shore!

MISCELLANEOUS READING.

AN OLD-FASHIONED GIRL.

"Still a bachelor, Claud? I'm ashamed of you, and, I declare, half-regretful that I did not capture you myself."

So spoke pretty little Mrs. Sheldon, as she sat one afternoon on the piazza of the Ocean House, looking smilingly up into the face of the tall, handsome man who bent over her with such rare debonair grace.

He laughed aloud at her mock-petulant speech.

"You should not blame me, then," he retorted, for what you must hold yourself accountable. You see, ever since Dick cut me out with you, I have been wandering around disconsolate, trying to find a second edition of yourself."

"No, no! That won't do. All the admiration was on my side. Still I must confess that dear old Dick answers my purpose very well—so well that only one thing is wanting to insure my happiness, and that is to take possession, next winter, of a charming house next to ours in town, and let me claim your wife as my dearest friend—"

"As you have been to me all these long years, Ella, the dearest woman friend I ever had; but Dick has no cause for jealousy, for all that. Shall I then tell you why I have never married, although my 35th birthday is looming up startlingly near? I am in a confidential mood this afternoon, and you, shall hear. It is not because I do not want to marry. Sometimes the picture of my own home and hearthstone shapes itself before me until life seems hardly worth the living without it; but it is an ideal picture my fancy paints. It is not a house but a home. It is not the rustle of silken trains through its halls, it is the sunshine of a woman's smile. It is not the threshold of society, but society is left upon its threshold. It boasts no richer, sweeter music than the happy voices and laughter of the little children whom God may send to fill it! You know now why I have never married, although the world calls me a rich man, and I am free; but, Ella, girls nowadays are not fitted for such homes. They are society dolls. I want an old-fashioned girl, and as they're gone out of fashion—unless I go regularly in search of one in some curiosity-shop, where she is labeled and laid away on a shelf—I shan't find her; and even if I made that rash attempt, I shouldn't like to have had to order my wife like a bale of goods."

"You're all wrong, Claud," answered his friend. "Girls' hearts nowadays are just as they were a century ago but—"

"Oh, Ella—" interrupted a fresh, girlish voice, as a young lady stepped through one of the long, drawing-room windows on to the piazza, a faint rose flush tinging her cheeks, as she saw too late that she had come upon a tete-a-tete.

She was a beautiful girl, dressed in the very height and extreme of fashion, from the tip of the little boot to the crown of the flower-wreathed hat.

"My friend, Mr. Arnold, Maude, Miss Kingsland, Mr. Arnold."

So this was Claud Arnold, whom she had heard of all her life. She was not sorry for the interruption, after all; still, stealing only a glance at the dark, handsome face, over which all women raved, and delivering the message which had brought her, she disappeared as she had come.

"Who is she?" queried the man.

"Ralph Kingsland's daughter, and an heiress. I am chaperoning her for a few weeks, as her mother is an invalid. Not at all the sort of girl you are in search of. So see to it that you do not trespass upon my manor in quest of idle amusement."

Notwithstanding which kindly warning, it was straight to Miss Kingsland's side that Claud Arnold wended his way, when, about 9 o'clock the same evening, she entered the ball-room.

He had watched her as she crossed the hall on Mr. Sheldon's arm, and was fain to acknowledge her the most beautiful girl whom Newport yet boasted.

She was exquisitely dressed, too, in some soft, filmy fabric of white, gracefully draped over snowy satin, her neck and arms bare and void of ornament except two glittering jewels in the pink shell-like ears.

"Not at all the woman for a wife," he mentally soliloquized; "but, as a partner for a dance, enough to make one the envy of all the fellows in the room."

"May I have the pleasure of the next waltz, Miss Kingsland?" he said, bowing low before her.

"Thanks!" she answered in a low, musical tone, "but I have not an empty space to-night. I am passionately fond of dancing, and my friends are good enough to see that I have no lack of partners."

"Of course, an entirely unselfish act on their part," was the reply, with just a suspicion of pique in his tone.

Heretofore, with Claud Arnold, the desire was simply father to its attainment; and now he must wait twenty-four hours ere he could clasp the girl's waist and feel her hand in his, as they floated through the room to some of Strauss' dreamy music.

"Well, then," he continued, "shall it be to-morrow night, and will you put me down twice?"

"With pleasure," she said, simply, as her partner approached to claim her.

Somehow it was all stale and unprofitable to Claud that night, and when he retired, rather early than was his custom, the thought which mingled with the smoke of his fragrant Havana, as he sat by his window, listening to the ocean's roar, were if anything a trifle more cynical than his usual wont—nor did he sleep as soundly as usual.

"I need a walk," he said to himself next morning, and started off about 9 o'clock for a solitary stroll.

"In this, however, he was doomed to disappointment, for, turning a sudden angle on the beach, he came face to face with Miss Kingsland.

"What unexpected good fortune!" he exclaimed, doffing his hat. "I did not dream you were such an early riser," looking, as he spoke at the bright color the morning breeze had brought into her cheek, and the dark eyes so frankly uplifted to his own.

"Frightfully unconventional, is it not?" she queried, laughing a low, rippling laugh; "but one must be alone sometimes, and so I am driven to it in self defense."

"Rather an unfeeling hint that my morning's trespass must not be repeated," he said, ruefully.

"Oh, no, indeed! We would not be likely to meet again in my case. Besides, the beach is public property."

Again that uncomfortable sense of pique pervaded her listener's frame. Really it appeared a matter of most sincere indifference whether or not he appeared upon the scene of action.

"Rather a pretty costume you have, to be donned solely for the admiration of the sea-gulls," he continued, looking down at the dainty dress, so perfect in all of its belongings, with the eye of a man who considered himself a connoisseur in feminine apparel—albeit inclined to use his taste for its condemnation.

"I dress for myself, Mr. Arnold. I am passionately fond of pretty things, and fortunately, am able to gratify myself. I have often wondered how men, who are so severe upon women for their love of the beautiful, would like their wives to appear in ill-fitting garments, or as slatterns. By the way did you ever see a man who did not return straightway to his tailor a coat which had in it a crooked seam, or an ugly wrinkle?"

"I can't say I ever did," he replied laughing, while he suddenly remembered that in all his imaginations, the old-fashioned girl who was in his ideal had never presented herself in old-fashioned garments.

The hop that evening Mr. Arnold voted a success, though he usually regarded them as necessary bores.

Miss Kingsland had made dancing an art. He could have wished the music to last forever, as she floated through the room on his arm. She was like some beautiful dream.

Of course he decided mentally: Carry her into the waking realities of life, and you would destroy the charm! Still, there was a freshness, a piquancy, in her conversation which not only attracted, but held him.

To come into her presence was seeking a more bracing atmosphere, and ere many days had fled Claud Arnold found himself counting the hours not spent with her as wasted hours. Yet, that there was any danger to himself or her, he never dreamed.

He had made for himself an ideal to which she was in every way the opposite. Fashion and luxury were to her necessities. The woman he married must have a mind above such trivialities.

Meantime, the ideal for the present was set aside, and the glittering, alluring reality enjoyed.

Three weeks had passed since he had met Miss Kingsland, when, standing one morning on the piazza waiting for her to join him for a promised drive, and idly scanning the morning papers, just delivered at the hotel, his eye fell upon the startling announcement of the temporary, but it was feared permanent, suspension of Kingsland & Co., New York's great bankers.

These were troublous times, when the weak and strong tottered together. Their failure would cause a loss to himself of several thousands; but this Claud Arnold never gave but a passing memory.

His whole thoughts were filled with the girl on whom the crushing blow must fall.

"How pale you look!" said a sweet voice beside him. "Are you not well? Shall we not go?"

He turned toward the speaker. How lovely she looked—lovely not only with nature lovliness, but all the accessory of perfect taste added to make a perfect whole!

Her dress seemed moulded to the exquisite form, her glove to the tiny hand; her hat rested gracefully on the small, well-poised head.

Rob this girl of all her externals, and she would still be beautiful; but it would be like robbing the rose of its dark green leaves, which seemed to belong to it by right.

How would she bear poverty and failure? She should not, if he could save her from them. In that moment he knew how false were his sophistries, and how all unconsciously he had learned the lesson Love only teaches. At first they were both silent on their drive; then she turned toward him with a sort of silent sympathy in her voice:

"Tell me what troubles you?" she said.

"Only," he answered, "that I am waking from a dream, and it is for you to decide whether my waking shall be of earth or heaven. Maude, I love! The dearest wish I have would be to make you my wife! Darling, have I been too abrupt?"

A bright blush mantled her cheek, as she raised her dark eyes to his.

"I will be frank with you, Mr. Arnold," she answered. "Had you spoken yesterday, your words would have given me only pleasure—now they bring a mingled pain, for I cannot give you the answer my heart prompts. I am no longer rich, Mr. Arnold. My father is threatened with failure. When he is in trouble, I cannot think of my happiness. My place is at his side. I intend returning home to-night. I meant to have told you, in any case, but I hated to spoil our drive by dragging in my troubles."

Claud listened in utter amazement. She had known of her father's threatened ruin, and yet had smiled so cheerily, and had found time to sympathize with any misfortune she fancied might have come to him; and now she could so quietly lay aside all thought of self, in thinking of her father and his disaster.

A great wave of tenderness swept over the man's nature, and with it a respect almost holy for the girl whom he had judged once with so narrow a judgment.

"My love," he said, "I will wait for you, will serve for you, as Jacob served for Rachel, but I will never give you up!"

And drawing her to him, he sealed the words with a lover's kiss upon the young lips, which made no resistance to his touch.

But Dame Fortune does not always frown on love's true course.

The suspension of Kingsland & Co., was but temporary after all. The pretty house next to Mrs. Sheldon found tenants in the early winter, such as she had so ardently wished.

But Claud declares, spite of the fact that his wife's trousseau came direct from Paris, and is the envy of all feminine Gotham, that he has realized his two ideals—he has found a home, and he has married an "Old-Fashioned Girl!"

In some London shops they have swinging seats for saleswomen. Is this done to rope customers in?

A NEW ENTERPRISE.

"Mr. Diffenderfer," said a serious looking man with long hair, calling at the former well-known citizens' mansion, on Van Ness avenue, the other day, "I wish to see you on a confidential matter of the greatest importance. We are alone, I believe?"

"We are, I believe," said Mr. D——, much mystified by the movements of the caller, who looked cautiously into the book-case and behind the piano, and concluded by dropping the cat outside the door.

"In the first place, then," said the long-haired man, taking a seat and producing a square leather box from his coat-tail pocket, "allow me to ask if I am correctly informed that your mother-in-law is residing with you?"

"Such is the case," responded Mr. Diffenderfer.

"Very well," said the stranger, unstrapping the box, "I now desire to call your confidential attention—confidential, mind you—to a little invention just gotten out by our company, the A.-I. Company, of Hartford, Connecticut," and he displayed an object that resembled a gigantic glass marble.

"What's that?" asked Diffenderfer. "Some new kind of a liver pill?"

"A pill? That's the genuine Russian glass bomb," asserted the agent.

"Great heavens! Take it away! What do you—— Look out there! Police!" and Mr. Diffenderfer turned a handspring over the back of the sofa.

"Don't be alarmed, my dear sir," blandly explained the stranger. "It isn't loaded. It's only a sample. You see the nitro-glycerine cartridge is not added until the fourth day."

"W-h-a-t the blazes do you mean?"

"Allow me to explain: You see, our Company—the Accident Insuring—notice the leg, please—Company of Hartford—no connection with Mark Twain's Insurance concern—manufactures these articles of the very best of materials, under the supervision of a competent Nihilist, and furnishes them on a strictly honorable and confidential basis to families where—ahem—where they are most needed, as curiosities."

"Curiosities?"

"Exactly. The system is this: Some assumed friend in Russia sends you by express a supposed unfinished glass bomb as a curiosity. You exhibit it around, let it drop on the floor, give it to the baby to play with, etc. On the fourth day you take the entire family to a picnic, with the exception of your mother-in-law, rich grandfather, or whoever it is that is—well, suppose we say—superfluous in the domestic circle. Before leaving, you slip the prepared cartridge into this aperture. When you return the dream of your life is accomplished. It's a little rough on the mirrors and things, but what's that after all?"

And receiving from Mr. Diffenderfer an assurance that he would think over the matter carefully, the agent warmly shook that estimable gentleman's hand, winked in an eloquent and significant manner, pocketed his box, peeped cautiously into the hall, and walked out.—San Francisco Post.

THE COUNTRY NEWSPAPER.

The Seneca Falls Reveille says: "The editing of a country newspaper is no light task, as many are led to believe. The identity and personality of the editor cannot be concealed or avoided—he speaks himself and all his readers know him, and upon him rests the whole responsibility of all he says. Self-respect and an ardent desire to do well and to deserve well at the hands of his subscribers and patrons, prompts him to strive constantly in season and out of season to conduct his journal as to reflect credit upon himself and upon the community in which it is published. The first and most essential thing in the conduct of a country journal is to have it clean. No line or word should be admitted to its columns that might not be repeated in the family circle. In its dealings with men it should be fair and just—if occasion should arise for praise or blame it should be justly meted out. Personal prejudice and bias for good or ill should never control the editorial columns.

"As a purveyor of news the country paper needs much watching and constant scrutiny. To these essentials for the decent conduct of a newspaper must" be added the need of the earnest co-operation of the community among whom it circulates, and for whose benefit, if properly conducted, it does much. No class of men know better than editors the bitterness of a want of appreciation and of moral and material support. If people would only realize what advantage it is to a town to have a decent, well-conducted paper, they would with one accord tender such encouragement and support as would lighten the editorial burden and lift up the editorial heart. The labor bestowed on a live local journal is very great, and it should meet with a generous recognition on the part of all who are interested in the success and prosperity of the village in which it is published."

By the way, Mis' Linton, yer sister, Liza Bradleigh's, comin' back to-morrow. Ma was readin' the postal cards last night, and she came across one from her." "Reading my postal cards?" exclaimed Mrs. Linton, "Why, yes. Ma always reads 'em—leastways she reads such as isn't took right off. She says it's her duty. Might be news of sickness or death or suthin' else, that we'd ought to send right along. They're dreadful aggravatin' readin' though. People don't write as well as they used to, and don't make things clear, nuther. When anybody writes jes' 'Yes' or 'No,' on a postal, no postmaster can make anything of it. But your sister's postal is plain enough, Mis' Linton; thar ain't nothin' indefinite about her. She says: 'comin' Thursday, 5 o'clock train. Have Factotum meet me.' Ma puzzled a good deal over that word 'factotum,' and we both concluded that 'twas the name of your help. Furrin' name, ain't it? NATIONAL GLORY.

The ever rolling wheel of time has again brought us nigh unto the Fourth of July, the most glorious anniversary day in the history of our beloved country, and to honor it with patriotic thought and mention, if in no other way, is the duty of citizenship.

To thankfully appreciate the blessings of free institutions is the true influence of the Fourth of July, and to properly observe it as a national holiday, is to bestow just respect upon actions of unequalled value and upon men of matchless fame.

What does this day mean?

One hundred and five years ago a decree went forth from the representatives of struggling freemen in Congress assembled at Philadelphia proclaiming to the whole world the birth of a Republic. That immortal resolve, after dark and bitter years of battling valor, became an established fact in the national existence of the United States of America.

Such is the meaning of the day—to celebrate the erection of the grandest governmental structure human eyes ever beheld and human hopes ever clustered around, the great Republic of the West.

What is that Republic?

To think of what it was a century ago and what it is now almost baffles belief. Yet an infant in comparison with the age crowned governments of Europe, it far surpasses them all in point of territorial extent and grandeur and the natural resources of wealth, and founded upon the inalienable rights of man, if so preserved, it is destined eventually to revolutionize the earth by breaking into atoms the chains of monarchy and bidding the oppressed masses assert and enjoy the Heaven intended dignity of free and independent manhood.

There is nothing throughout the wide range of earthly possessions that can equal in richness the boon of American citizenship. It out-dazzles the gems of Kings and Princes and turns to base alloy their accumulated golden treasures. In the Republic of Washington all men are equal before the law, and no one lives subservient to any human master other than the clearly ordained authority of law. Here no menial fawns to superior blood, because here there is no king but God.

Let us therefore remember aright the teachings of our national anniversary, gratefully acknowledge the priceless blessings it has conferred upon all, and register the fervent vow that we will individually exert every ability to render the patriotic work of 1776 perpetual and progressive,—

"O! thus be it ever, when freemen shall stand
Between their loved homes and the war's desolation!
Blest with victory and peace, may the heaven-rescued land
Praise the power that hath made and preserved us a nation.
Then conquer we must, for our cause it is just;
And this be our motto—'In God is our trust'—
And the star spangled banner in triumph shall wave
O'er the land of the free, and the home of the brave."

DEATH OF SILAS C. HERRING.

On Thursday evening of last week, died suddenly, at his residence in this city, Silas C. Herring, Esq., of apoplexy. Probably no face was more familiar on our streets to many of us, than that of the deceased; who, although for some time a sufferer from rheumatic gout, and long passed the allotted three-score and ten, yet with that determination that had during his early life overcome every obstacle to prosperity, allowed no ailment to interfere with his daily walk. He was born at Brookfield, Mass., in 1804, and worked himself up from a farmer's boy, step by step, until he became one of the leading manufacturers of the country, and had made his name familiar in every civilized land. His first clerical position was when 17 years of age, in his uncle's grocery store at Albany. While there engaged he became acquainted with many prominent business men and politicians, whom by his attractive qualities, he drew towards him in bonds of lasting friendship. The following is taken from a very thorough article on the deceased's history, published in the New York Times of Saturday last:

"He remained in the grocery for six years, until his uncle sold out and opened an exchange office. Silas became his assistant in the new business, and succeeded him in its management at the uncle's death. The business prospered, and young Herring formed a partnership with a Mr. Gough, a steam-boat stewart, the firm name being Herring & Gough. In this enterprise he made his first $10,000, and he became so well known at the capital that Gov. Throop made him Paymaster of the Fifth Artillery, and he afterward became Colonel of that regiment. In the Winter of 1834 Mr. Herring closed his business in Albany and removed to this city, where he opened a wholesale grocery store at No. 62 Front street, the firm name being Herring & Greene. In the same block, and engaged in the same business, were E. D. Morgan and President Sherman, now of the Merchants' Bank. The business centre of the city was then below Canal street, and the Bowling Green was the resort of the fashionable families, who lived for the most part in East Broadway and on the East side. After a year of successful business Herring & Green were burned out in the great fire of 1835. The firm was insured, but nearly all the insurance companies went into bankruptcy after the fire, and the young grocers were ruined. Their credit was still good, however, and they soon started again with a third partner, the firm then being Herring, Green & Co. This firm lasted for two years, and then failed in the great commercial crisis of 1837.

"For three years succeeding the failure Mr. Herring battled with adverse fortunes, and then he formed the acquaintance, in the Howard House, of Enos Wilder. Wilder had discovered the secret of the non-conducting power of plaster of Paris, and he made a primitive kind of safe, which he called the Salamander. The makers of other safes ridiculed this invention, and Wilder challenged them to a public test, which was made at the Coffee-house-slip, foot of Wall street, in 1840. The safes were all destroyed in the test but the Salamander, and that preserved the books and papers that had been put in it. Herring immediately opened negotiations with Wilder, and was appointed agent for his safes, beginning business in 1841. Three years later he bought the sole right to make the Salamander safes, paying Wilder a royalty of 1 cent a pound. Mr. Herring's first manufactory and sales-rooms were at Water and Depeyster streets. Only one locksmith was employed, and he furnished the locks as fast as the safes were made. Although the prices were then only from $40 to $250, sales were slow. Mr. Herring soon made improvements in the Wilder safes, and one of his tests, at the foot of Wall street, was witnessed by the elder Bennett and by Horace Greeley. Before many years had elapsed he moved his factory to a larger building in Washington street, and employed 20 men. In 1849 he moved to the premises now occupied, at Hudson street and Ninth avenue, a five-story building covering half an acre of ground, the firm then being Herring & Co. At that time 50 men comprised his entire working force and safes costing $500 were looked upon as curiosities. Now there are employed in the factory upward of 600 men, and safes or vaults are frequently built costing $50,000. In 1851 he put $1,000 in the draw of one of his safes, and offered to give it to anybody who could get it. The offer was left open for a month, but nobody got the money. In 1852 Mr. Herring stopped manufacturing safes under the Wilder patent, having paid the inventor $154,000 royalty in four years.

"Mr. Herring was one of the early members of the Republican party in this State. He was frequently offered the nomination for various offices, but always declined until 1847, when he became the Whig candidate for the office of Assistant Alderman from the Ninth Ward. He was elected and served one term, and in 1849 he was elected Alderman of the same ward. These were his only ventures in politics, but while he was in office he won the esteem alike of friends and adversaries by his straightforward, manly course. He was a warm supporter of the Union during the war of the rebellion, and sent two of his sons to the front, one of whom, Silas F. Herring, fell mortally wounded in a charge upon the enemy in the battle of Murfreesboro. He contributed largely from his wealth in furnishing men and supplies for the government, and few wealthy men in this city have aided the suffering and deserving poor, to a greater extent, or been more unostentatious in their charities. He was one of the original incorporators of the Juvenile Asylum, and gave a large sum of money to that institution. In 1868 he purchased the library of the late Dr. Credner, Professor of Theology in the University of Greessen, in Germany, consisting of about 2,500 volumes, and presented it to the Universalist Theological Seminary, at Clinton, in this State. Subsequently he contributed $5,000 to the same institution for the erection of a fire-proof library building, which is named after him. At different times he was a Director of, or was connected in other capacities with, the Broadway, and the Importers and Traders' Bank, the Manhattan and Broadway Savings Banks, the Manhattan and National Life Insurance Companies, the Park Fire Insurance, and the Firemen's Fund Insurance Company."

For the past many years he had entirely laid aside the cares of business, the interests of which were transferred to able hands. Early in life he was a great traveler and had very thoroughly visited all parts of Europe with his family, at different times. He leaves behind him a son, Mr. F. O. Herring, well known in social circles in this city and a member of the firm established by the deceased. A daughter, also residing here, the wife of Captain James Brady one of the most prominent lawyers of New York city; and another, Mrs. Wm. H. Ellery whose husband is also with the firm of Herring & Co. The remains were taken to New York on the 10:36 train Sunday morning, and were interred in Greenwood Cemetery from that city. The funeral services were held in the church of "Our Saviour" in Fifty-seventh street, near Eighth avenue, the body being placed in catafalque near the chancel rail. The pall-bearers were William Montross, N. L. Cort, J. C. Brinck and E. Ellsworth. The officiating clergyman was Rev. Dr. Hitchcock of New Jersey. Among the prominent gentlemen present were John R. Ployd, Elijah E. Sherman, George Roberts, George Meyers, Major Haggerty and others.

LOCAL ANNEX.

Prof. Bard's Singing Class.

In response to formal invitations, quite a number assembled in Chautauqua Hall, on Monday evening, to enjoy an impromptu musical entertainment arranged by Prof. E. H. Bard and taken part in by his Singing Class and a few private pupils. The establishment of this teacher's school of vocal training, is of recent date; and the exhibition was, in consequence, not intended to display any perfection reached, but merely to allow friends and parents of the scholars an opportunity to judge of the efficacy of the methods followed, and the improvement attained during even so short a time. The programme included, generally, selections of no particular beauty and presenting no difficulties of vocalisms—mainly such melodies as had been used during the bi-weekly lessons as exercises for the several parts. "Drift on my Boat" and "'Tis the Whippoorwill" were rather the most pleasing of the efforts of the class. In the soloists, however, there was much to admire and enjoy. Miss Alice Holmes sang "I've left the snow clad hills" in as attractive a contralto voice for one of her age, as we have ever listened to. The young lady gave promise of future attainments in the same direction, which are to be envied. Her sister, Miss Ellen Holmes, sang Millard's "Longing" in a soprano that at times approached perfection in its medium tones. The future drilling that her teacher will give her higher notes, will result most advantageously. Mr. Francis S. Runyon sang as bass solos "I fear no foe" and the "Yeoman's Wedding Song"—the latter of which, however, failing to receive the appreciation accorded the former. Mr. Orris Runyon and Prof. Bard gave as a duett "O haste Crimson Morning" in a manner that was applauded. The class, which is composed entirely of young ladies, was assisted in one or two of its choruses by the Messrs. Runyon spoken of above. Two piano solos were also added to the entertainment and enjoyed by the audience in spite of the extreme incapacity of the instrument. So pleasing as a whole, however, was the occasion, that its repitition when the class reaches another degree in advance, is to be looked forward to.

North Plainfield Public School.

The order of exercises published in our last issue, as to be carried out at the Annual Commencement of the North Plainfield Public School, was most successful. On Thursday evening of last week the Warren Mission Chapel was crowded with the usual large attendance that gathers upon the occasion, and many more would have been admitted had the accommodations been greater. The interior of the building, besides its original decoration, was very handsomely dressed with flowers which literally covered the melodeon and were massed into fragrant mounds in different parts of the platform. The direction of affairs, as we mentioned before, was in the hands of Miss Dora B. Skillman, and no smoother passage of an evening's entertainment have we ever experienced. Although the programme included twenty-six numbers, it was gone through with in but little more than an hour. Nor was it hurried, but so perfect was every arrangement and so thoroughly prepared was every scholar when called upon, that without a break each part and feature succeeded one another. The selections given were all good, and the audience retained its interest from the beginning to the end. The choruses were exceedingly pleasing; and that led by a duett, sung by two of the young lady scholars, was especially appreciated and applauded. Miss Sarah Randolph and Miss Dora Skillman represented the teacher's corps with a most beautifully rendered duett, that the audience insisted should be repeated. Miss Lizzie Kiernan's "Parting Words" were decidedly well chosen and appropriate, while her delivery was quite effective. Mr. Charles Powlison's essay on "Ambition" showed him to be a young man of ability as a composer, and was an essay of which anyone might have been proud. Of the other literary selections we can justly say, they afforded entire satisfaction. Miss Maggie Keegan and Miss Gussie Voehl were probably the most finished in their elocutionary efforts; and the Misses Julia Johnson, Rosa Becker, Tillie Hudson and Alice Evileth deserve mention, if any can be designated as particularly praiseworthy. The occasion as a whole was an agreeable change from the customary commencement exercises, whereat stupid and more or less illiterate compositions on subjects of which the alleged author knows little or nothing (touched up for public exhibition by the teacher) are read to an audience uninterested and bored throughout.

On the following afternoon at the same place, was held a reception of the Primary Department, and again was the building filled. Mr. Jas. K. Arnold, Clerk of the Board of Trustees, managed the programme with much satisfaction. It included many pleasing "class exercises" and pretty choruses, together with a number of enjoyable selections spoken by bright little ones of both sexes. Miss Maggie Cory captured the hearts of all by her beauty and cunning lisp, while Miss Mamie Young and Master Elmore Taynor, received much applause for their admirable efforts. One of the most enjoyable features was a duett sung by the Misses Lulu Collins and Allie DeCamp.

Thanks.

At the regular monthly meeting of the Board of Governors of Muhlenberg Hospital held Tuesday evening June 28, 1881, the following resolutions were unanimously adopted:

Resolved, That the thanks of the Board of Governors of Muhlenberg Hospital be and are hereby presented to the ladies of the Auxiliary Board and to all associated with them, for the [illegible] and [illegible] through their efforts in organizing and conducting the [illegible] held on behalf of the [illegible] fund;

Resolved, That the thanks of the Board of Governors of Muhlenberg Hospital be tendered to [illegible] for their valuable services rendered in furnishing the music on the occasion.

Our Railroad Accommodations.

When such careful and responsible financial writers as are engaged on the Times, Evening Mail and other New York dailies, state upon official authority that the Central Railroad of New Jersey is earning twelve per cent on its capital, we are impelled to believe that such is the case. Consequently, when it comes to a matter of right as to the accommodations that should be given the city of Plainfield and the town of Bound Brook, we feel that our claim for as much benefit if not more than is allowed the latter, is a just one. The travel by trip and commutation ticket to and from this city, we may safely claim is five times greater than the same business between New York and Bound Brook, yet passengers to and from the latter place are favored with the use of every express train that passes over the road. It cannot be offered as an excuse that the delay caused by another stoppage could not be overcome, as many of the trains stop at this station on signal or to let passengers off; and, if it can be done when occasion requires, why not at all times? In regard to those trains which do not stop here even on signal, it would be ridiculous to make the excuse mentioned, because sufficient time is spent needlessly at Bound Brook to allow of a five minutes wait in the Plainfield depot. The money our citizens are daily pouring into the cash boxes of the road, demands every advantage and accommodation possible, in return.

It cannot but be plain to every unbiased patron of the road that the stops could be made if the managers desired to so order. The accommodation such action would be, is as apparent. Business men could leave at 9 o'clock in the morning and be landed in New York at the same time as they now reach that city by leaving Plainfield at 8:31; and there are five other trains during the day that would be as available for those to whom time is an object. The annoyance, also, of changing cars between here and Philadelphia and waiting at Bound Brook for a through train, would likewise be avoided. Let Mr. Joseph S. Harris the General Manager direct his attention to the matter, give Plainfield her due and order all trains to stop at her station; thus adding another to the many benefits he has established during his short connection with the road, "and his petitioners will ever pray."

The Plainfield Academy.

We are glad to chronicle the increased prosperity of this school since its removal to the present desirable location on Seventh street. The school has just closed a very successful year. The examinations just completed have been very creditable to all concerned. The essays were well composed and correct. Declamations and reading exhibited a practical knowledge of the principle of elocution. The improvement in writing demonstrates the value of teaching by principle on the blackboard. In book-keeping, mathematics and the other branches of study, there was evidence of hardwork and intelligent teaching. The last day of the session Prof. Lyon announced the following young gentlemen as first in one or more branches of study: Daniel Adams, Wm. A. Kennedy, Geo. Stevenson, Charles Sandford, Samuel Beeching, John Parkhurst and Ferdinand Streuli. As these names were read off, the boys greeted the announcement with applause, showing that they heartily concurred in the decision of their teachers. In the Primary Department Master Gerald Lowe received the medal for deportment and application, and Master Harry Johnson received the prize for the best composition. After the announcement of honors the pupils adjourned to other quarters, where they partook of a bountiful collation. Before leaving for home a motion was proposed by one of the boys, which was seconded and unanimously passed, thanking Prof. Lyon for the efficient manner in which they had been instructed, and for the considerate treatment they had received during the past year. Such a spontaneous expression of opinion coming from the boys themselves, speaks more in favor of the discipline and efficiency of the Plainfield Academy than volumes of written commendations.

Our City Treasurer Endorsed by the Supreme Court.

The following memorandum of a decision of Judge Dixon given on Tuesday, is a rather severe criticism of recent actions of the City and County Collectors. We publish the opinion in full, which cannot but convince everyone as to its justice and impartiality:

Sheridan
vs.
Van Winkle. } Mandamus.

The theory, upon which the peremptory writ in this case was issued, was that the City Collector was bound to pay over all monies to the City Treasurer, who was bound to pay the State and County quota to the County Collector. If this theory had been acted on, the City Collector would have paid to the City Treasurer $3,300 (which he has paid to the County Collector) and the City Treasurer would have had the power (we say nothing about the right) to pay this sum to the County Collector on account of the sum named in the writ. By demanding and receiving this sum of $3,300 from the City Collector, the County Collector has prevented the City Treasurer from exercising this power, and he should not therefore be allowed to complain of an inability which he has himself caused. If the City Treasurer will serve written notice on the County Collector that he demand that that sum of $3,300 be credited upon this writ, and then pays to the County Collector the balance due on the writ, he may withdraw the return already made and make a proper return of obedience. This must be done forthwith.

Prompt Payment.

NEWTON, N. J., June 21st, 1881.
HON. N. PERRY, Gen'l. Ag't. for the State, of Jersey of the Equitable Life Assurance Society of the United States:

DEAR SIR—Through you I extend my thanks to the above company for the prompt and cheerful manner in which they settled my claim on policy No. 55,259 on the life of my late husband, Jacob L. Swayze. According to the terms of the policy I did not expect the money before August 16th, sixty days after proofs of death reached their office. But in just six days after I handed them to your Special Agent, Mr. A. B. Reynell, he called to pay me the full amount of my claim, $10,724.42.

In acknowledging the receipt hereof I congratulate you on being connected with a company whose name is Equitable; whose motto is equity, and whose practice is promptness in payment.

Very respectfully,
JOANNA H. SWAYZE.

Trotting on the Fourth.

Lovers of trotting will witness some fine trials of speed on the track of the Fair Grounds of the "U. & M. C. M. A. A.," on Park avenue, this city, next Monday, the Fourth. Good purses are offered and some well-known fast horses entered in the races. In the 2:30 class, Peralto, Billy Button and Josephine S. are well-known to the sporting fraternity as fast horses, while in the 2:45 class appears the names of some good steppers owned by citizens of this city. The managers of the trot promise that it will be a success in both enjoyment and fairness. See list of entries in another colum.

FIRE MATTERS.

The adjourned meeting of the Firemen's Relief Association was held at the engine house of Plainfield No. 2, on Monday evening last. The Finance Committee having audited Treasurer Shaw's accounts, his annual statement, as presented at the last meeting, was received and ordered placed on file, and his bondsmen released. Treasurer Mallinson presented his bondsmen in the sum of $1,000 each, and they were accepted, and the books and accounts turned over to him and he entered upon his duties. Wm. Krausse was placed on the Relief Committee and Frank Whitely on the Finance Committee to fill vacancy caused by resignation of Chas Seibel. Next meeting to be held at Warren Engine House.

The Board of Managers of the Plainfield Fire Department have made every necessary arrangement towards the protection of our city from possible conflagration while we celebrate the anniversary of the Declaration of Independence. Men have been appointed who will relieve each other in watching from the tower during Sunday night, Monday and Monday night, and the Engineers of the several steamers or their assistants will be constantly on duty at the different houses. Horses will not be engaged, as experience has proven them more bother than benefit. Not being used to the work, they delay the men more than they facilitate arrival at the fire.

THE dog ordinance is now in force.

VACATION has arrived for all but the poor printer.

IT never rains—but it pours very frequently, nowadays.

NOW you may take the gamey black bass with hook and line—if you can.

THE young folks now make excuses to sit up nights to obtain a view of the comet.

THE M. E. church held its usual June Jubilee on last Tuesday afternoon and evening.

HAVE you seen the comet? Look above the mountains back of North Plainfield—that is, if you can find a clear night.

ON Tuesday, the 30th of August, the Crescent Avenue Presbyterians, as is their custom, will take a day's recreation at Ocean Grove.

THE members of St. Mary's Church will give an excursion to some attractive spot, not yet decided upon, on Thursday the 28th inst. The proceeds, it is rumored, will be devoted to the furnishing of Father Morris' new house.

MORE accidents will occur this Fourth of July through the use of cheap toy pistols than by any other cause. These inventions are an abomination and dealers should be restricted from selling them, or else their manufacture stopped.

A FINE display of fire works will be made, as usual, by Mr. E. P. Thorn, at his hotel, the Mansion House, on Monday evening next. At Mr. R. S. Little's on Park avenue and other private residences many beautiful pieces and quantities of rockets, candles and the like, will be "set off" on the same occasion.

DURING a thunder shower last Sunday, lightning struck the barn of Mr. Peter C. Osborne, near New Market, and did considerable damage to the structure. The bolt descended into the stall occupied by Mr. J. W. Johnson's valuable stallion "John Lambert," and it seems a miracle that the animal was not killed.

AT the fair held on Friday afternoon of last week, by the scholars of Mrs. Austin's Craig Place school, for the benefit of the Children's Home, over $30 was taken in. The young people who labored so successfully are to be praised for what was done in spite of the lack of patronage the public gave their efforts.

ENOUGH money has been subscribed by the merchants and residents of the city, to purchase 75 rounds of powder which will be fired near the old freight house on Monday morning at sunrise. The gunners on the occasion, Mr. Thomas MacDonald, his son Richard and Mr. John Goodwin, desire to thank the public for its contributions.

THE following were chosen as officers, for the coming six months, of Perseverance Lodge No. 74 K. of P., at a recent election: J. C. Carney, C. C.; N. H. Guttman, V. C.; Martin Croose, P.; Webster Grant, M. of F.; F. Whittlely, M. at A.; E. Ulrich, Trustee. They will be installed this (Friday) evening by Mr. Rhodes D. D. G. C. of Elizabeth.

THE coming "day we celebrate" will undoubtedly be a hot one, but no one need suffer the enervating effects of the atmosphere, when they can obtain of Mr. J. B. Miller, at Laing's Hotel, a bottle of the refreshing and strengthening Hub Punch. Have it in the house to offer your friends, and they will consider you a host of both generosity and judgment.

MR. Henry J. Hankinson, formerly a faithful constable of this city and its first alderman, has become so reduced in circumstances by reason of old age and blindness, as to necessarily depend on the charity of the public for his support. Many of our philanthropic citizens have liberally subscribed towards such an object, and we feel assured others will follow suit.

WE are glad to learn that the Corporation Counsel intends to make a movement in the direction of clearing our street corners of the evening loafer. Why—O Charley Dodd—do you not arrest a half-peck or so, and give Judge Runyon an opportunity to make an example of them? The fines, in view of present mandamuses (and still there're more to follow) would be most acceptable.

ONE of our city's chronic offenders was taken before Justice Wadsworth on Friday last, on a charge of assault, and was subsequently freed upon payment of a fine. On Monday Judge Runyon ruled the same as violating a city ordinance in another direction, and shipped (by rail) the offender to the County Jail for ten days. The fire crackers will be all exploded when he returns.

THE Brooklyn Review of June 25th, publishes a most flattering account of the recent visit of Plainfield Lodge No. 44, I. O. O. F., to Magnolia Lodge of the same fraternity, of that city. Past Grand Master S. Alpheus Smith's speech on the occasion is liberally quoted, and also an impromptu poem full of praise of Secretary Arnold, P. G. Boice, and others of our home association. The Mansion House was referred to as a cherished memory of the past visit of the Brooklynites to this city.

MR. W. Bradford Williams, at present a resident of this city, is to give an elocutionary entertainment at the M. E. Church this (Friday) evening. The gentleman is most highly spoken of by the press as a recitationist of remarkable powers, and having full command of dialect, humorous and dramatic representations. His variously pictured face contortions as displayed in the post office, prove him to have full command of the many expressions that the features are capable of portraying. An exhibition of his talents at the farewell reception given the Rev. Thos. Stockton recently, so whetted the appetites of his hearers as to insure at least their presence this evening.

THE P. H. S. COMMENCEMENT.

Arrangements for its Completion—The Graduates and the Programme—The Successful Competitors for Prizes—The Star Roll of Honor—The Valedictory and Class Ode—Other Essays.

As we go to press with this issue before the beginning of the customary graduation exercises of the Plainfield High School's Class of '81, it is impossible to record the ultimate and entire success of the affair from personal observation. It is, however, safe to say that the young ladies (and gentlemen) "looked remarkably attractive" and "did themselves and their teachers great credit;" and from our knowledge of the component parts of the class, we have no hesitation in according it as flattering encomiums as we have always been obliged in justice to award its predecessors.

The graduates will be twelve in number, consisting of Messrs. Franc Goddard, Foster Milliken, George Collins and the Misses Flora A. Randolph, Aretta Hetfield, Beulah P. Ketcham, Laura Brady, Lillian Coward, Grace Daniel, Jennie Harriott, Carrie E. Randolph and Lena Gardner. Their standing in general is exceedingly good, although it is only possible to select for public display in particular, those appearing on the programme published below. Besides the valedictory—which we always give in full with pleasure because of its universal praiseworthiness—we have this year published three others, more admirable than usual by reason of their remarkable and satisfying research into modern subjects. The original Ode, by a member of the class, which we also give, reflects great credit on the young lady composing it. We regret that she has requested no mention of her name to be made in connection with it, but we feel assured that the public will recognize similar talent in the essay on "Life, a Geometrical Problem" included in the programme.

One circumstance that claims especial mention is the unfortunate situation of Mr. Franc Goddard, brought about by severe illness. That young gentleman had stood among the highest of the class, but being recently confined to his bed, was unable to compete for the prizes and lost the award he would otherwise have secured by being four years on the Star Roll of Honor.

The competive contests are as in former years, for the Stillman prize in Mathematics, the Brown prize in English Composition, the Murray prize in United States' History, the Kirkner prize in Spelling and the Rutter prize in Physiology. The Stillman and Rutter prizes are each $15.00 in gold to the first and $10 to the second. The others are handsome volumes of valuable literary works. They are awarded with regard to the standing of the competitors upon a general examination, with the exception of the English Composition contest which is judged by a Committee composed of the Rev. E. P. Ketcham, Judge J. Hervey Ackerman and Henry P. Tallmadge Esq. The fortunate ones we are enabled to say, will be as given elsewhere in this article.

The Rev. A. H. Lewis will deliver one of his interesting and appropriate addresses, and the prizes will be awarded by Dr. Chas. H. Stillman, President of the Board of Education, and a gentleman of nearly thirty years identification with Plainfield's educational direction. Those who will receive additional badges as continuing another year on the Roll, as well as those who have gained their first, are as follows:

CLASS ODE.

Gone, another fleeting year!
Time has turned another scroll,
Heights half-won to us appeal;
Nearer seems the welcome goal.

In the past year we have labored
"Not to seem, but rather be;"
With this for the future's watchword,
Work for an eternity.

Soon our school-ties we must sever;
Each a sep'rate path must take,
May the thought of past endeavor
Pleasant memories awake.

The valedictorian this year is a daughter of the Rev. E. P. Ketcham pastor of the First Presbyterian Church. The composition, it will be seen, has never been excelled and in one or two points displays admirable judgment. The customary flattery that seems to be considered as necessarily lavished on the "kind teachers left behind," has happily been omitted further than is appropriate and requisite. The class in general is dealt with most satisfactorily and a careful perusal will interest all.

THE VALEDICTORY.

In turning from a finished past to an opening future, if we say good-by in more cheerful fashion than is the custom and in behalf of my class, I do not address separately those to whom our education has been entrusted, it will not be from any lack of gratitude or of appreciation of their thoughtful attention and wise guidance.

It may perhaps be a better tribute to speak not alone of our appreciation of the care and thought in our training, but also of the manner in which this interest has been shown both in our improvement and our happiness, for no attempt has been made to change active, fun-loving pupils into sedate burden-bearers. In reviewing our school life, we see that the motive has been not simply to store the mind with the facts found in the text books, but while paying due attention to these, at the same time to give general information, to teach the pupils how to study, to inculcate principles of right, to encourage an honorable spirit of self control, and to educate to true manhood and womanhood. As a result, instead of driving pupils to hate study, direction and encouragement have been given to the desire for knowledge, awakened by the work.

In Mathematics few choose to be shown a demonstration rather than to work it out themselves, and study has consisted not alone in obtaining the dry facts of textbooks, but in comparing our own opinions with established authorities. Prizes are not necessary in order to excite an interest in study. As the pupils advance to the higher grades, a growing sense of honor may be observed, and a spirit of helpfulness, shown in kind acts, small in themselves, but indicative of the prevailing spirit. This could not be said of a school in which there was less wise and efficient management, or less intelligent, patient, and thorough teaching.

I do not wish that the farewell to my classmates shall be spoken in gloomy words which shall turn our thoughts in sadness to this chapter of our lives closing upon us to-night. During our school days we have looked forward with a certain anticipation to the end, and it has been with strange and mingled feelings that we, the Senior class, for the last time, this morning met with the others for our usual exercises in the chapel. The last page of the book of this school life has been written; the blank pages given to us years ago are now filled with honest endeavor and hard work, while here and there a blot tells of carelessness. Hereafter, these books which we close to-night will be opened only by memory, as a child turns to a finished exercise to compare the work with that of a more advanced grade. Of course, the thought that we will never again return to our long-accustomed work, and will no longer meet as a regular class brings with it regret, but let us look on the bright side, and entertain pleasant memories of the happy days which we leave behind us, with cheerful anticipations of the future, opening we all hope with pleasant prospects for each. United in class work for years, we have learned to overlook each other's faults, and to emphasize the good traits. Although we shall now meet less frequently, let us never forget our school days, filled with varied experiences, often of anxiety over a pending examination, sometimes of victory over some difficulty, and not infrequently of amusement, for our school life has not been devoid of what young people call genuine fun.

May we enter upon our new and untried future with good cheer, for we have our life work to accomplish, and this is only begun. Let us look upon the past as only an inauguration for the future, as a firm foundation upon which each is with earnest purpose to build the structure of a true life, in the spirit of our motto, "Esse quam videri."

The prizes offered will be awarded as follows:

English Composition—Miss Bessie B. Shepperson. Subject, "Pictures in Poetry." Honorable mention—Miss Getty L. Button.

Mathematics—Miss Beulah P. Ketcham. Second—Miss Carrie E. Randolph.

Physiology—Miss M. Lula Kaufman. Second—Miss Nellie M. Sherwin.

U. S. History—Arthur H. Mulford. (A number of the class were so near alike that it was impossible to determine to whom to give "Honorable Mention.")

Spelling—Miss Augusta J. Ackerman. Honorable Mention—Miss Emma Coriell.

Following the completion of the exercises, the classes of '79 and '80 will tender, in Assembly Hall, a reception to those just closing their H. S. career. The room has been most handsomely decorated for the occasion, and the usual grand time will undoubtedly be carried out. Those who have been especially untiring in their labors to most ably arrange a successful affair are the Misses, Jennie Murray, Lizzie VanWinkle, May Grace, Aline Randolph, Mary Boosp, Nellie Pangborn and Eleanor Demarest, assisted by Messrs. O. T. Roberts, Wm. Bass, George Titsworth, Wm. Angelman, Harry Depew, Abraham Hooley, Ernest Ackerman, Frank Smith and Charles VanName.

In publishing the following we do not wish to be misjudged. Others will probably show as much worth and prove as deserving of newspaper notoriety; but it would be impossible to print all in full and we have, after a careful inspection, selected these three as displaying not the deepest study and most careful writing, but as dealing with the subjects most generally interesting at the present day.

THE EMPRESS EUGENIE.

"Every one is a hero worshiper," said Thomas Carlyle. Yes, and each is connected with his own especial hero by unseen links of character and circumstances. But let a popular hero make a false step, and all eagerly join to hasten his downward course. Many a hero and heroine has had this experience. Few, however, have fallen from a loftier height to a greater depth of sorrow and oblivion than Eugenie, the wife of Napoleon III. She was the victim of fickle human nature intensified in the French.

Her life may be divided into three periods. The first was one of unparalleled splendor. Floating down the stream of a world's applause with everything smiling and auspicious, little did she think of possible clouds and storms. Her training had been singularly adapted to her future, for she was thoroughly educated in languages, history, and current topics, even including politics. During her early public life, her leading motive evidently was love of power, softened, however, by sympathy, which was a strong element of Eugenie's character. In 1865, with the Emperor, she visited the cholera hospitals, where, regardless of her own peril, she went from ward to ward, cheering the sick and comforting the dying.

The young and beautiful Empress by her tact and fascination, was well fitted for gaining and using power, while she also completely won the hearts of the French. This was a great achievement, for France has ever been jealous of foreigners at court, and few could have accomplished what was done by Eugenie, the Spaniard.

But winning as she was, some concessions must be made to the critics of our heroine. In suddenly becoming the leader of the fashionable world, Eugenie's natural love of power was gratified, and her fondness for display led her to great extravagance. She may also have been obstinate as well as proud and ambitious. Upon one occasion offended by the Emperor, she even went so far as to visit England and Scotland against his wishes, taking refuge in the fact that he could not hinder her without exposing their disagreement. Receiving so much homage, she would not have been human, had not her ambition and love of power been strengthened. As these developed, circumstances and her own sympathies turned her attention into new channels, and thus opened another era in her life, the political period. Here she encountered new and conflicting elements, and roused bitter hatred. Her political career carried her bark into stormy seas, and she suddenly found herself surrounded by gathering clouds. Her judgment was often at fault, but let all due honor be paid her for her unwavering fidelity to France and her religion. During the discussion previous to the Franco-Prussian war, by her energy and persuasive powers, she completely turned the Ministry to her own mistaken views. There is no reason to suppose that she was not sincere when she said "The only end the war can have is victory for France." Since the Prussian victory over Austria in 1866, the French had felt eclipsed by their German neighbors, and the two nations, the Catholic and Protestant, hated each other with religious fervor. Eugenie spoke of the war as "God's intervention to check Protestantism." "This is my war," she repeatedly said, and as she watched Napoleon departing from St. Cloud, July 1870, little did she imagine that he would never again see Paris, that in less than two months his whole army would be vanquished and himself a prisoner of war. While the two armies were engaged on the frontier, the threatening clouds at home were darkening, and at the announcement of the surrender at Sedan, the tempest burst upon Eugenie, and her gay life bark was suddenly wrecked.

We now see her entering upon a third period of her life. She is driven from her beloved Paris by the wild rage of the people whom she loved and to whose interests she had been devoted. She who had lately been the most admired of the world was now wandering with her son through the streets of a foreign city, homeless and friendless. Overwhelmed with misfortunes and suffering acutely, not a word of abuse of the French escaped her lips. In Jan. 1873, we find Eugenie at Chiselhurst. Here Napoleon III is dying, surrounded by none of the pomp which usually attends the death-bed of a monarch. Doubtless now the two extremes of her fortune rise before Eugenie in bitter contrast. She has seen her cherished plans failing one by one, her former friends deserting her, and now another link in the chain of hope and ambition is severed. But another and even more bitter experience awaits her in Zululand where six years later the last link is snapped by the death of her son. Before the war, she had once said, "My life is finished, but I live again in my son, and my true joys are those which passing through his heart, reach mine." But the Zulu's assegai which passed through his heart in Africa pierced her's in England. In 1880, on the anniversary of his death, returning from a sad pilgrimage to the sacred shrine of her hopes in Zululand, she visits St. Helena, where years before, Napoleon Bonaparte had watched the idly moving waves, from the bars of his prison home. And the resounding waves beat a slow and solemn accompaniment to the minor tones of her reflections, while as we may imagine, she thinks; "French history has indeed repeated itself. The life of Josephine, the deserted wife of Napoleon Bonaparte was not more sorrowful than my own. Little kindness has been shown by France to the wives of her rulers. My life has been almost a repetition of that of the far-famed Marie Antoinette, who like myself was of foreign birth, the wife of a French ruler, terminating a short brilliant career by a sudden fall. But while Marie Antoinette was executed immediately, I live on in misery. Now that my son is dead, I am indeed left solitary. Farewell, a long farewell, to all my greatness!

"To my native country, Spain, I am a stranger, and France, my adopted nation, has forgotten me. Those who look upon the shipwreck of my life know nothing of its misery."

"Thrice happy you that look as from the shore,
And have no venture in the wreck you see."

The career of a living public character can seldom be given as a completed chapter. Life may again open in various tempting ways, but there is absolutely nothing of hope for Eugenie. Dante could find no fitter words to place at the entrance of his Inferno than;

"All hope abandon, ye who enter here!"

Eugenie, who eleven years ago ruled the fashionable world controlled the affairs of France, and affected the governments of other countries, is to-day in lonely and hopeless exile.

ENGLAND'S POLICY IN SOUTH AFRICA.

Scarcely had England settled the disputed question of her authority in Afghanistan, than she involved herself in a serious difficulty with the Zulus, a semi-barbarous tribe, and petty sovereignty in the south of Africa.

The Zulus are a branch of the Caffres, a native race of the north, who fought their way southward and finally settled in the fertile plains bordering upon Natal.

It has been supposed that they were treacherous and revengeful, but travelers tell us that they are hospitable, brave, and a type of the perfect physical man. Rouse their anger by unjust treatment, and they are savages; trust them as men and they will return respect and consideration.

Bordering upon Zululand is the Transvaal Republic, a colony of Boers, the descendants of the original Dutch settlers at the Cape of Good Hope. The conflict between England and the Zulus, arose indirectly from a dispute between them and their neighbors, the Boers. Both claimed a certain piece of territory, and the matter was referred to England for arbitration. The land was awarded the Zulus by the commission, but the announcement was withheld by Sir Bartle Frere, Lord High Commissioner of England. With a peculiar kindness worthy of a better application, Frere thought that for the good of the African races, they should be annexed to the English colony at the Cape. He deemed it unwise to strengthen the power of the native chief, Cetawayo, by awarding him the contested territory. Cetawayo looked upon this delay with distrust. The British flag had already been raised in the Transvaal; he had seen England's questionable foreign policy exercised toward his neighbors, and he feared lest his own safety and that of his people should be sacrificed to England's ambition.

He began to prepare for defense. It is not reasonable to suppose that a small weak race like the Zulus, would deliberately wage war with a people on whose country the sun never sets; but what nation, however weak, would quietly watch the gathering of forces for its destruction.

When, after months of delay, the decision was announced, an ultimatum of the commissioner was added demanding the dispersion of the Zulu troops. England's commissioner might as well have said, "Disperse your men, or I will force submission." It was a plain declaration of war, though by a crooked policy.

The Zulus heeded not this unauthorized command. British troops were sent against them; they were soon forced to submit to British power.

What did England gain?

For a small helpless people of no commercial ability, she met the indignant disapproval of her best citizens, and the condemnation of the civilized world. The home government, of which Disraeli was the head, condemned Frere's policy; why then was not its authority used to prevent such injustice? Or is the Ministry governed by the Lord High Commissioners—the men of high sounding titles.

One name, the representative of an illustrious family, will ever recur when speaking of this war; the name of the young Prince Napoleon, and with it will come regret for his short, inglorious career. No honor can be attached to his death. He fought for no principles, no country. Actuated by a desire for fame, he took the side of a strong overbearing nation against the weak, and died the supporter of oppression at the hands of the people he had so wronged.

But while war had been going on in Zululand the indignation of the Boers in the Transvaal had been rising, and with its close, hoping to gain respectful attention from England, petitions setting forth their grievances had been forwarded to Disraeli's successor. Frere, who had found the Boers at war with the natives, fearing lest the Transvaal should be overrun by the blacks and Cape Colony involved, had taken that peculiarly English precaution of protection by annexation.

With as much justice might England have annexed the United States when the war with Sitting Bull was in progress.

In order to get their produce to the sea, the Boers have been obliged to send it through their former possessions, the English province of Natal. This gave the Natal merchants commercial advantage over the Boers. To secure an equal footing the Boers had obtained from Portugal the right to run a railroad from Pretorio, in the Transvaal, to Delagoa Bay, passing through a small Portuguese colony.

The Natal trade was endangered; the English resident merchants, fearing for their business interests, with contemptible selfishness caused the English Cabinet to believe that annexation was desired by the Boers. But England insisted upon annexation even when the true state of affairs was ascertained, although forty years before she had guaranteed to the Transvaal Republic perpetual sovereignty. The savage nations of Gaul respected treaties; civilized England thrice trampled on her because her companion in the league was weak. But the Boers were not to be bullied. Sturdy farmers, whose only literature was the family Bible; vigilant and brave custodian of their country's rights, in full faith of the justice of their cause, with an appeal for assistance to Almighty God, is a solemn covenant they pledged themselves to transmit, unblemished, to their children the heritage of freedom.

The war ended ingloriously for England, but defeated in the field, she secured through diplomacy a foothold in the Transvaal. The Queen is made Suzerain, leaving the republic nominally sovereign.

Can this England be the brave champion of right and justice, the "noble and puissant nation" which Milton saw, "rousing herself like a strong man after sleep and shaking her invincible locks!" Well may we say with Wordsworth:

"Milton, thou shouldst be living at this hour,
England hath need of thee; she is a fen
Of stagnant waters; altar, sword, and pen,
Fireside, the heroic wealth of hall and bower,
Have forfeited their ancient English dower
Of inward happiness. We are selfish men.
Oh! raise us up, return to us again;
And give us manners, virtue, freedom, power."

If England will be satisfied to enforce no colonial policy; if she can prevent "boycotting;" if she will secure her new colony from the scourge of a 'land tenure;' if she will cause taxation and representation to go hand in hand; if she will look to it that no Clive's or Hasting's ever set foot in the Transvaal armed with power to enrich themselves and to ruin the people; but will develope the commerce of the Boers, and open to them the great field of industry, she will find a race of earnest workers and may make some slight amends for her great wrong.

C. FRANC GODDARD.

FACILITIES OF THE U. S. FOR TRANSPORTATION.

We, the people of the United States, can neither complain of the past, nor murmur at the age we live in. During the last century, from a wilderness it has become an industrious nation. Its manufactures have been made the most successful in the world. In commerce its exports have been steadily increasing, and its imports have been as steadily decreasing. But why is this prosperity? One reason is simple and easily stated; we seize upon new inventions and adapt them readily to our use. At the beginning of the present century, when our country was yet young, all work had to be done by hand; but necessity has proved the mother of invention, and we now have some of the finest and best machinery in the world. Let us first glance at the different appliances for which steam is used. The railroad is one of those few things of human manufacture which inspires our admiration. There are those now living who can remember when the locomotive did not exist. Now see how the rails have intersected the country, and spanned our rivers. I may say that every one here can remember when the far West was reached only by those lumbering vehicles, the prairie schooners, but now it is in easy and rapid communication by rail. The first locomotive ran at the rate of about fifteen miles an hour; the engine of to-day has reached the speed of sixty miles, and some have even surpassed this record. In the year 1838 the total mileage of railroad was a little over fifteen hundred miles, and now it exceeds hundreds of thousands of miles. Rapid progress has also been made in a second mode of locomotion to which steam is applied, the steamboat, and its modern improvements. Every one knows that the first steamboat plied the Hudson in 1807, and was the invention of Robert Fulton; although Thomas Carlyle in his "Reminiscences" gives the honor to a Scotchman, out of prejudice for the Americans, and to honor his countryman. In going up the Hudson in one of the modern, magnificent, floating palaces, one cannot help thinking that only about seventy years have passed since that small craft of Fulton's plied the same river. And as he stands on the steamer's deck, he can scarcely realize the work of seventy years in the difference between the two boats. In that of to-day what massive machinery! It seems almost impossible for human skill to combine such giant power with such minute precision. But with all our improvements in the way of boats during the last ten or fifteen years, to our reproach England has become the leading nation in the ship business and on the sea. Our forts and harbors should be protected by armed vessels against unexpected invasions. Our standing army is small, but our navy so much smaller that it is almost imperceptible. The navy is rotten, utterly rotten. The political Secretaries who are placed at its head care not for the future protection of its harbors, but for the welfare and money interests of number one. Aside from our navy our merchant marine has also suffered. In the Atlantic monthly for February, Mr. Henry Hall has given statistics which will prove beyond doubt that our shipping interests are very low. In 1880 there were 1,276 British transoceanic vessels to our 884, of 447 steamers to our 46. In the late troubles about pork, England could have refused to take it on her vessels, and our Western farmers would have plenty of that article on their hands. If war occur between foreign powers we cannot export our goods, and our commerce must suffer. In case of famine we must have some way to transport our merchandise to the destitute. If the products of the country are left on our hands the markets will soon be glutted, articles will depreciate, and there will be an excess of unused material. We can never develope our full resources of trade until we get our own vessels. This is a question which does not concern those States only which border on or near the ocean, but all the States and every person, as a public question. Our country can change her position if she will, but as long as she folds her arms and subsides, she must be prepared to see others reap largely of the fruits of her toil. We have an unlimited extent of land, facilities for transportation by rail and river, the finest machinery, and with these resources at our command to maintain her position the U. S. needs government protection and encouragement on the high seas.

A movement is on foot to establish a National Bank at Bound Brook. Messrs. L. D. Cook, John D. Voorhees and others are heavy subscribers to the stock. The bank is to have $100,000 capital, and will be located in Ramsey's new building.

Election of Officers.

At a regular meeting of A. O. H. No. 4, held in Association Hall, this city, on Tuesday, June 14, the following officers were elected for the ensuing year: President—Wm. J. Tobin; Vice President—James Muldowney; Recording Secretary—Charles McCann; Financial Secretary—Thomas Welsh; Treasurer—Michael Nugent.

I. O. O. F.

Plainfield Lodge, No. 44, I. O. O. F., held a regular meeting on Monday evening last, and elected the following named officers to serve the ensuing six months:
Charles E. Austin—Noble Grand.
William Bos—Vice Grand.
James K. Arnold—Recording Secretary.
Treasurer—Thomas J. Young.

During the evening a delegation of over 80 visiting brethren of Lyceum Lodge, of New York City, were received and extended the hospitalities of No. 44.

Netherwood Chapel.

Services will be held in the Netherwood Chapel next Sabbath for the first time, at 11 o'clock in the morning and 7:45 in the evening. The services will be conducted by the Rev. E. F. Remington.

The New Yorkers all know this eminent divine, having devoted thirty years of his life preaching every Sunday on the docks to the sailors, long-shoremen and the poor, and has often been called to fill the pulpits of Mr. Beecher's church, Dr. Talmadge's, Dr. Tyng's and old Trinity.

The Glorious Fourth.

The citizens of Plainfield will celebrate the National Holiday next Monday in various ways, each to his own liking. Undoubtedly many will visit that historic spot, "Washington Rock," situated so near our city. It will be just the place for the day, offering the many attractions it does. The proprietor, Mr. S. O. Staats, announces that although there will be no public demonstration made at the "Rock" in honor of the day, there will be music, dancing, and other amusements. Dinner served from 1 to 4 p. m. Stages to and from this city to the "Rock" will be run during the day.

The Ball and Bat.

On Saturday last the Plainfield Base Ball Association again displayed its abilities by defeating a Bound Brook factory nine, at that city. The game was a very close and exciting one throughout, and resulted in a victory for Plainfield by a score of 12 to 11.

On Monday the boys of Gazelle Hose Co. No. 1 will play those of Warren No. 3 on the Fourth street grounds. The match will be for either a fire trumpet or a sum of money, and a very interesting game is to be expected. It will be commenced at nine o'clock in the morning—if all are on hand at that time.

Regarding Commencements.

"What this country now yearns for is a party devoted to putting down the commencement nuisance."

That is the opinion of the Trenton State Gazette, but it is not ours. The closing exercises of our schools, known as commencements, have more to do with stimulating the scholars and making them desirous of excelling in their various studies than any other influence we have cognizance of. Besides, the public have an opportunity of determining whether the teachers are qualified for their work by attending the commencement.—Hunterdon County Democrat.

The remarks of the last quoted paper prove it to be as sound on the matter referred to as it is in its political principles.

Personalia.

Judge Harper is daily increasing in popularity with the legal fraternity of the county.

Hon. Charles Campbell is still lying in a critical condition at his home in Woodbridge.

Mr. and Mrs. B. A. Hegeman (see Roome) are "at home" at the residence of the bride's father.

Mrs. Dr. Burlingham, has returned to her home in this city, after a couple of weeks visit to friends in New York State.

Mr. W. McD Coriell—we are told by the best of authorities—contemplates resigning from the Common Council at its next meeting.

Mr. E. L. Finch was the fortunate winner of the copies of Thorwaldsen's "Night" and "Morning," at the drawing for them at Reynolds' Pharmacy, Wednesday afternoon.

Mr. Chas. Potter, Jr., and two of his daughters, will sail on Saturday, by the "Furnessia" of the Anchor Line, for Glasgow and a subsequent three months tour through Europe.

Mrs. David Tilton, whose death after a lingering illness occurred on Wednesday morning, will be buried from the residence of Mr. T. Tilton, corner of Union and Grant avenues, to-day (Friday) at 10:30 o'clock a. m.

Mr. Romualdo Echeverria of this city, was awarded one of four gold medals given by the Mount St. Mary's College, Emmettsburg, Md., at its recent commencement. He stood first in the class of which he is the youngest member.

Miss Lulu Roberts of this city and Prof. Hasbrouck of Rutgers College were, on Wednesday evening last, united in marriage by the Rev. L. B. Van Dyck, of Buffalo New York. The occasion was a most auspicious one, of which a beautiful feature was the many floral designs furnished from the nursery of Mr. L. J. Denton.

Mr. Auguste Saltzman returned to his home in this city on Wednesday last from his European trip. He arrived in the Lower Bay below New York city in the steamer Labrador, about 1 o'clock of that day, and was met by three of his many friends, Messrs. R. M. Stover, John H. Cuthbert and Mr. George Wheelwright, who came up on the vessel with him to the ship's anchorage. The three latter gentlemen went to Stapleton, S. I., the night before, and were the guests of Miss Walk, at "Cliff Cottage," whose generous and unbounded hospitality they are loud in praise of. When the arrival of the vessel was announced the trio were conveyed on board in Dr. McCartney's boat, who was very kind and courteous. Mr. Saltzman looks and feels well after his trip. We are indebted to him for copies of late issues of French journals, which we take great delight (?) in perusing.

THAT most efficient police officer, Mr. Robert Randolph, arrested a resident of an adjacent town who was recklessly driving through our streets on Tuesday evening. The offender was consigned to the confines of the City Jail for the night and fined the next morning as a lesson.

J. W. Johnson's trotting mare "Sciola" won first money in a trot at Marshalltown, Iowa, last week. The time made was slow.

WESTFIELD WISPS.

Mr. Kilburn Thompkins occupying the farm formerly known as the "Mooney Farm," has just purchased some very fine Jersey cattle.

Our Masonic friends have not as yet decided upon having an excursion, its destination or date. They can rely upon ample attention when they do.

Mr. Foster E. Conant, a former citizen, now residing in Middletown, N. Y., was in town during the week.

The addition of a handsome mirror to the rear of the hotel bar is a decided improvement, illustrative of Bust's gorgeousness. Big word that.

A horse, the property of Mrs. Kate B. High, left standing at the depot on Thursday afternoon of last week, ran away. No damage done.

The son of Mr. Edward Townley contemplates inaugurating the business of supplying Westfield with fresh fish twice a week. A want long felt. Success attend him.

The bill board erected corner of Elm street and North avenue facing the depot, is the property of THE CONSTITUTIONALIST. Applications for its use can be made to our local agent.

Application for stock in Mr. F. Henry Chevanlers patent street railway, should be forwarded to the inventor at once, as very little remains unsold. Capital $50,000. Paid up capital 00,000.

Mr. E. T. Taylor, owner of the Lyceum property, was in town last week. We understand that his visit was with reference to a further use of the building by the Society.

The Athletic entertainment, both of the Westfield and Unknown Athletic clubs on July 4th, promises to prove one of great interest, the pleasures of which will be participated in by a large majority of our citizens.

The benefit performance of the "Westfield Minstrel Troupe," tendered to Mr. A. Edgar Wilcox, took place last night and proved a success in all respects, despite the unaccountable opposition of several citizens.

Not to be outdone by the elders, the Young America Athletic club have posted notices of their intention to give Athletic contests on the coming 4th. These games will take place upon South avenue. Among other attractions we notice greased pole climbing.

The special detective employed by the Westfield Fish and Game Protective Society, passed Sunday in this vicinity, and his report to the next meeting of this Society may prove one of more than pleasurable interest to some of our residents. The Society deserves great credit for their endeavors to properly enforce the game laws.

The advertised sale of Moffett's Livery Stable on Thursday of last week, brought out a large crowd, but the prices bid proved so ridiculously low, that Mr. Moffett was obliged to retain the larger portion of the stock. This fact is a fortunate one for our citizens, as it insures in the future good service in this line. We trust that those who expressed so much regret at the probable withdrawal of this service, will rally to its support.

The called meeting of the Health Board, on Tuesday evening last, with reference to the England nuisance hitherto noted, resolved itself into a meeting of the Town Committee, the presence of Town Clerk Whitaker being all that was necessary to make the change. Township Counsel, Mr. R. V. Lindabury, was present to post the Town Committee upon the intricacies of law governing their action, while those urging an abatement of the nuisance were ably represented by ex-Town Counsel W. G. Peckham. As both parties agreed to agree under the advice of Mr. Lindabury, everything proved satisfactory to all concerned.

The quarterly review of the Baptist Sunday School occurred last Sunday and proved very pleasant, the pupils evincing almost perfect knowledge of the lessons taught, reflecting great credit upon Superintendent A. F. Grant and his Assistants. A great surprise was given to the members of the school in the presentation to them by Mr. Chas. F. Conant of an elegant silk banner trimmed with gold fringe. Upon one side was a truly beautiful picture representing the Baptism of Christ, and upon the reverse the name of the school and date of its organization (1866); the lettering surrounded with embroidered lilies. This embroidery was the contribution of Mrs. Conant, and naturally enhanced its value—estimated to be at least $200. After the presentation appropriate remarks were made by the Superintendent and Pastor. The school is in a very flourishing condition, its present membership being about 125. The following are the names of the officers: Anson F. Grant, Supt.; J. W. Beebe, Asst. Supt.; E. S. Leveridge, Sec.; A. F. Grant, Jr., Asst. Sec.; G. A. Trimmer, Librarian; W. W. Gilby, Asst. Librarian; A. J. Miller, Treasurer.

The commencement exercises of the Westfield Seminary took place at Lyceum Hall on Thursday evening of last week, and the pleasures of the occasion were enjoyed by a large portion of our inhabitants, who filled the hall fairly to overflowing. The platform was decorated with ferns and flowering plants tastefully arranged, while at the rear of the stage, the class motto PERSEVERANTIA OMNIA VINCIT, worked in ferns and evergreens upon a white background was very effective. The exercises were of the usual nature, but throughout gave evidence of the careful education and training of the participants. Particular credit should be accorded this institution for the evidences of proper instruction, both in pronounciation and inflection in English, French, German and Latin. The Calisthenic exercises gave proof that the physical as well as mental education of the pupils was excellent, this portion of the programme winning the repeated plaudits of the audience. The essays of the graduates, Misses Eleanor S. Coaney and Zadie M. Van Buskirk, the former upon "Novels and Novel Reading," the latter upon "Heroism of Woman," were both very interesting, exhibiting not only a knowledge of the subject presented, but the ability to present it intelligently. The diplomas were presented to the fair graduates in behalf of the principal by the Rev. A. P. Foster, Jersey City, who made one of the most appropriate and pleasing addresses for an occasion of this nature, that it was ever our pleasure to listen to. The floral offerings to the fair graduates and scholars were not only numerous but exceedingly beautiful. The exercises closed by the school assisted by former pupils singing "Auld Lang Syne." Westfield has reason to be proud of her Seminary.

A LITTLE OF EVERYTHING.

WHAT THEY LEAD TO.

Kidney troubles and liver troubles, unless checked in time by Dr. David Kennedy's "Favorite Remedy," will end in constipation, piles, rheumatism and gravel. The latter are ailments of very serious character. "Favorite Remedy" acts upon the disordered kidneys and liver with quickness and certainty. It is Nature's own device for this purpose. Ask for it when you are next in the store, or write to the Doctor at Rondout, N. Y. jy1wt

HAY FEVER.

Messrs. Ely Bros., Druggists, Owego, N. Messrs. White & Burdick, Druggists, Ithaca, N. Y.—I recommend to those suffering (as I have been) with Hay Fever, Ely's Cream Balm; I have tried nearly all the remedies I could find, and give this a decided preference over them all. It has given me immediate relief. C. T. STEPHENS, Hardware Merchant, Ithaca, N. Y. Sept. 4, 1880. Price 50 cents.

Carter's Little Liver Pills will positively cure sick headache and prevent its return. This is not talk, but truth. One pill a dose. To be had of all druggists. See advertisement. 1y1w

"Oh, where are you going, my pretty maid?"
"To do some shopping," she sweetly said,
"And where?" I asked, in glad surprise.
"Oh, anywhere, where they advertise."

THE COST OF IT.

If the total cost of sickness simply in its business aspects were reckoned up, it would be found to be great enough in five years to pay the national debt. The merchant has a headache from a fit of indigestion, and misses a good bargain. The lawyer does the same with a case. To say nothing about doctors' fees, etc., it doesn't pay to be even a little sick. Dr. David Kennedy's "Favorite Remedy" is a friend to the business man, for it clears his brain. One dollar a bottle. Rondout, N. Y. 1y1w

HOW TO GET WELL.

Thousands of persons are constantly troubled with a combination of diseases. Diseased kidneys and costive bowels are their tormentors. They should know that Kidney-Wort acts on these organs at the same time, causing them to throw off the poisons that have clogged them, and so renewing the whole man. Hundreds testify to this.—Pittsburgh Post.

RESCUED FROM DEATH.

The following statement of William J. Coughlin, of Somerville, Mass., is so remarkable that we beg to ask for it the attention of our readers. He says: "In the fall of 1876 I was taken with a violent BLEEDING OF THE LUNGS followed by a severe cough. I soon began to lose my appetite and flesh. I was so weak at one time that I could not leave my bed. In the summer of 1877 I was admitted to the City Hospital. While there the doctors said I had a hole in my left lung as big as a half dollar. I expended over a hundred dollars in doctors and medicines. I was so far gone, at one time a report went around that I was dead. I gave up hope, but a friend told me of DR. WM. HALL'S BALSAM FOR THE LUNGS. I laughed at my friends, thinking that my case was incurable, but I got a bottle to satisfy them, when to my surprise and gratification, I commenced to feel better. My hope, once dead, began to revive, and to-day I feel in better spirits than I have the past three years.

"I write this hoping you will publish it, so that every one afflicted with Diseased Lungs will be induced to take DR. WM. HALL'S BALSAM FOR THE LUNGS, and be convinced that CONSUMPTION CAN BE CURED. I have taken two bottles and can positively say that it has done more good than all the other medicines I have taken since my sickness. My cough has almost entirely disappeared and I shall soon be able to go to work." Sold by druggists.

KIDNEY DISEASES.

Kidney diseases afflict the greater part of the human race, and they are constantly on the increase, but where the virtues of Kidney-Wort have become known, they are held in check and speedily cured. Let those who have had to constantly dose spirits of nitre and such stuff, give this great remedy a trial and be cured. In the dry form it is most economical, in the liquid the most convenient.—Phila. Press.

CROQUETERS ON THE CRISIS.

HOW THE POLITICAL SENSATION STRUCK THE FEMININE PORTION OF THE COMMUNITY.

The night before last the Utica Croquet Club—composed entirely of young ladies—held its second meeting for the season of 1881. Two new members were admitted and proposals for membership were made. The committee on resolutions made their expected report. The resolutions were written on scented paper and penned with violet ink. After the business of the evening had been finished, the young lady sitting on the ottoman suddenly exclaimed:

"Oh, my! Girls, did you hear about Conkling?"

"No. What is it?" said the four misses on the settee in one breath.

"Why, he's resigned!"

"Resigned to what? Has he been dangerously sick?" said the secretary.

"No, no. Can't you understand? He has given up his Senatorship."

"Goodness gracious. Ain't that too bad?"

"How much did he get for it?" queried the girl with the album in her lap.

"Why, you silly thing; you ought to read the newspapers. Senator Conkling got dissatisfied with something at Washington and resigned his office into the hands of Governor Cornell. There was a misunderstanding between him and the President about some man named Rob—Robert—Roberts—Let me see; Robinson—no, that ain't it. Oh, yes—Robertson. Dear sus! They say the whole country is in a crisis."

"I read about that," said the President of the club, knowingly. "Senator Conkling and this Robertson had some kind of a fuss while they were trying a law suit. Come to think, Mr. Conkling wanted to give him some instructions and Roberts wouldn't have it. Then the President appointed Robertson to collect money in some ward in New York city—"

"That wasn't it," interrupted the first speaker. "The President told Mr. Robertson to stand at some lock—a dead-lock, they call it—and see that the canal-boat captains paid their tolls. The man who was put out of a job by Mr. Robertson getting the situation, used to go to school with Mr. Conkling."

"What I want to know," said a young lady, "is how could the President order these men around so? Didn't I read in a paper the other day that Mr. Conkling was the boss?"

"My sakes! that's funny," ejaculated the Secretary; "I heard my brother say it was a man named Blaine, who came here from Canady, and wanted to run the whole country, who caused the disturbance. The President made this Blaine a present of a Cabinet organ and then he never stopped begging until he got a whole set of furniture, too. That made the other men who didn't get anything jealous."

"What were the guns firing for today?" asked the girls on the settee.

"You see, the Senate helped Robertson to get this job," answered the first speaker, "and the Half-Breeds were so glad they borrowed some cannons."

"Who are the Half-Breeds? Indians?"

"I am not sure, but I don't think they are. They must have come here when the canal opened."

"Girls," exclaimed the President of the meeting, "do you know I think that the firing was a real battle? I read in the paper last week about the 'War on the President.' Isn't it awful?"

"And I saw 'How the bomb struck!'"

"Oh, those horrid Half-Breeds!" ejaculated five voices at once.

"Yes," continued the President, "and I believe they are going to be commanded by that Gen. Mahone, who came to Washington with a red shirt on and tried to scare everybody."

"I'm going home," faintly said the Secretary.

"Let us all go," said the girls on the settee.

"Oh, I hope we won't meet any Half-Breeds!"—Utica Observer.

HOW LONG MAN MAY LIVE.

It was Professor Hufeland's opinion that the limit of possible human life might be set at 200 years. This on the general principle that the life of a creature is eight times the period of its growth.

That which is quickly formed quickly perishes, and the earlier complete development is reached the sooner bodily decay ensues. More women reach old age than men, but more men attain remarkable longevity than women.

Some animals grow to be very old.—Horned animals live longer lives than those without horns; fierce longer than timid, and amphibious longer than those which exist in the air. The voracious pike lives, it is said, to an age of 150 years; the turtle is good for a hundred years or more; and among birds the golden eagle is known to have lived nearly 200 years, while the sly and sombre crow reaches the quite venerable age of a century.

Passing up the scale of life to man, and skipping the patriarchs, we find many recorded instances of longevity among the classic Greeks and Romans. Pliny notes that in the reign of the Emperor Vespasian, in the year 76, there were 124 men living in the limited area between the Appenines and the Po of 100 years and upwards, three of whom were 140 and four over 135. Cicero's wife lived to the age of 103, and the Roman actress Lucceia played in public as late as her 112th year.

Coming down to more recent times the most notable authentic instance of great age is that of Henry Jenkins, of Yorkshire, England, who died in 1670, 169 years old. He was a fisherman and at the age of 100 easily swam across rapid rivers.

Another historic case is that of Thomas Parr, of Shropshire, a day laborer, who lived to the age of 152 years. When over 120 he married his second wife, and till 130 he could swing the scythe and weild the flail with the best of his fellow laborers. In his 152d year Parr went up to London to exhibit himself to the king. It proved an unlucky visit, for violating the abstemious habit of a century and a half, the old man feasted so freely on the royal victuals that he soon died merely of a plethora. On examination his internal organs proved to be in excellent condition, and there was no reason why he should not have lived much longer save for this unfortunate taste of royal hospitality.

Professor Hufeland's roll of centenarians includes many more remarkable cases, among them that of Mittlestedt, a Prussian soldier, who served 67 years under both Fredericks, fighting many battles and enduring much hard campaigning, and who after all this married successively three wives, the last when he was 110, only two years before his decease.

George Chainey says heaven is derived from the words "heaved up," and hell from "held down." From this we conclude that Jonah is in the first mentioned.

WHO HE WAS.

One of the book-keepers of a Detroit lumber firm was recently sent to the North woods to transact some business for his employers. He is a man of good mind and strong limb and has hung about gymnasiums long enough to work up his muscle and understood how to strike from the shoulder. He reached a camp belonging to another firm just at noon, one day, and all but one of the loggers gave him a hearty welcome. This one seemed out of sorts and bent on mischief. After throwing out repeated slurs and insults he boldly said:

"Stranger, I've been aching for a whole week past to put some one in my vest pocket."

This was turned off in a pleasant manner, but the logger persisted:

"I've got a great hankering to play pitch and toss with you, and if you don't run before I finish my dinner I'm going to heave you over the shanty a few times."

The Detroiter didn't run worth a cent. When he saw that a fuss was inevitable he removed his watch and pin, shed his overcoat and was in first-rate trim when the logger got ready to heave away. As the bully came forward he was neatly knocked down. He got up again with a grin and went down again. The third time he got up he sat down on a log to collect his ideas, and when they had returned to him he carefully approached the Detroiter and said:

"Mebbe you are a Presidin' Elder?"

"No."

"Regular preacher?"

"No."

"Track distributor?"

"No; I am a book-keeper in the employ of Lath & Shingle, of Detroit."

"Put it thar!" said the man, as he held out his hand. "I'm all bluff and no fight, but I took you for some sort of a preacher, and I thought I might wallop you and be solid with the boys. Say, will you do me a favor?"

"Yes."

"All right. I'm going to tell the boys that you are Tom Sayers, and don't you deny it! Carrying two black eyes around this camp for the next fortnight will be grief enough for me to stagger under, let alone any one knowing that I got 'em from a man wearing a biled shirt and a clean collar."

NATURE'S BAROMETERS.

Every one has noticed the ingenious and delicate workmanship of the spider; they have noticed too the way in which he spins his thread; but every one may not have remarked the interesting fact, that whenever we are to have wind or rain the spider shortens very much the last threads to which his web is suspended, and he leaves it in that condition as long as the weather continues variable. If he lengthens the threads fair weather may be predicted, and the continuation of fair weather may be inferred from the length of the thread. If the spider remains inert it is a sign of rain; if, however, he commences to work during the rain, you may be certain that the rain will not last long, and that it will be followed by steady, fair weather. The spider changes his web every twenty-four hours; if the change is made in the evening, a little before sunset, the night will be fair and clear.

The swallow, this beautiful bird, the harbinger of spring, is also an unfailing barometer. When the swallow flies low, on a level with the earth, and gives a light and plaintive cry, it is a sign of approaching rain. If he rises to a great height in the air flying either to right or to the left, steady, fair weather may be expected. When a storm is coming, the swallow also rises to a great height in the clouds, then he moves slowly, majestically; he floats, but does not fly.

In the spring, when a single magpie leaves its nest, it will rain; if the father and mother leave at the same time, it is a sign of fair weather.

The peacock, at the approach of rain, emits frequent cries.

The woodpecker coos.

The parrot chatters.

The guinea fowl goes to roost.

The goose shows the greatest unrest. It flaps its wings and cries, throws itself into the water, comes and goes, and makes short flights.

The singing of the cricket indicates fair weather.

PEARLS.

To him that lives well every form of life is good.

The torment of envy is like a grain of sand in the eye.

Craftness is a quality in the mind and a vice in the character.

Always there is life while life lasts, which rightly divined, implies a divine satisfaction.

Seeing much, and suffering much, and studying much, are the three pillars of learning.

As many as are the difficulties which virtue has to encounter in this world, her force is yet superior.

It is a great art to keep yourself contented and happy, and it requires a great heart to make others so.

As an archer makes straight his arrow, so a wise man makes straight his thought, which is difficult to turn.

Some one tells us that if you said no yesterday and have repented, you can say yes to-day and heal the wound.

Some people make a great fuss about the smallest things and then excuse themselves on the ground that the less a man makes a fuss about the better.

Man's value is in proportion to what he has courageously suffered, as the value of the steel blade is in proportion to the tempering it has undergone.

Prosperity is a more refined and sincere test of character than adversity, as one hour of summer sunshine produces greater corruption than the longest winter day.

All useless misery is certainly folly, and he that feels evils before they come may be deservedly censured, yet surely to dread the future is more reasonable than to lament the past.

Science is exceedingly boastful, and is not satisfied until it has pulled all the old plants up by the roots, forgetting to sow any new seeds. This kind of culture is haughty culture.

The Mount Holly Mirror says that Charles Newbold, who resided near the Little Mount Meeting House in Burlington county, was the first person who substituted the iron plow for the wooden one then in use. The beam and handles were about the same as the old one, but for the mould-board, landslide and shear he used iron castings. His first casting, being in one piece, was found to make the plow too heavy for ordinary use, and it was about to be abandoned, when David Peacock, who lived near Vincentown, re-modeled the castings, separated them and made them much lighter. He paid Charles Newbold one thousand dollars for the privilege of using it, and the "Peacock" plow soon became popular, and for many years no other was used, and at the present time it is claimed by many farmers as the best for general purposes.

SAD ACCIDENT.

MR. OSCAR CRAIG Blown Up by a Premature Blast in the Rosendale Cement Quarry—Destruction of an Eye—its Subsequent Removal by Surgical Operation.

Mr. Oscar Craig was foreman in a cement quarry at Rosendale, Ulster Co., N. Y. By an explosion one day in the quarry he lost an eye—lost it totally. Under an impression that the matter was less serious the local physician told Mr. Craig that his eye was not lost wholly, but could be saved by treatment. The experiment was tried and failed. Worse remained behind, for he was in danger of losing the other also, through sympathetic inflammation. In this strait he consulted Dr. David Kennedy, of Rondout, N. Y., who told him the injured eye must be taken out to save the other. To this Mr. Craig demurred, and went back home in doubt. His local physician said: "Go to New York." To New York the patient went, and one of the most eminent oculists in the country, having looked at the case, said: "You have lost one eye entirely; go back and do what you can to save the other." Briefly, Dr. Kennedy removed the ruined eye, and treated Mr. Craig with "Kennedy's Favorite Remedy" to build up his system, and the result was successful.

Dr. Kennedy's great success as a Surgeon is due to the use of "Favorite Remedy" in the after treatment.

Are you troubled with Dyspepsia, Liver Complaint, Constipation, or derangement of the Kidneys and Bladder, then use Dr. Kennedy's "Favorite Remedy." It will not disappoint you. "Dr. Kennedy's Favorite Remedy" for sale by all druggists. 1jw4

THE NEW BUSINESS

OF THE

EQUITABLE

Life Assurance Society of the U. S.

FOR THE YEAR 1880, WAS OVER

Thirty-Five Millions of Dollars,

The Largest Business Done by any Company in the World.

REASONS FOR THIS RESULT.

The Equitable is the strongest Company in the United States.

Its policies are, by their own express terms, made incontestable after three years. (For precise terms see form of policy contract.)

ALL such incontestable policies are paid immediately after receipt of satisfactory proof of the death of the insured, and without even the customary delay of sixty or ninety days.

Each ordinary policy provides for a definite surrender-value in paid-up assurance, in case the policy is forfeited after three years from its date and is surrendered within a reasonable time thereafter.

BY THE TONTINE SAVINGS FUND plan of assurance, returns to policy-holders, after the expiration of what is called the Tontine period, are greater than are obtainable on any other system. Actual settlements of Tontine policies have been made in which policy-holders have withdrawn amounts varying from eighty to one hundred and twenty per cent. of premiums paid, besides enjoying a life insurance indemnity during the period. No other company can show such results.

THE TONTINE plan is the only one extant by which a person may withdraw from his insurance contract at specified periods, receiving the entire reserve and surplus accumulations in cash.

ALL the ordinary forms of insurance with annual dividends of profits, both cash and reversionary, are issued by this Society.

ASSETS, - - $41,108,602.
SURPLUS, - - $9,228,294.

Its business for the last ten years (represented by the new policies issued) has been larger than that of any other Company.

POETRY.

PEOPLE WILL TALK.

You may go through the world, but 'twill be very slow,
If you listen to all that is said as you go;
You'll be worried and fretted and kept in a stew,
For meddlesome tongues must have something to do,
And people will talk.

If quiet and modest, you'll have it presumed
That your humble position is only assumed—
You're a wolf in sheep's clothing, or else you're a fool;
But don't get excited—keep perfectly cool,
For people will talk.

And then if you show the least boldness of heart,
Or a slight inclination to take your own part,
They will call you an upstart, conceited and vain,
But keep straight ahead—don't stop to explain,
For people will talk.

If threadbare your dress and old-fashioned your hat,
Some one will surely take notice of that,
And hint very strong that you can't pay your way;
But don't get excited, whatever they say,
For people will talk.

If your dress is in fashion, don't think to escape,
For they criticise them in a different shape;
You're ahead of your means, or your tailor's unpaid,
But mind your own business—there's naught to be made,
For people will talk.

Now, the best way to do is to do as you please;
For your mind, if you have one, will then be at ease.
Of course you will meet with all sorts of abuse;
But don't think to stop them—it isn't any use,
For people will talk.

TOM.

Oh! but it was cold; freezing, biting, bitter cold and dark, too; for the feeble gaslights, leaping and flaming as the gale whistled by, hardly brightened the gloom a dozen paces around them. The wind tore through the streets as if it had gone mad; whirling before it dust and snow, and every movable thing it could lay its clutching hand upon. A poor old battered kite, that, some time in the Autumn, had lodged far up in the tallest tree in the neighborhood, and had there rested peacefully ever since, believing its labors at an end, was dragged from its nest, and driven unpityingly before the blast. Some feeble efforts it had made to dodge into areas; but not a bit of it! Down would swoop the wind, and off it would go again.

At last, driven around one of the long rows of barrels, that stood, like wretched sentinels, along the edge of the sidewalk, it flew into the arms of a small boy, who, seated on the curbstone, crouched down in the barrel's somewhat questionable shelter. Such a very small boy! He looked like nothing in the world but a little heap of rags; and the rags were very thin, and the small boy was very cold. His nose, his ears, hands and poor bare feet were blue. He was almost too cold to notice the unfortunate kite, which, as its enemy, the wind, approached with a roar, seemed to cower close to him, as if begging protection. Round both sides of the barrels at once came the wind, shook hands right through poor little Tom, and, howling with delight, rushed off with the miserable victim.

"Tom"—that was all the name he had. Who he was, or where he came from, no one knew, except perhaps the wretched old woman with whom he lived; which meant that she let him sleep upon a pile of rags upon the floor of her miserable room, and sometimes gave him a crust, and oftener a blow. When she was drunk—and that was a greater part of the time—Tom took to the streets; and by night she was very drunk. The boy was, perhaps, some six years old; but as he cowered down on the cold flagstones, with his worn, pinched face and drooping head, he might have been a hundred.

A carriage came rattling through the icy streets, and stopped close by him. The door was pushed open, and two children half tumbled out, and leaving the door swing, rushed up the steps. Tom watched them stupidly, hearing the quick, sharp ring of the bell, caught a glimpse of something that looked very bright and warm, and then it was dark again; but he still stood there. The coachman sat upon the box like a furry monument. One of the horses struck the stones sharply with his ironed hoof, and cast an inquiring glance around, but the monument sat unmoved.

Tom's heavy eyes looked through the open door into the carriage. Dark as it was, he could see that it was lined with something thick and warm. He raised his head and glanced around him. If he were inside there the wind could not touch him. Oh, if he could only get away from it one minute! He would slide out again the moment the house door opened. Unbending his stiff little body, he crept nearer, hesitated a moment, and, as the wind came round the corner with a roar, slipped swiftly and noiselessly into the carriage. In the further corner of the seat he curled himself into a little round heap, and lay, with beating heart, listening to the wind as it swept by.

It was very quiet in his nest, and the soft velvet was much warmer than the cold flagstones, and he was very tired and very cold, and in half a minute he was fast asleep. He did not know when at last the house door opened and a lady, gathering her cloak close around her, came down the steps—did not know even when the suddenly animated monument descended from its pedestal and stood solemnly by the open door until the lady had stepped inside. But when it shut with a slam, and the coachman, returning to his post, drove rapidly away, the boy's eyes opened and fixed their frightened gaze upon the lady's face. Preoccupied with her own thoughts, she had not noticed the queer bundle in the dark corner. But now, her attention attracted by some slight movement on his part, she turned her eyes slowly toward him, and then with a suppressed cry of surprise and alarm, laid her hand upon the door. Tom, rapidly unwinding himself, and cowering down in the bottom of the carriage, said, with a frightened sob:

"I didn't mean no harm. I was awful cold. Say, just open the door, missus, and I'll jump out. You needn't stop the kerridge."

The lady, with her hand still on the door, demanded:

"How did you get here?"

"The door was open, and I clum," he answered. "It was awful cold."

"Come nearer," she said. "Let me see your face."

Tom drew his ragged sleeve across his eyes, and looked up at her over his shoulder. They had turned into a brilliantly lighted street, and she could see that the tangled yellow hair was soft and fine, and that the big, frightened eyes that raised themselves to hers were not pickpocket's eyes. With a sudden impulse she laid her gloved hand lightly on the yellow hair. "Where do you live?" she asked.

Something in the voice and touch gave him courage. "With Mammy Sal," he said, straightening up. "Me and some other fellows. Sometimes we begs, sometimes we take the barrels. When we get a haul it ain't so bad, but when we don't we catch it. She's drunk to-night, and she drove us out."

She pushed the heavy hair back from his forehead. "Is Mammy Sal your mother?" she asked.

"No!" cried the boy, almost fiercely; and then he added, sullenly: "I ain't got none."

Slowly the gloved hand passed back and forth over the yellow hair. The lady's eyes were looking far away; the boy's face was like, so strangely like, another face.

"Are you hungry?" she asked, suddenly.

The wide-open gray eyes would have answered her without the quick and the low "Yes'm."

The carriage stopped, and the monument again accomplished a descent, opened the door, and stood staring in blank amazement.

"I am not going in, John," said his mistress. "Drive home again." And she added, smiling, "This little boy crept in out of the cold while the carriage was waiting. I am going to take him home. Drive back as quickly as possible."

As the bewildered coachman shut the door and returned to his perch, the boy made a spring froward.

"Lemme out!" he cried. "I don't want to go home. Lemme out!"

"Not your home," said the lady, gently; "to my home."

Tom stared at her in wonder, and too much overcome by the announcement to resist, let her lift him up on the seat beside her.

"My home," she repeated, "where you can get very warm, and have a good dinner, and a long, long sleep on a soft bed. Will you like that?"

Tom drew a long, slow breath, but did not answer. It was too wonderful! He—one of Mammy Sal's boys—to go to the lady's house where the children lived whom he had seen go in that evening! He looked up suddenly. "Was them children you'n?" he asked. With a sudden movement she drew him very close to her and then softly answered:

"No, not mine; I had a little boy once, like you, and he died."

When the carriage stopped again Tom was fast asleep; so fast asleep that the still bewildered coachman carried him into the house and laid him on a bed without waking him. The next morning, when the boy's eyes opened, he lay looking about him, hardly daring to speak or move. I don't believe he had ever heard anything about the fairies, or he would certainly have thought himself in fairyland. Best of all, the lady of the night before was standing by the bed smiling at him, and smiling back, he held out his arms to her.

I wish you could have seen him a little later, when arrayed in jacket and trousers that made him think with disdain of certain articles of the same description he had but yesterday gazed at lovingly as they dangled before old Isaac's clothing store, he sat before a little table by the sunny window, taking a short, a very short, preliminary view of a gigantic beefsteak, still indignantly sputtering to itself, a mountain of smoking potatoes, an imposing array of snowy rolls and golden butter and a pitcher of creamy milk. And I wish you could have seen the same table still later; for the table was about all that was left.

This was the first time that I ever saw Tom. Since then I have seen him very often. And now I will tell you, only I am afraid you will hardly believe me, about the last time, and that was not very long ago.

I was riding along one of the prettiest country roads you ever saw, and when I came to a certain gate, my horse, without a sign from me turned. As we drew near the house I caught sight of two figures standing among the flowers. One was a handsome old lady with white hair; the other a young man. She was armed with an immense pair of shears, and he held in his hand his hat, filled to the brim with flowers. The sunlight, creeping through the trees, fell full on his close cropped hair and yellow beard. As I drew in my horse and sat watching them, it seemed to me like a fairy story. But it wasn't; for the tall, handsome man looking down with such protecting tenderness upon the white-haired old lady was really Tom—poor, little, thin, cold hungry Tom.

WHY GUFFEY REFORMED.

"I say, Judge," said old Major Diffinderfer to his particular crony, Judge Guffey, the other day, "why haven't we seen you down-town o' nights lately?"

"Well—ahem—been rather busy," replied the Judge with some embarrassment.

"Busy. Why I've seen you reading at your window every evening as I came down town after dinner."

"Little sickness in the family," murmured the Judge, uneasily.

"Sickness? Why you just said your people were all well."

"Well, the fact is, gentlemen," said the Judge after a pause devoted to significant winks and nudges by the select coteries of poker players, of which he was a prominent member. "I'll tell you how the case stands. Like the rest of you old reprobates, I can stand any ordinary domestic row, but Mrs. Guffey sprang something on me the other night—a peculiarly new and deadly sort of a reformation dodge that I haven't got over the effects of yet, and there is no knowing when I shall."

"You don't say so!" exclaimed the Owl Club in chorus, and moved up closer.

"Yes, gentlemen. You all know that I'm pretty tough-hided regarding matrimonial remonstrances, and I can find excuses for staying out late seven nights a week with any married man among you. For instance, a few nights ago I topped off one of Mrs. G's curtain lectures with the remark that it was always the wife's fault if the husband was not domestically inclined. That it was the absence of cheerful amusements at home that led men to seek for them outside."

"Devilish good theory that," said one old sinner, making a note on his shirt cuff.

"So I thought," continued the Judge, "especially as it made Mrs. G. so mad she didn't speak for three days afterward. But on the fourth day what do you suppose happened? Imagine my astonishment when I put on my hat after dinner to come down here to the Budweiser saloon to meet you fellows, Mrs. Guffey said, 'Wait a minute, Judge, please. Step down into the basement.'"

"Water pipes had sprung aleak, I suppose?" said Diffinderfer.

"I thought it was something of the kind myself," replied the Judge, "but I hope I may never see the back of my neck if I didn't find the sitting-room carpet taken up, the floor sprinkled with sand, and a sort of temporary bar erected in the corner. There was a dozen small tables in the room, around which a lot of loafers that Mrs. G. had contracted for at the corner grocery, were sitting playing cards, spitting in the sawdust boxes and drinking beer. The liquor was served out by my biggest boy, who was running the bar in his shirt sleeves, and a big paste diamond my wife had gotten down at the dollar store in his breast. There were a number of 'off' cheap chromos around the walls, and a lunch counter, while in the corner a couple of red-nosed bummers were quarreling over the election. I never felt so cut up and disgusted in my life, and for a minute or two I almost believed I was down here with you fellows."

"Indeed!" exclaimed the listeners, grimly.

"Yes," continued the Judge, earnestly. "What in the eternal blazes does all this mean, ma'am," said I.

"W. Archibald," says she, "you were talking about home congenial and amusing, and all that, and so I tried to fix up something that would hit your taste to a T. After this, you see, you can enjoy your regular recreation right here instead of tiring yourself with a long walk home after the cars have stopped running every night. How would you like to take a hand at Pedro, with that party in the corner? His breath is pretty strong, but I have especially engaged him as one of the most proficient card sharps in the town. I am sure you would enjoy letting him win that fifty dollars you can't afford to give Amelia for a new Winter suit, ever so much. Hi, there, barkeeper! set us a couple of schooners of Milwaukee, quick."

"And what did you say," inquired his petrified auditors.

"Say? Why I didn't say a word. I just went out to the woodpile, selected a club, came back, and cleaned the whole mob right out. I staved in the beer barrel, kicked over the bar and swore like an Indiana politician. But—ahem—that is—er—well, you see, gentlemen, somehow I couldn't drum up cheek enough to go out that night, nor the next, either, and—and the fact is, I've about concluded to put in a good deal of time home this Summer, so you will have to get along somehow without me."

And there was a solemn and impressive silence as the Judge relit his segar and drifted down the street.

A LIBERAL TRANSLATION.

A young lady, moving in the most excellent society circles of Galveston, after much toil and practice at the piano, learned to play with considerable dexterity a piece entitled "Picnic Polka." It is something after the style of the celebrated "Battle of Prague," in which the listener can readily distinguish the roar of artillery, the rattle of musketry, the shouts of the soldiers, and the groans of the dying. In the "Picnic Polka" the noise of the wind among the trees and the joyous carols of the birds are reproduced, the finale being a thunder shower that disturbs the sylvan revelers. It happens that a country cousin is in town just now, and the young lady thought she would play the piece to him and hear his comment. He is a plain, simple minded youth, and, although not very bright, is very appreciative. She told him what the piece was, and then proceeded to give him the "Picnic Polka." The first notes are rather slow and hesitatingly, the idea sought to be conveyed being the solemn solitude of the forest, through which the gentle zephyr (not heifer) sighs. After she got through the preface she asked him if he did not almost imagine himself in a lodge in some vast wilderness. He replied that he thought all the slowness meant the delay in getting off. Said he:

"There is always some darned feller who oversleeps himself and keeps everybody else waiting."

She did not care to discuss the point with the ignorant fellow, so, to conceal her emotions, she once more let her go on the piano. The woods were filled with music. The mocking-bird whistled as if his throat would split, the cuckoo filled the sylvan bowers with his repeated cry, while ever and anon the mournful cooing of the dove interrupted the main song of the lark.

"There, now, I guess you know what that sounds like," she said, as she paused.

"You mean that tootle, tootle, chug, chug, chug?" You just bet I understand that. Many is the time at a picnic I've heard it from the mouth of a demijohn or the bung-hole of a beer-barrel."

Her first impulse was to hurl the piano stool at him, but it passed off, and once more she went at the piano as if it was the young man's head, and was insured for double its value. The thunder growled, the lightning flashed (from her eyes) and the first heavy drops are heard upon the leaves. She banged and mashed the keys at a fearful rate; peal after peal of deafening thunder perturbed the atmosphere and re-echoed in still louder reverberations until it wound up in one appalling clap as a grand finale. Then, turning to the awe-struck youth, she said:

"I suppose you have heard something like that before?"

"Yes; that's what the fellow with linen pants said when he sat down on the custard pie."

The audience found himself alone, but the audience picked up his hat and sauntered out into the street, densely unconscious that he had said anything out of the way.

VENNOR'S JULY WEATHER.

The month of July will enter cool and wet and give a great deal of rain generally over a large portion of the United States and Canada, while in Great Britain the weather will in all probability be likewise stormy and wet. The storms of wind, thunder and lightning are likely to prove severe and frequent. The heaviest rains for New York and vicinity I would locate shortly after the 20th, probably the 21st or 22d. Between the 12th and 20th days an excessive hot term is probable throughout both Canada and the United States, with additional severe storms in western sections.

Within a few days of the close of July, likely in the neighborhood of the 27th and 28th days, a cool to cold wave may occur, carrying frost into Canada and cool weather generally with storms of wind, hail and rain over the United States. Where storms have been severely felt in Western and Southwestern States during June there again will the severest storms of July be experienced; notwithstanding, however, these frequent and severe storms during July, frequent alternations of fine, hot weather will probably counteract to a great extent the damage done to grain and other crops in general in the West.

The entry of July, as above sketched, is likely to be cool and showery in both Canada and the United States, and stormy weather, with a return to sultriness, is probable in proximity to the 4th in most sections.

An Irishman, who was very near-sighted, and who was about to fight a duel, insisted that he should stand six paces nearer to his antagonist than the other did to him, and they were both to fire at the same time.

DON'T CROSS A BRIDGE UNTIL YOU COME TO IT.

There was once a man and woman who planned to go and spend a day at a friend's house, which was some miles distant from their own. So one pleasant morning they started out to make the visit, but they had not gone far before the woman remembered a bridge they had to cross which was very old and said to be unsafe, and she immediately began to worry about it.

"What shall we do about that bridge?" she said to her husband. "I shall never agree to go over it, and we can't get across the river in any other way."

"Oh," said the man, "I forgot the bridge! It is a bad place; suppose it should break through, and we should fall into the water and be drowned?"

"Or even," said his wife, "suppose you should step on a rotten plank and break your leg, what would become of me and of the baby?"

"I don't know," said the man, "what would become of any of us, for I couldn't work, and we should all starve to death."

So they went on worrying and worrying, till they got to the bridge; when, lo and behold! they saw that since they had been there last a new bridge had been built, and they crossed over it in safety, and found that they might have saved themselves all their anxiety. Now that is just what the proverb means; never waste your worrying on what you think may possibly be going to happen; don't think. "Oh, suppose it should rain tomorrow so that I can't get out!" or, "What should I do if I should have a headache on the day of the party?" Half the time the troubles we look for do not come; and it is never worth while to waste the hours in worrying.

THE OTHER BOY.

"Let's see!" said a Michigan avenue grocer, as a boy came in and asked him if he had any decayed apples to give away to a poor but respectable family; aren't you the boy who broke one of my alley windows the other day?"

"No sir," was the prompt reply.

"Sure you aren't the boy?"

POLITICAL ASSASSINS.

Under our system of representative government no man has the shadow of right to inflict personal injury of any kind or degree because of political differences, be they what they may. To do so, is nothing less than aiming a blow at the vitality of freedom, and he who would, either directly or indirectly, commit or sanction such an offence, no matter what his partisan name or prominence, is not worthy to wear the badge and enjoy the liberty of American citizenship. Condign punishment, and the scorn of honorable men ought to be the swift and certain portion of all such miscreants.

In this country freedom of sentiment, both religious and political, is a glorious prerogative conferred by the Constitution and should be sacredly preserved. Every person has the positive right to think as he or she pleases and be protected therein, provided, such thoughts do not eventuate in acts of treason, venomous personal revenge, or lawless violence.

"The actions of every official in the land, from the lowest to the highest, are open to just public criticism, and political parties, within their own respective organizations and before the people at large, have the unquestioned privilege of freely advocating and opposing principles and measures of government, and the claims of candidates for office, subject at all times to the popular will, legally expressed and honestly accounted."

So far peace and safety abide, beyond that proper line lurks outrage and crime, as a recent event mournfully attests.

Political bitterness, not of the opposition, but evidently born and intensified by factionary feuds within his own political party, has fired an assassin's ball at the President of the United States.

Words are powerless to portray the enormity of such a crime.

It was a murderous assault upon the Republic itself.

Patriotism and preservation demand that the American people at once arise in the majesty of their might and trample into dust the animating cause of such a fiendish outrage against their dignity as a nation and their security as individuals.

As Americans, as Patriots, and as Democrats, we insist that irrepressible warfare be waged from this time out against all POLITICAL ASSASSINS, whether of the deadly weapon or malignant tongue or pen, and their aiders and abettors of every name and kind.

The hour has arrived when the people—THE SOVEREIGN PEOPLE, must clear the political atmosphere of the poison which now permeates it.

THEY CAN DO IT.

HOW THE NEWS WAS RECEIVED IN THIS CITY.

The news of the attempted assassination of President Garfield on Saturday last, was received in this city with a feeling of horror and indignation. Men went to and from the telegraph office with blanched faces and set teeth. Politics were forgotten and Democrat and Republican alike condemned the atrocious act and breathed threats of vengeance against the vile wretch who could thus deliberately attempt the life of America's chief executive officer. Flags were run up at half mast on public and private buildings, and bulletins posted as fast as received in front of THE CONSTITUTIONALIST office, around which crowds gathered to glean the latest news from the wounded President. The evening journals from New York, gave no hope of his recovery. The next morning, there was no more encouraging news. Monday the bulletins fluctuated between hopes of his ultimate recovery and rumors of his failing strength. About seven o'clock Monday night came a dispatch over the wires, saying that "The President cannot live until midnight." The telegraph office was besieged with visitors up to a late hour of the night, in hopes of hearing something cheering as to the President's condition, manager Schermerhorn courteously giving all information in his power. The sad news cast a gloom over the festivities of our National holiday, and was the general topic throughout the whole day.

MILLER ACQUITTED.

The jury in the case of Robert G. Miller, the ex-City Collector of New Brunswick, who was charged with having embezzled a large amount of city money, returned into court with a verdict of acquittal. The jury believed that there was an apparent deficiency but acquitted on the ground of want of intent to defraud the city. A nolle prosequi was entered as to the bill first found against him.

The Miller Engineer Corps, numbering 100 persons, a Garfield and Arthur organization during the Presidential campaign, turned out with torches and a band the next night, and serenaded Mr. Miller.

The sad news which appears in our columns to-day, of the attempted assassination of the President of the United States, meets with but one feeling throughout the breadth and depth of the land, that of horror and indignation and a demand for the speedy punishment of the vile wretch who performed the deed. It is a most fortunate thing for the future welfare of our Republic that no political party or faction are instigators or abettors of the crime. The deed was committed by a man, whom some will say is insane. There are too many such insane (?) people in the world, who have "method in their madness" and should not be allowed to roam at large. We believe that for such mad men, a short rope and fall is their only cure.

Mrs. Garfield had a narrow escape from an accident and probable serious injury or death, while on her way to her husband's bedside after his attempted assassination. The engine attached to the special train conveying her, broke a parrallel rod, while running at a fearful high rate of speed. Fortunately the engine was stopped before a wreck was created.

The congregation of Mayor Kalloch's church of San Francisco, have written him a letter, asking him not to be a candidate for office. Kalloch has consented to act in accordance with their wishes. San Francisco is to be congratulated.

The latest news from Washington is to the effect that the President is improving and will in all likelihood recover from his wound. With the rest of the people of this great nation, we say "Thank God."

Fifty-nine thousand emigrants arrived at Castle Garden during the month of June.

Have we Nihilists in this country?

Attempted Assassination of President Garfield.

The terrible news that leaped over the wires and flooded almost every corner of the World on Saturday last, announcing that President Garfield had been assassinated, was undoubtedly the most appalling ever conveyed to the American people. Later dispatches, however, modified the startling tidings; and although the condition of the victim was for days considered critical, a feeling of relief born of hope, took the place of the general sorrow that had been felt by all alike.

As briefly told as is possible the story of the tragedy is as follows: The Presidential party was to leave Washington Saturday morning on the limited express for an extended journey through New England. The party was to comprise the President and Mrs. Garfield, who was to meet him in New York, their two elder sons, Harry and James, Miss Mollie Garfield, their daughter, who is now with her mother; Colonel and Mrs. Rockwell, with Don Rockwell, their son, and Miss Lulu Rockwell, their daughter; Dr. W. H. Hawkes, the classical tutor of the three young gentlemen above named; the Secretary of the Treasury and Mrs. Windom; Postmaster General James and Mrs. James, the Secretary of the Navy and Mrs. Hunt, the Secretary of War, Judge-Advocate-General Swain and Colonel Jamison of the Post Office Department.

This was the programme marked out for a pleasant vacation, and the last of the party to complete it had not arrived when the twenty minutes past nine A. M. train, preceding the limited express, departed from the depot. A few moments later the President's carriage drove in front of the depot, and the President and his only companion, Secretary Blaine, alighted and both entered the depot by the main entrance on B street. They had proceeded only a few feet into the general passenger room, when two pistol-shots were fired in rapid succession from the rear and to the right of Secretary Blaine. The first shot passed through the right coat-sleeve of the President, inflicting no injury, but the second shot entered his body above the third rib. When the President was struck he turned sharply to the right, but before he could take a step or make another motion, he sank heavily to the floor, the blood spurting profusely from a jagged wound caused by a ball of the size known as calibre 42. Secretary Blaine turned toward the assassin, but discovering that he was in the custody of an officer, his attention was immediately given to the prostrate President, who was carried to a room in the second story of the depot building, where are situated the offices of the railroad company.

The scene that followed is most graphically described by Mr. James R. Young, of the Philadelphia Star, who was present and says:

"I reached the depot of the Baltimore and Potomac Railroad at about nine o'clock, intending to take the limited express train for New York. It leaves at half-past nine. I found the depot full of people, some going south, some west and others on the train I was to take north. I passed through the ladies reception room, where the ticket office is located. After purchasing my ticket I proceeded immediately to the train which was standing on the track south of the main building of the depot, say about a hundred yards from the ladies' reception room. After locating my seat in the car I descended to the depot platform. There I met Mr. Barclay, the old Journal clerk of the House, and Messrs. Kilburn and Adams, of the newspaper press of the city, who were about to leave with their families for the North. We stood just opposite the special train which was waiting for the President. In it were some dozen people, more than half of whom were ladies, the wives, sons and daughters of Secretaries Windom and Hunt, Postmaster James, Col. Rockwell and others of the Presidential party. They were a merry party, laughing and joking with numerous friends who had come down to see them off for a fortnight's holiday and frolic. Soon, Secretaries Windom and Hunt came out of the car and began promenading up and down the platform, quietly smoking their cigars. Later Postmaster General James alighted from the car and joined our party.

"We began congratulating him and ourselves that we were to escape the fearfully hot weather, and were trying to joke him about the administration leaving business for pleasure, when a young man stepped up to Mr. James and said to him, excitedly, that the President had been shot.

"Mr. James turned and said: 'What! there is no joke in a thing like that.'

"His informant, almost scared to death, replied, 'I assure you it is true.'

"Without another word Mr. James turned and ran to the depot building, and we all naturally followed him. When I reached the ladies' reception rooms the doors were being closed. There were at least two hundred people in and around the building, and I began to inquire if the news I had heard was true. It took only a moment to find out that it was. I could not gain admission at the inside door of the room where the President was, so I ran out into the street, hoping to be more successful at the street entrance. There I found a big crowd already gathered, and a policeman and some others hurriedly hustling a man outside. This was the assassin. I did not follow, as my desire was to learn the extent of the President's wound. Not being able to gain admittance at the door, I saw an open window, say about ten feet from the ground. A colored newsboy was climbing in, and I concluded to follow suit. It was not more than a half minute's work before I got inside. The first person I saw was Secretary Windom. He was standing alone, as pale as death, and the tears were trickling down his cheeks. Knowing him well, I said:

"'Mr. Secretary, where is the President and what does this mean?'

"He replied, 'There he lies in yonder corner in that group. It is as much of a mystery to me as it is to you.'

"I moved over about two yards, and there I saw the President lying on a mattress which had been hastily brought from the sleeping apartments of one of the depot employees. There were probably thirty people around him, many of whom were women, who had been waiting for their Southern trains.

"Secretary Blaine had hold of one of the President's hands, and Postmaster General James was assisting to get him into a sitting posture. His face showed a deathly paleness, and he had a look of surprise, as if caused by pain and despair. He was vomiting, and seemed to have no control of himself. His coat and vest had been ripped from him and his trousers loosened. The matter he had vomited had fallen on his shirt below the bosom, which made it seem as if the ball of the assassin had penetrated the intestines. Near him was his son, a lad of sixteen. Poor boy, he was almost beside himself. He wrung his hands and cried in a piteous manner. With him were the son of Colonel Rockwell and Secretary Hunt, who, in every way natural to human beings, were trying to comfort him. In less than ten minutes Secretary Blaine gave orders to have the President removed to the upper floor of the depot, to the officers' room, where there would be plenty of air and a freedom from the mob which was rapidly gathering. Colonel Rockwell and Adjutant General Corbin soon made a passage way, and the President was borne by a number of the colored porters of the depot to the upper floor. I waited down stairs, and in about half an hour he was carried down, placed in an ambulance, and under a strong guard of mounted police was driven to the White House. I immediately left the depot and hurriedly went up Pennsylvania avenue. Although it was not an hour since the shooting took place, I found the avenue crowded with people, some standing in groups, regardless of the broiling hot sun, discussing the event; others hurrying toward the depot and others pushing and rushing and wending their way no one knows where."

The Presidential party soon arrived at the Executive Mansion, when the gates were closed and a military guard surrounded the White House and grounds, keeping back the immense crowds. The President was carefully lifted from the ambulance and carried to a sleeping-chamber in the south-east corner of the building, and was soon surrounded by the most eminent physicians in Washington. Owing to the nervous prostration which followed the shock, the surgeons did not deem it advisable to probe for the ball while the President was at the depot. Upon reaching the White House, this nervous prostration seemed to pass away and the President assumed his usual composed manner, greeting members of the Cabinet and other intimate friends who called with a warm pressure of the hand and with cheerful words. Before leaving the depot the President manifested some anxiety about the effect of the intelligence of his wound upon Mrs. Garfield, and, turning to Col. Rockwell, dictated to him the following dispatch to be sent to Mrs. Garfield at Long Branch:

Mrs. Garfield, Elberon, N. J.:

The President wishes me to say to you from him that he has been seriously hurt—how seriously he cannot yet say. He is himself and hopes you will come to him soon. He sends his love to you. A. F. ROCKWELL.

At one o'clock a special train was provided, and soon on its way to Washington, where it arrived at half past six o'clock, Mrs Garfield and daughter arriving at the Executive Mansion at 6:50 o'clock, P. M., the train having travelled at the rate of sixty miles an hour.

During the afternoon, although suffering intensely from his wound, the President several times gave exhibition of his well known nature and genial disposition. At one time, while Secretary Blaine was sitting at his bedside, the President, turning his head, said: "Blaine, what motive do you think that man could have had in trying to assassinate me?" To which Mr. Blaine replied: "I do not know, Mr. President. He says he had no motive. He must be insane." To this the President smilingly answered: "I suppose he thought it would be a glorious thing to emulate the pirate chief." At another time, when one of his sons was sobbing at his bedside the President said: "Don't be alarmed, Jimmy, the upper story is all right, it is only the hull that is a little damaged." When Col. Rockwell announced to him that Mrs. Garfield had started on a special train from Long Branch he said, with evident feeling: "God bless the little woman; I hope the shock won't break her down."

From the moment of Mrs. Garfield's visit to him the President seemed to gain in strength and spirits, and if he recovers the doctors say that it will be due greatly to the presence of his devoted wife. After she had left him he turned over, and with one hand clasped firmly in one of Mrs. James's, and his head resting upon her other hand, he fell into a gentle sleep. In half an hour, however, he awoke and complained of a pain in his feet. It did not last long, and he dozed off again, still holding the hand of Mrs. James. This time he slept a little over half an hour, and when he awoke he said to Mrs. James: "Do you know where Mrs. Garfield is now?" "Oh, yes," Mrs. James answered, "she is close by, watching and praying for her husband." He looked up to the lady with an anxious face, and said: "I want her to go to bed. Will you tell her that I say if she will undress and go to bed I will turn right over, and I feel sure that when I know she is in bed I can go to sleep and sleep all night. Tell her." he exclaimed with sudden energy, "that I will sleep all night if she will only do what I ask." Mrs. James conveyed the message to Mrs. Garfield, who said to her at once: "Go back and tell him that I am undressing." She returned with the answer, and the President turned over on his right side and dropped into a quiet sleep almost instantly.

Telegrams from all parts of the country and Europe kept pouring in at the White House. Many prominent Democrats, among them Senators Beck, Pugh, and Jones of Florida, and Representatives Randolph, Tucker of Virginia, spent several hours at the White House, and were deeply concerned in the bulletins from the physicians. Senator Pugh said he regarded the death of the President as a great calamity, and one that might tend to check the present prosperity of the country and of this section.

Queen Victoria, the Prince and Princess of Wales, the Emperor of Germany, the Japanese Government, the King of Roumania and many other potentates sent sympathetic telegrams to the Cabinet and Mrs. Garfield. The South has behaved very handsomely, and in many of the principal cities great public meetings have been held, all expressing the utmost indignation against the assassin and earnestly praying for the President's restoration to health.

Vice President Arthur arrived in New York on Saturday, and then first received the telegrams sent to him from Washington. He replied as follows:

NEW YORK, July 1, 1881.

Hon. James G. Blaine, Secretary of State, Washington, D. C.:

Your telegram, with its deplorable narrative, did not reach me promptly, owing to my absence. I am profoundly shocked at the dreadful news. The hopes you express relieve somewhat the horror of the first announcement. I await further intelligence with the greatest anxiety. Express to the President and those about him my great grief and sympathy, in which the whole American people will join.

C. A. ARTHUR.

NEW YORK, July 2, 1881.

The Hon. James G. Blaine, Secretary of State, Washington, D. C.:

Your 6:45 telegram is very distressing. I still hope for more favorable tidings, and ask you to keep me advised. Please do not fail to express to Mrs. Garfield my deepest sympathy.

C. A. ARTHUR.

Gen. Arthur in company with Mr. Jones left for Washington on the midnight train, arriving in Washington between seven and eight o'clock on Sunday morning. Prior to leaving New York, the Vice President received the following telegram:

WASHINGTON, July 2.

The Hon. Chester A. Arthur, Vice Pres.:

It is the judgment of the Cabinet that you should come to Washington to-night by midnight train.

JAMES G. BLAINE.

At about nine o'clock, the Vice President drove to the Executive Mansion, and was escorted to the council chamber, where the members of the Cabinet and several foreign ministers were assembled. The Vice President also visited the library, where some time was spent in conversation with the ladies of the Cabinet, and he subsequently paid his respects to Mrs. Garfield and in a feeling manner expressed his profound sympathy. Mr. Arthur was very much moved, and was unable to conceal his emotion when conversing with Mrs. Garfield on the terrible calamity that had happened to her husband and the Nation in the attempt to assassinate the President. After remaining in the mansion nearly two hours, the Vice President returned to the house of Senator Jones, whose guest he was.

On Sunday forenoon the President's condition seemed more hopeful. This was communicated to the President by the physicians in attendance, and soon after [illegible] Dr. Bliss was standing by the bedside of the President. Gen. Garfield extended his hand and pressed that of the doctor, and a smile lighted up his pale face. The grasp of his hand was almost as firm and steady as it had been when in the enjoyment of perfect health. "Doctor," he said, "you have changed my programme a little. I had prepared to meet death philosophically, but you have changed all that." The confidence in his own power of resistance, which is better than all the medicine to a sinking man, had taken possession of the President. "I believe he has made up his mind that he won't die, and that he will fight it off," said one of the attendants in describing this scene. An hour later the confidence of both Dr. Bliss and the President in his ultimate recovery was demonstrated by an order given to private Secretary Brown to inform several of the leading physicians in attendance that the symptoms of recovery were so favorable that, for the present at least, their further attendance would not be necessary, and thanking them for their valuable services.

THE ASSASSIN.

Immediately upon hearing the pistol-shot, Officer Kearney, who remained at his post of duty near the B street entrance after the President entered the building, ran into the large reception room, and was in time to see the assassin running toward the east door, which opens on Sixth street. Before reaching this door the assassin turned back to make his way out of the north door, where he was met and arrested by Officer Kearney. The officer met the prisoner on the steps and said to him: "I must arrest you." "All right." said the assassin. "I did it and will go to jail for it. I am a Stalwart and Arthur will be President." Officer Kearney took his prisoner into the large waiting room, where he was joined by one of the railroad officers and escorted to Police Headquarters. On the way he gave Kearney a card on which was written: "Charles Guiteau, of Illinois," that being the prisoner's name. Guiteau is described on the books at Police Headquarters as follows: "Charles Guiteau, arrested at 9:25, July 2, 1881, for shooting President Garfield; aged 36; white; born in the United States and a lawyer by profession; weight, 130 pounds; has dark-brown, thin whiskers and sallow complexion; dressed in a dark suit with black slouch hat."

The following letter was taken from the prisoner's pocket at Police Headquarters, showing conclusively his intention to kill the President:

JULY 2, 1881.

To the White House:

The President's tragic death was a sad necessity, but it will unite the Republican party and save the Republic. Life is a flimsy dream, and it matters little when one goes. A human life is of small value. During the war thousands of brave boys went down without a tear. I presume that the President was a christian and that he will be happier in Paradise than here. It will be no worse for Mrs. Garfield, dear soul, to part with her husband in this way than by natural death. He is liable to go at any time any way. I had no ill-will toward the President. His death was a political necessity. I am a lawyer, a theologian, and a politician. I am a Stalwart of the Stalwarts. I was with Gen. Grant and the rest of our men in New York during the canvass. I have some papers for the press, which I shall leave with Byron Andrews and his co-journalists at No. 1,420 New York avenue, where the reporters can see them. I am going to the jail.

CHARLES GUITEAU.

Mr. Andrews, to whom allusion is made in the foregoing letter, is the Washington correspondent of the Chicago Inter-Ocean. Upon learning of the shooting and the allusion made to him in the prisoner's papers, Mr. Andrews repaired to Police Headquarters and made a sworn statement to the effect that he never heard of nor met Guiteau until he saw him under arrest to-day. The prisoner's statement, addressed to Mr. Andrews, was retained by the police authorities, and is a bulky package of manuscript written in a heavy, course hand, apparently covering 25 or 30 pages of letter paper. Among the papers was the following letter to Gen. Sherman:

To Gen Sherman:

I have just shot the President. I shot him several times as I wished him to go as easily as possible. His death was a political necessity. I am a lawyer, a theologian, and politician. I am a Stalwart of the Stalwarts. I was with Gen. Grant and the rest of our men in New York during the canvass. I am going to jail. Please order out your troops and take possession of the jail at once.

Very Respectfully, CHAS. GUITEAU.

The following address was upon the letter: "Please deliver at once to Gen. Sherman or his first assistant in charge of the War Department."

As we go to press the most reassuring bulletins regarding the President's condition continue to be received. Since Monday the patient has passed comfortable nights and seems to feel generally refreshed. The usual unfavorable nocturnal symptoms no longer appear, and their absence lead many to believe that the most perilous stages have been passed. This the doctors do not believe, however, for in a dispatch to Minister Lowell on Wednesday the Secretary of State, says the physicians are looking forward with intense anxiety to the trying days that are to come. It is now said that everything depends on the location of the ball, and until that is ascertained the question of the President's safety cannot be determined. No diagnosis of the case can be made until then, and while everyone hopes for the best, the President's condition is still most critical and perilous.

General Winfield Scott Hancock was among the first to forward regrets and condolence to the authorities at Washington after President Garfield's attempted assassination.

The Constitutional Commission.

The commission to consider proposed amendments to the New Jersey Constitution met on Saturday last, July 2d, at the Ocean Hotel, Long Branch, Mr. H. N. Congar in the chair. The meeting was set apart to consider the matter of municipal governments. The provision of the Constitution forbidding special legislation for municipalities had operated to tangle up the financial affairs of a number of New Jersey cities, and several cities sent delegations to represent what they believed to be their necessities.

Mr. Simeon H. Smith, a member of the Jersey City Board of Finance, submitted a written proposition for amendments to the Jersey City charter, requiring the railroad corporations to pay their proportion of municipal taxation, giving the Mayor power to appoint, and the Aldermen to confirm, the administrative offices of the city, and providing a salary of $1,000 each for Aldermen and members of the Board of Finance, and $500 each for members of the Board of Education.

Mr. Van Beypen, President of the Board of Aldermen, Dr. Quimby, Smith W. Haines, A. Fitzpatrick, and others of the Anti-Monopoly Union of Jersey City, appeared to enforce their views, and submitted a proposition through S. B. Ransom, their counsel, to amend the Constitution, by forbidding the railroads to pass through cities without their consent; making their property subject to the same tax as that of individuals; forbidding them to condemn real estate without first filing their waiver of all right to exemption from such taxation as individuals pay; and limiting the amount of yearly expenditures of cities.

Mayor Savage of Rahway earnestly represented the necessities of that city to have relief from its bankrupt condition, and Mayor Randolph of Plainfield urged the necessity of relaxing the present restrictions upon needed improvements.

The next meeting of the Commission will be held on July 21, at Atlantic City.

ONE half of the year 1881 is gone.

COMMON Council meeting next Monday evening.

BACHMAN, the Dry Goods merchant, at 27 West Front Street, is having fitted up a Gent's Shirt Department.

THERE is more trouble in the Republican party. Dog-pounder Hapeny refuses to obey the orders of Mayor Randolph.

THE bill-posters of New Jersey met at the office of Messrs. Evans & Hotchkiss in Newark, on June 16th, and formed a State organization.

SEVEN members of the New Brunswick Bicycle Club rode over to Plainfield on Monday, and enjoyed one of Mr. J. B. Miller's bountiful dinners at Laing's Hotel.

MODERN pottery, boiled in oil and buried in wood ashes soon becomes very old. Ivories boiled in honey and hung up the chimney, quickly become venerable antiquities.

THE grocery at Netherwood formerly carried on by Mr. Edward Willis, Jr., has been sold to Mr. J. R. Dayton of N. Y. The new manager is said to be a merchant of experience and ability.

"HOT" Shafer who shot Keefe of this city, is out of jail again and was in Plainfield recently. He has had some experience of his own as a target—having been shot in the neck while in prison, by an under-keeper, for insubordination.

VENNOR—as will be seen by his predictions on our first page—promises cool and wet weather with frequent rain storms, for the beginning of July. His veracity is shown by the atmosphere of the past week to be decidedly censurable.

MESSRS. Dunham & Miller, at the sign of the illuminated mortar under Van Deventer Hall, are drawing a most refreshing and palatable glass of soda with natural fruit flavor. Their lime juice is something immense.

ON Wednesday the Corporation Counsel appeared before the Supreme Court at Trenton, and again made his motion for a rehearing in the mandamus case. Since the City Treasurer's last appeal of the sort, that officer had purged himself of contempt, and the Court took the papers and reserved its decision.

THOUSANDS of young men and women who last week "finished" their education will soon begin to acquire their real education by contact with the world, its people and its actualities. Many of them will be surprised to learn how little they really know when they step outside the realm of books and theory.

ANYONE desiring to accompany the First Baptists on their excursion to Ocean Grove, may procure tickets at J. P. Howatt's stationery store, D. F. Randolph's shoe store or R. Stelle's pharmacy. It will take place on Friday the 22d inst., and is the first of the usual Sunday School excursions this season.

ON Monday next, at 2 o'clock p. m., will be sold at auction, on the premises, by order of the administrator, Mr. Wm. H. Shotwell, a number of desirable city lots with houses upon them. They are situated at the corner of Madison avenue and Sixth street; Fourth street between Madison and Central avenues; corner of Second street and Madison avenue, and elsewhere.

IT is rumored that the Common Council, before passing the ordinance dividing the city into wards as already advertised, will amend the act so as to provide for five instead of four as designated. The idea is, that as now bounded two wards are probably Democratic, and by creating another, one can be so split up as to overcome such result by annexing a Republican section.

THE attendance at the entertainment given by Mr. W. Bradford Williams, in the M. E. church on Friday evening of last week, was but small in number although great in its appreciation of the humor of the occasion. The artist displayed some dramatic power at the opening of the programme, but failed throughout in substantiating any claim to elocutionary talent.

THE reception given by the P. H. S. classes of '79 and '80 to that of '81, on Thursday evening of last week in Assembly Hall, at the close of the Commencement exercises, was a decidedly successful affair as a social entertainment. A large gathering assembled and enjoyed itself in congenial acquaintance. It is to be regretted that the fine music available was not used to accompany moderate dancing.

THE promised ball game on Monday morning, between Gazelle and Warren Hose companies, which was expected to be an exciting contest, broke up with a dispute and general dissatisfaction before the close of the fourth inning. Each side had secured the assistance of one or more who was not strictly a member, and even had the game been continued to the finish, it would hardly have decided the respective merits of the associations.

THE State Board of Education held a meeting on Thursday afternoon at Trenton, when the following County Superintendents were elected: Bergen, John A. Demarest; Burlington, Edgar Haas; Camden, F. R. Brace; Cape May, E. P. Shields; Gloucester, William Milligan; Hudson, William L. Dickinson; Monmouth, Samuel Lockwood; Ocean, Edward M. Lonan; Passaic, E. V. DeGraff; Salem, R. H. Holme; Somerset, J. S. Haynes; Sussex, Luther Hill. Messrs. Shields and DeGraff are new appointees, the others were re-elected.

THERE is nothing in addition to our last week's report that remains to be written regarding the P. H. S. Commencement. The music by Wernig's Orchestra was grand, and has seldom if ever been excelled. The attendance was large and an unusual degree of interest continued throughout the exercises. Judge Harper awarded the prizes, Mr. John W. Murray presented the Roll of Honor badges, and Dr. C. H. Stillman conferred the diplomas upon the graduates. The essays read were without exception praiseworthy, and the address of Rev. A. H. Lewis far surpassed any effort in its line we have been favored with.

PROBABLY the most enjoyable out-door entertainment of the season will be that given by the Plainfield Turn Verein on Thursday afternoon and evening of next week. Besides the customary pleasures that are obtainable at picnics, a most interesting exhibition will be given consisting of horizontal and parallel bar exercises as well as other gymnastic feats. The Committee of Arrangements consists of Messrs. Charles F. Meyer, George P. Becker, Peter Kelleher, Henry Meyer and Arthur A. Linzer—a quintette perfectly able to successfully furnish a good time for hundreds of their brethren and "sisthren." Sister societies from other places will be present and take active part in the festivities.

IN relation to the case of Squiers vs. Decamp, regarding which we noted last week, a decision on appeal in favor of the defendant, it is only just to state the following cause that was responsible for the change: The defendants' appeal from the decision of Justice Wadsworth, was sustained by reason of the plaintiff's inability to appear and contest the appeal, and not upon a rehearing of the evidence, as no trial was held before the Court. Justice Wadsworth takes a just pride in the fact that his rulings on law points have been almost universally sustained by the highest courts, and in this case, the correctness of his decision in no way came in question. The case was simply dismissed because the plaintiff was not in court when his case was called.

THE following resolution was passed at a recent meeting of the Y. M. C. A. Board of Directors. By an oversight its publication has been delayed until the present time:

Resolved, That the Board of Directors of the Young Men's Christian Association of Plainfield desire to express their deep sense of bereavement in the death of their late fellow member and fellow officer, Edward C. Hoagland, and to make emphatic record of their appreciation of him, in his personal character and his Christian work. He was in a rare degree faithful, efficient, spiritual. With untiring earnestness and with very evident growth in grace and knowledge, and ever deepening experience, he gave his time and energies to the work of the Association, and in his death the Association and the members personally have sustained no ordinary loss.

The Directors desire further to express to the family of our deceased brother their prayerful sympathy, at the same time to share with them the comfort of his memory, so fragrant of Christ, his peaceful and triumphant death and the assurance of his rest in his reigning with Christ in glory.

Out-Door Festivities.

On Thursday afternoon and evening of last week, the members of Warren Eng. Co. No. 3 gave one of the finest and most successful picnics of the year. Messrs. Krausch, Utzinger and Zeiss perfected the arrangements, and hundreds of the Company's friends gathered together in a general good time. Franz's quadrille band played almost continually, and dance after dance was enjoyed to the measure of the inspiring music. The illumination of the Wooden's Grove where the entertainment was held, was most beautiful after the shades of night fell; and Friday morning had arrived before any cessation of the pleasure occurred.

Off for the Seashore.

The proposed excursion to Ocean Grove, Asbury Park and Long Branch, from this city on Thursday of next week, is the first of the season, and the past and coming hot weather will induce a large number of our citizens to take advantage of the opportunity of enjoying a day on the ocean's edge. It is the only date this summer when bathing can be indulged in during the entire day—the hours being from 6 a. m. to 7 p. m. Tickets are for sale at the drug stores of Dunellen and this city, at one dollar each. Children under ten years of age, not occupying a full seat, being taken for half price. The train leaves Plainfield at 7:30 a. m., returning, leave Asbury Park at 6:15 p. m., stopping at Long Branch both ways. The excursion will be under the efficient management of Messrs. Ed. Nelson and Eugene M. Laing.

Burial of the Rev. James V. Daly, O. P.

The funeral services over the body of the late Rev. Jas. V. Daly, O. P., superior of the band of Dominican Fathers who gave the mission at St. Mary's Catholic church in this city last May, took place at the church of the Dominican Fathers, Saint Vincent de Ferrer's, Lexington avenue and Sixty-sixth street, New York, last Tuesday morning. The body of the church was filled to overflowing by many of those who had known the good and kindly old priest during his long career, and in the sanctuary were many of the most prominent clergymen of New York and vicinity. After the services the body was taken to the railroad depot, to be transferred to the place of burial at St. Joseph's Convent, Perry County, Ohio. Father Daly was born in Ireland sixty-five years ago and came to this country while a young man. He was ordained in this country and belonged to the order of Dominican priests. He has done much missionary work, and was well known in many parts of the country. Shortly before the illness which resulted in his death, he had been doing missionary work in New Jersey, Massachusetts, and Maine.

The Fourth.

The 105th anniversary of American Independence was observed in a very quiet manner in Plainfield, the sad news of an attempt to assassinate the President, coupled with the fact that there was to be no public demonstration in the city, making it so. The small boy, (and we might say, also, the great, big boy) was on hand promptly as the clock tolled forth the hour of twelve, with pistol, cannon and fire cracker, and until seven o'clock in the morning, certain sections of the city resembled pandemonium. The members of the political drum corps, both black and white, were out with their drums, and prevented any sleep visiting tired eyes by their murderous banging on the sheepshead. The bell on the public school building was rung for some time just after daybreak. With this exception, no bells on public buildings or churches were rung. There was a liberal display of bunting exhibited during the day. In the afternoon there was an influx of citizens to the Fair Grounds to witness the trotting there. The "Rock House" was also liberally patronized during the day, mine host, S. O. Staats, relieving the wants of all in his usual happy manner. In the evening there was a fine display of fireworks in various sections of the city. Particularly fine were those set off in front of the Mansion House, E. P. Thorn, proprietor, Netherwood Hotel and private residences adjoining, also at the residence of R. S. Little, on Park avenue. The monotony of ushering in the day was broken by an alarm or two of fire, which fortunately resulted in nothing serious to property. The cannon salute which was to have been fired at sunrise in the morning was omitted by order of "Acting Mayor" (?) Whiton, in consequence of the news received of the attempted assassination of President Garfield. A large number of strangers were in the city, and no accident, worthy of note, has fallen under our observation as occurring on that day.

Trotting on the Fourth.

There was a large attendance at the Fair Grounds of the "U. & M. C. M. A. A.," near this city on the Fourth of July to witness the trotting advertised to take place on that day. In the first race, 2:30 class, purse $300, the following well-known horses started: G. Smith's s. g. "Peralto," of Elizabeth; M. H. Mason's br. g. "Pickwick," of Attleboro Falls, Mass.; P. Weber's blk. m. "Josephine S.," of Wilkesbarre, Pa., and L. E. Dunham's ch. g. "Billy Button," of Newark, N. J. The bay gelding, "Sidney K.," entered in the race by C. Somers, of New York, was withdrawn at the last moment. After short scoring, the horses got away well together, but "Peralto" forged rapidly ahead, and soon lead all competitors, easily winning the heat in 2:36¼, with "Josephine S." second. "Peralto" won also the second and third heats in 2:33¾ and 2:32¼.

In the next race, 2:45 class, for a purse of $200, there were five entries and three starters as follows: A. H. Smith's b. g. "Sparkle," J. W. Johnson's gr. m. "Nellie" and O. T. Waring's br. m. "Farmer Girl." Two other entries, P. C. Osborne's blk. m. "Belle Jefferson" and W. S. Darling's b. g. "Jerry," were withdrawn. This race was a very exciting one, made so from the fact that all the horses were owned by prominent gentlemen of Plainfield, who individually felt confident that his horse was the best of the three. The betting was about equal between "Nellie" and "Farmer Girl," with the latter a slight favorite. After considerable scoring the horses were given the word "go" when they were well together, "Sparkle" winning the heat in 2:52¼ with "Nellie" second. In the second heat, "Farmer Girl" did some fine trotting, coming in ahead in 2:52¼, with "Nellie" second. The exciting heat was the third one, which was captured by "Farmer Girl" in 2:52½, with "Nellie" only a neck behind. The fourth heat was easily won by "Farmer Girl" in 2:53, "Nellie" and "Sparkle" being distanced.

An extra event of the day was a running race between Ellis Campbell's br. g. "Pat," and the b. g. "Dick," entered by Frank Ancy. Ed. Campbell rode "Pat" and Ancy "Dick." The latter won the first heat in 58¼ seconds, with "Pat" a length and a half behind. "Pat" however won the two next heats in 57 and 58¼ seconds.

The judges in the races were B. C. Guerin, of Morristown; J. V. N. Willis, of Freehold and Col. Edwards, of Newark. The distance judge was Wm. Coulter, of Woodbridge. All these officials gave universal satisfaction in their decisions. The whole afternoon's sport reflected credit upon the managers of the same.

Report received and placed on file. A vacancy occuring in the board of Trustees, caused by the expiration of Mr. Lewis' term, an election for one Trustee to serve for three years was then called for. Messrs. F. H. Gardiner, D. H. Weaver, A. D. Godown and W. F. Williams were nominated; Messrs. Godown and Williams declined the nomination and a ballot showed Mr. Gardiner to have received 62 and Mr. Weaver 11. Mr. G. was declared elected. No further business. Meeting adjourned.

Personalia.

Mr. James A. Spencer of Duer street, North Plainfield, left for Asbury Park on Tuesday, with his family for the summer.

Mr. A. M. Powell of East Sixth street, sailed on Wednesday for St. John, N. B., and a three week's trip in Prince Edward's Island and Nova Scotia.

The Rev. A. V. V. Raymond is expected to return to this city in a day or two, and occupy the pulpit of the Trinity Reformed church on Sunday next.

Mr. J. C. Runyon of the Central Times, is to be condoled upon the death of his infant child whose birth we were so pleased to record a few weeks ago.

Mr. Eugene Marsile, of Port Orange, Volucia County, Florida, where he has an extensive orange grove, is visiting at his brother-in-law's, Mr. Auguste Saltzman, in this city.

We are sorry to learn that the Chief of the Pottowatomies, Mr. Samuel D. France, seriously burned his right hand from the explosion of a roman candle on the night of the Fourth.

Mr. and Mrs. Stephen R. Struthers of Plainfield avenue, gave a select number of their numerous friends a very enjoyable lawn party on the afternoon and evening of Monday last.

Miss Katie Kimball, Secretary of the C. L. S. C., has closed her season of labor here, and left recently for Chautauqua Lake, and the summer meetings of the Society thereat.

As the attractive city of Milford, Conn., would not "come to Peck," our enterprising citizen went there instead for a short vacation, and returned feeling much refreshed by the absence from business labors.

From a private letter to Gen. Wm. H. Sterling from ex-Gov. McClellan, we learn that the latter, with his family, is now at the Baths of Homburg, Germany.—They intend visiting Switzerland before their return in September.

Abraham Runyon, Esq., father of Chancellor Runyon, is spending the summer with friends at Dunellen. Mr. Runyon, who is one of the oldest subscribers to THE CONSTITUTIONALIST, looks well and hearty for a man of his advanced years.

WE are informed on good authority that parties are in the habit of going about and selling, or offering for sale, tickets for alleged entertainments for the benefit of Mt. Olive Baptist Church. We are requested to state that such tickets and sellers are frauds.

Hon. Philip J. D. Van Dyke and his charming wife of Detroit, Mich., who have been visiting in this city during the last two weeks, left for their home last Friday. It is refreshing to meet such a thoroughbred Democrat from a Republican State like Michigan.

Mr. George H. Babcock, of this city, is said to have just given $10,000 to Wilson College, at Wilson, Wis., and also promised to give $16,000 more if the Alumni raise an equal amount. At the late Commencement debts of the college amounting to $9,500 were paid off by other friends of the institution.

FIRE MATTERS.

Warren Eng. No. 3 indulged in a wash on Monday evening, and worked most beautifully.

An adjourned meeting of Gazelle Engine Co., No. 1, will be held at their parlor on next Tuesday evening, at 8 o'clock. At this meeting, a full attendance of the members is requested.

The Plainfield Firemen's Relief Association has received for its use $244 84, as its share of about $8,000 that was in the hands of the Secretary of State for distribution among thirty-two like organizations.

The Board of Appeals of the Plainfield Fire Department sat in the Council Chamber this (Thursday) afternoon, to receive the complaints of all who might consider themselves aggrieved by the levy made upon their property for fire taxes. Not an appeal came before them.

There was four alarms of fire from Saturday evening to Monday morning last. The first occured Saturday evening about dark. A portion of the Department turned out. Cause some railroad ties on fire near Evona. The second alarm was Sunday morning about ten o'clock, caused by a kerosene barrel igniting in the lower part of the city. Another alarm occurred about nine o'clock the same evening. Cause unknown. The last occurred about three o'clock Monday morning. No cause for action.

The Board of Managers of the Plainfield Fire Department met in regular meeting in the Council Chamber on Wednesday evening. Pres. Van Winkle in the chair, and all the members present. The minutes of the previous regular and special meetings were read and approved. Mr. Jones from the Com., on Wells, reported that arrangements had been all completed for the procuring of water from the brook at Grove street. He stated that a gate had been placed at the entrance to the grounds, and requested that the firemen open it instead of bursting through, when they had occasion to use the accommodation. Mr. Morris from the Com., on Repairs and Supplies reported as correct the bills of the Plainfield Gas Light Co., from May 15th 1879, to April 1st 1881, amounting to $629.80. They were for gas $522.30 and coal $107.50. Of the amount charged for gas, No. 1, Engine Co., and the H. & L. Co., had used $297; No. 2 Engine Co., $81.60; No. 3 Engine Co., $111.90, and Alert Hose Co., $31.80. The Committee considered that the expenditure of $300 per annum for gas was to much, but felt that honorable mention was due the Alert Hose and No. 2 for economy in that direction. It also recommended that the officers of No. 1 Eng. Co., and the H. & L. Co., should see that their companies use less gas, and that the other organizations should be as economical as possible that it might not be necessary to substitute oil. The report was received and the recommendations adopted. The Secretary reported as correct the applications for exemption of Messrs. John Boorum, L. De Camp, L. H. Boice, Morgan Bird, E. C. VanNorstrand and N. M. Sebring. Certificates granted. The Treasurer reported as his receipts since annual statement, $1,372.71; disbursements 756.80; balance on hand $615.91. Engine Co., No. 2, sent in the names of E. Mosher, J. Howard Wilson and Joseph B. Miller as candidates for membership; and Eng. Co., No. 1 those of Wm. Batton, Jas. Bird and W. Van Syckle. Laid over in regular course. Mr. Morris called the Board's attention to the fact that a number of applications for membership had been neglected and were still in their hands. The Secretary could not find a list of such, and the Chief Engineer was instructed to notify the company sending them in, to make out new applications. The bill of Mr. E. R. Pope Ag't. for $75, as rent of Alert Hose House, was laid on the table. That of R. M. Stelle $1.70 was referred to the Treasurer for examination, as claims of later date by the same party, had been paid. That of Carney Bros. $63.70 was referred to the Com. on Repairs and Supplies. The following were ordered paid: Mace & Chamberlin, $8.70; W. B. Grannatt, 30.65; Simpson & Co., 43.51; VanWinkle & Maxson 55.35; J. A. Hubbard, 125; H. J. Martin, 2; W. J. Curley, 1.20; C. R. Hope 3.60; Jos. Nolan, 2.40; Jno. Carney, 4.80; H. Goeller 24; A. W. Johnson, 2.87; J. B. Gable, 7.20; Manchester Loco. Works, 18.96; Pound & Co., 25; C. Johnson, 4.30; Jas. Donohue, 3; J. P. Homan, 15.10; Pl. Mut. Fire Ass. Co., 7; G. W. Reamer, 8; Flannery & Cooper, 10; J. B. Coward, 50. The Treasurer was authorized to settle the gas bills as reported on by the Com. of Repairs & Supplies. Mr. Morris offered a resolution looking towards the purchase of a new truck. After alteration it was passed, providing for the report of definite propositions from manufacturers, to be procured by the President and Com., on Repairs & Supplies. On motion Mr. Morris, the Com., on R. & S., with the Treasurer, were instructed to see the agents of Alert Hose House, and discover on what terms the same could be rented for one, three and five years. Mr. Morris presented a resolution, which was adopted, requiring the Treasurer to publish in all the newspapers of the city, and on hand-bills posted in five conspicuous places, a notice that a list of those citizens who do not pay their fire taxes in sixty days from July 14th., will be placed in the hands of a Justice of the Peace for collection. Mr. Morris presented a preamble and resolution to the effect that the President and Com. on Repairs & Supplies be instructed to procure 250 badges, numbered consecutively, and that each member of the Department be required to wear one of the same while on duty. The badge to be obtained upon depositing with the Treasurer a sum not exceeding $1.00. Adopted. Messrs. John Harding, Francis Whiting, Lewis Sprague and A. L. Foote, appeared before the Board as candidates from Warren Eng. Co. No. 3, for acceptance by the Department. Names laid over for further action. Application for exemption papers were made by Jacob Kriney and Eugene Seiss of Eng. Co., No. 3. The Constitution and By-laws of Eng. Co., No. 2 were presented for the endorsement of the Board and referred to the Secretary for examination. Adjourned.

OUR city is probably to be visited with a first-class circus troupe. It is expected to arrive on or about August 23d.

THE wheat begins to turn, and will soon be fit for harvesting. It now appears that the harvest will be nearly as forward as it was last year.

Netherwood Chapel Dedication.

The Netherwood Union Chapel will be formally dedicated next Sunday afternoon at 4 o'clock. Eminent speakers will be present, and the exercises will be very interesting. Seats are free, and all are cordially invited to be present. Next Sunday there will be the usual services at 11 o'clock.

The World's Fair.

Matters in relation to the World's Fair in New York have progressed so favorably as to promise a public statement of its ultimate plans in a short time. The Executive Com. meets again on Saturday at its new offices in the New York Life Ins. Co's building, 346 Broadway, and the final consummation of the project will be further arranged.

COMMUNICATED.

For "The Constitutionalist."

MESSRS. EDITORS:

I noticed in your last week's issue an article headed "Our City Treasurer indorsed," and then saying as to the order of the court "it is rather a severe criticism of recent actions of the city and County Collector."

Your City Treasurer needs no indorsement before any of your people or anywhere that he is known as to the criticism. It appears to me to be more severe on your city officials, who allow a City Collector year after year to almost ignore a City Treasurer a part of whose duties he certainly usurps.

It has always been known to your city officials that the State and County money was paid by the City Collector to the County, and some of them have always held that it was wrong; the County Collector had no complaint to make as to which official forwarded the money to him as long as it was paid, and he always credited it as requested, and in that there has been no dispute, the amounts have always been correct; in fact the mandamus is based as much on the figures furnished by your City Collector, page 6, as on any other thing.

Now the last amount paid which you call attention to and criticise, $3,300, was credited as your City Collector requested (and the County Collector supposed under instructions of your City Attorney for some object or reason of his own) on the tax levy of 1880, for he knew the Attorney stood by the Treasurer and refused to recognize the mandamus or allow him to pay on the years 1878 and 1879. Your Attorney must have known of the payment, for he was particular to have it stipulated on page 31 of the rehearing, that it was so received and credited. Had he or the City Treasurer wished it, credited on the mandamus it would have been so credited without any order from the court. If you wish to criticise it please aim your shot in another direction.

This dispute between your Collector and Treasurer must be settled by your Council and Attorney, and if they allow Mr. Collector to send more money to the County my advise is, take it and give Plainfield the proper credit for it.

And now as to this great hubbub in your city about this mandamus, as you know, it was for a large balance on the years 1877, 1878 and 1879, after proceedings had been commenced and before the mandamus was reached, your City Collector settled 1877 in full (I presume with the knowledge of at least some of your officials) and by that time the tax of 1880 was in arrears, for which amount there is now an application for a mandamus. It seems to me there was no other action the board could have taken, and from the stand taken by your officials and the arguments they use, the whole County will demand, when this year's taxes are due, if not promptly paid, to immediately take steps to collect, that the end may the sooner be reached.

I dislike contention and law between those who should be friends as they have identical interest, but when it is forced upon us as official, we can have but one duty, those who won't pay a claim they will pay when and how they please, and even refuse to pay interest, must not complain if they find themselves in the hands of the courts of justice.

Some time since I saw the opinion of Isaac Scudder to your council, I then thought the matter was about settled, but different, if not better and wiser, counsel prevailed, and your City and County have been rolling up a bill of expense for the people to pay. I don't know how much your city has paid in law, but they have paid in interest to the County $172.55 on the mandamus, and the money laying in the bank, the County has been compelled to expend in the case thus far over $300, which does not include the amount paid the Attorney General, whose retention was rendered necessary by your city. Of these amounts Plainfield must pay about one-sixth, and if the forty odd voters who passed a resolution to contest the matter to the highest court have their way it will cost much more.

And all to compel a prosperous unbonded city (whose taxes are as promptly paid as any in the country, judging from a communication your Mayor sent to the Council) to pay their just dues to the State, and also to contribute their just quota towards the support of a county government in which they are as much interested as any of their sister cities or townships.

Please excuse the length of this communication. When I commenced I intended only to indorse your article as to your City Treasurer, and give the reasons why the $3,300 was credited on tax of 1880 instead of on the mandamus, but since I began, I thought a little defence of your County Board was needed in your City, where so much is being said against them.

Very Respectfully,
C. W. L. MARTINE.

DEMOCRATIC REGRET.

The Tammany Society of New York, as is their custom, made elaborate preparations for the celebration of the Fourth. An unusually extensive programme was prepared, including music, a "Long talk" by the Hon. John Kelly and "Short talks" by Sachems and braves. But the terrible calamity that had fallen upon the Nation by the attempted assassination of its President, was so sincerely sympathised with in spite of political differences of opinion, that Mr. Kelly and other leading members of the organization urged that the order of exercises be set aside for the day. The Hall never held a larger assemblage of ladies and gentlemen than upon the occasion, and as Mr. Kelly stepped to the front of the platform there were terrific cheers. When he waved his hand for silence he said: Ladies and Gentlemen: The arrangements that are usually made previous to the Fourth of July have been carefully looked after this year with the full hope and expectation that we would here celebrate the day so important in our country's history as the Fourth of July. But a sad catastrophe has fallen upon the Nation. The President of the United States was shot on last Saturday morning, and it is supposed now at this present moment that the wounds will result fatally. In view of this terrible occurrence it has been deemed best out of respect to the chief magistrate of this country to dispense with the usual exercises of the day. [Great applause.] I am directed by my associates to say to you that we will have read to you some resolutions drawn hastily. It was unfortunate that we had not more time to prepare them, so that we might give greater emphasis to our feelings. Yesterday we were under the impression that the President would survive his injuries. To-day the press of the City tells us that he may die. Let us hope that such will not be the case. Let us offer up a fervent prayer to the Father of all, that President Garfield's life may be spared. [Renewed applause.]

Mr. Kelly then announced that after the reading of a set of resolutions, the Declaration of Independence would be read by Brother Monell, and a dirge—"Columbia's Lamentation"—sung by the Tammany Glee Club. An adjournment would then be had. This met with the hearty approval of all in attendance. Register Augustus T. Docharty read the resolutions as follows:

Whereas, James A Garfield, the President of the United States, was shot in the depot in the city of Washington, and is supposed to have been mortally wounded by an assassin by the name of Charles J. Guiteau, a citizen of the State of Illinois. President Garfield was about to take the train to pay a visit to his wife and children, who were sojourning at Long Branch, in the State of New Jersey, and after having visited them intended to attend the commencement exercises at Williams College, in Williamstown, Mass. He was unconscious of any attempt upon his life, and was full of hope and expectation of joining the friends of his college days and Alma Mater.

Whereas, It is apparent that the assassin had for weeks conceived the terrible crime and had laid his plans secretly, and that he had confided to no one the least intimation of his wicked and horrible purpose. While the President was leaning upon the arm of the Secretary of State, James G. Blaine, the assassin selected the spot and carefully awaited the opportunity to do his deadly work.

Whereas, This is the second murderous assault that has been made since the organization of our Government upon the lives of its chief magistrates, the first being successful, and the second from present appearances we have reason to believe will also prove fatal. Let us hope and pray that God in his mercy will allay our fears and apprehensions by restoring the President of the United States to health, sparing his life to his family and his services to the people of our beloved country; therefore be it

Resolved, That we sympathise with the family of President James A. Garfield, in this hour of their affliction, and with the whole people in their sorrow for this terrible event which has fallen upon the United States in its hour of peace and prosperity.

Resolved, That it becomes our duty to support and sustain the administration in their efforts to allay public excitement and to render them all the aid that it is possible for us to give them in the discharge of their duty to the whole country.

Resolved, That it is the imperative duty of the Government to commence at once a rigid investigation for the purpose of ascertaining if Charles J. Guiteau was acting in conjunction with any other parties to a conspiracy in this terrible crime, so that if it should appear that there are other parties to the crime that they be immediately arrested and have meted out to them the full punishment of the law.

The resolutions were applauded, and were adopted by a rising vote. The Declaration of Independence was then read, and the glee club sang the dirge. Then Mr. John W. Townsend offered the following, which was adopted:

Resolved, That the Tammany Society unites with the country in sentiments of condolence with the family of the President of the United States in their great affliction.

Resolved, That the Scribe of the Tammany Society be directed to telegraph this expression of our opinion at once to the President.

All the resolutions read were telegraphed to the White House, upon the motion of Police Commissioner Sidney P. Nichols. A motion to adjourn was then carried.

How suggestive is the fact that the "Tammanyites," whom the Republican stump speakers are so fond of jeering at as the lower strata of the "low Democracy," should be the first and thus far the only political body to meet together publicly and adopt resolutions so appropriate and sincere as the above. Also what an example of patriotism is presented by the universal conduct of the Democratic Senators at Washington in upholding a Republican administration in its righteous actions for the Country's good, when compared with the questionable deeds of a Conkling and a platt.

WESTFIELD WISPS.

It is proposed to hold a Grand Professional Athletic entertainment here at an early date. Particulars later.

Mr. R. G. Lansing of this place had a large consignment of glass balls previous to the 4th. "Number broke unknown."

"War in the air" is the report relative to the lease of the hall building by the Lyceum from its owner Mr. R. T. Taylor.

A portion of the grass in the Park has been cut, the balance should be as early as possible, as it improves the appearance of our depot approach greatly.

The number of commutation tickets sold at this station for the month of July exceeded in number any monthly sale since the depot was established.

The circulation of corrected time tables by mine host Moffett, of the Westfield hotel, and our unrivalled and artistic painter, Jerome Neil, is duly appreciated by our citizens.

Both Messrs. Darsh (our unrivalled Bake-ist) and Decker (our capable P. M.) raised handsome flag poles on top of their buildings on Broad street in time to float the glorious banner on the 4th.

Mr. Lewis C. Thies of this place has just added to his other agencies of Agricultural machinery the agency for the "New Victor Feed Cutter" and the "Champion Vegetable Cutter."

Mr. John Kane, heretofore referred to as the champion well driver of this vicinity, has scored another victory by securing water on the Russel place at Fanwood, after drilling to a depth of 118 feet.

The school meeting called for the evening of the 1st, to elect a trustee in place of Mr. Robt. R. Sinclair, whose term then expired, resulted as all anticipated in the unanimous re-election of the popular official.

We are in receipt of two bottles of wine from the vineyard of Mr. J. J. Willis. The quality is excellent and would be hard to excell either for body or purity. Mr. Willis deserves great credit for his intelligent manufacture.

Mr. Wm. Bennett, son of our well-known citizen Capt. Bennett, met with a serious accident on Saturday last at the works of the Domestic Sewing Machine Co. at Newark. While at work on a moulding machine his hand was caught and two fingers almost completely severed.

Our celebrated natural-ist, Mr. Augustus K. Gale, of Gale's Pharmacy, had on exhibition during the earlier part of the week a genuine curiosity in the shape of a Bug. His interest in nature is a question of pleasure to our citizens as all visitors to his exhibitions in this line will testify to.

Our Photographic visitor, like the comet, still continues with us and intends to prolong his stay through the week. His reputation (not the comet's) for satisfactory work has already added to his golden harvest. Many of our athletes of the 4th availed themselves of the opportunity of securing their pictures in costume.

The excitement attendant upon the receipt of the news here of President Garfield's assassination was intense. The first bulletin received at the depot at 10:28 a. m. was immediately posted on the CONSTITUTIONALIST Bulletin at the Post Office, and frequent dispatches from that hour until 11 p. m. Crowds surrounded the Bulletin until a late hour. Thanks are due to Messrs. Abbott and Brennan for courtesies extended to our representative.

The closing exercises or Commencement of the Westfield Public School, occurred on Thursday afternoon, June 30th, 1881. The exercises were held in the School hall, which was very prettily decorated, festoons of flags, flowers, ferns, &c., all adding to its appearance. Among those who favored those present with pleasant addresses were the Revs. Bronson, Neall, Gill, Hoagland and Drumm, of this place. Mr. R. R. Sinclair closed the addresses with a few appropriate remarks, and called upon those of the pupils who had passed the County Superintendent's examination to come forward and receive their testimonials. It is hardly necessary to say that the hall was packed, as all occasions of this nature receive their due appreciation from our citizens. The recitations of the pupils were excellent and evinced careful study and training. The songs sung were well rendered. The following recitations deserve especial mention: Miss Amerman, John Burhans, Essie Hickok. The reading of Louise Gilby also deserves praise. To finish an almost perfect whole the pupils of the advanced class presented their justly popular Principal, Prof. W. H. Elston with a very handsome bronze lamp and card receiver. Prof. Elston has long since won the esteem of our citizens and is certainly both respected and loved by his pupils. Under his management, out of a total number of 167 pupils who passed the County Superintendent's examination Westfield had to her credit 44. Certainly a very creditable showing when it is understood that this covers 10 School Districts.

The benefit tendered to Prof. A. Edgar Wilcox by the members of the Westfield Minstrel Troupe, took place at the Hotel Hall on Thursday evening of last week, and proved a success both in point of attendance and consequently financial results. The audience was both select and appreciative, and testified by their continuous applause to the enjoyment of the fine programme presented. Where all acquitted themselves so well it is hardly necessary to single out some for approval, but certainly the following is true: King of Negro delineators (challenges the world) Lafayette Moffett; Prince de Banjo, Wm. Applegate; (Florence Nightingale warbler) Wm. Trane; (Unparalleled Female artist) John Logan; (Unrivalled Character artist) Benj. Davis and Edward Edgar; Kingpin, C. Wilcox. Great credit should be accorded Mr. Wm. Applegate as well for his arrangement of the programme as for his efficient stage management. In connection with this entertainment, which was entirely unsolicited and arranged without the knowledge of the beneficiary, there are several matters that we deem worthy of public attention. A letter signed by every one of the troupe was forwarded to Mr. Wilcox requesting his acceptance of the benefit, and his acceptance of it duly received. Application was then made to the Chairman of the Executive Committee of the Lyceum for the use of Lyceum Hall on the same night that the application was made. The Executive Committee or Trustees of the Lyceum met and declined (through their Chairman we believe) either to give its use towards this worthy cause or to rent it for the purpose. This refusal having been made public it aroused such indignant public protest that under the advice of several gentlemen a further application was made by a letter signed by the different members of the troupe. This was considered by said Committee or Trustees a week from the first application and the following reply was received:

WESTFIELD, June 28th, 1881.

MR. WM. APPLEGATE AND OTHERS:—

GENTLEMEN: At a meeting of the Board of Trustees of the Lyceum, held this evening, your application for the use of the Hall for the evening of June 30th, was presented and duly considered. The Hall, as you are aware, is used regularly by the Congregational Church Society, and their Trustees object to the Hall being used for Minstrel performance, which we are informed yours is to be, and out of consideration for their objections which we feel are reasonable, we do not feel justified in acceding to your request for the use of the Hall.

Respectfully Yours,
GEO. W. VAN BOSKERCK,
Secretary pro tem.

We deeply regret that such action was taken by these gentlemen and trust that the many were influenced by the few. It is all the more singular and hard of explanation from the fact that previous to the last election the hall was given free to this same troupe by the Lyceum or Lyceum Committee without charge. The above letter throws the benefit (if such it proves) of this action upon the Congregationalist Society, but as they are only sub-tenants of the Lyceum, and only hire the hall for certain days for Church purposes, it seems hardly possible that without the consent of the Lyceum they could bar the use of the best hall in town to any respectable entertainment. The fact that this is true is certainly proved by the rental or gift of this hall to the same troupe previously, and to its occupancy during the term of the Congregationalist Society by the "Guy Family," whose entertainment was certainly no less subject to objection including a Clog Dance. As several members of the Lyceum are also Trustees of the church, perhaps they can explain to us this singular action. As for said Trustees their action in a case of this nature is hardly christian-like.

Despite the fact that all preparations were held in obeyance on account of the hourly expectancy of the death of the President and only completed on the morning of the 4th, after the receipt of the cheering news at that time of his improved condition, the 4th at Westfield was well and truly celebrated. At precisely 12 o'clock, midnight, the old historic cannon, a relict of the revolution, opened the day with its thunder and its continued salutes soon brought our drowsy citizens to the knowledge that our Nation's Anniversary was at hand. Young America was soon awake, and the fire cracker, torpedo, pistol and gun all added to the customary manner of celebration. At 9:30 a. m. the previously noted Athletic contests of the Westfield and Unknown Athletic Clubs commenced. The 100 yard dash (Amateur) was won by Mr. S. S. Mapes, Jr., in the good time of 11¼ seconds; 100 yard (Professional) by W. H. Marsh of Plainfield, time 11 seconds; M. DeCourcey second. 120 yard hurdle (Amateur), hurdles 2 ft. 6 in., by L. V. Clark, Jr., time given 19 seconds; his competitor Ingram fell at the last hurdle, both jumping it together. Before this mishap it looked like a dead heat. 120 yard hurdle, hurdles 3 ft. 6 in., (Professional) won by W. H. Marsh, Frank Webster second. 220 yard run, (Amateur) won by Augustus Alpers, time 29 seconds. 440 yard run, (Professional) won by W. H. Marsh; L. Harris second. 440 yard run, (Amateur) won by C. H. Day, (walk over) time 1 minute, 5 seconds. 1 mile walk (Amateur) won by J. Allen Worth, time 13 min., ½ sec. Wheelbarrow race, blindfolded, (Professional) won by Mayor Gaines, 6¼ inches; George Burrill 7¼ inches, second. This latter game excited a great deal of merriment, three out of the seven contestants upon time being called being farther from the stake than at the start. A tug of war for a purse of $5 followed, between two local teams, but could hardly be christened a tug, as one team pulled the other over the line in about 30 seconds, and apparently without effort. This ended the programme for the day. The attendance was large, including many visitors from adjacent villages and cities. In the Amateur games very handsome silver medals were given to each winner. The subscribers to the Professional contests were as follows: Messrs. W. H. Moore, Chas. E. Vail, Frederick Decker, Wm. Gale, L. M. Whitaker, Dr. C. E. Aguirre, A. W. Moffett, B. H. Woodruff, John L. Roulston, James Moffett, D. W. Lucas, E. D. Chamberlain, John Darsh, S. S. Mapes, A. A. Drake and Robert Fairburn. To these citizens the thanks of our citizens are due for this portion of the entertainment. Altogether the day's celebration proved a very enjoyable one. The Westfield Athletic Club deserves credit for their interesting contests, and their officers and members alike for their endeavors to make everything pleasant and enjoyable. The Game Committee of this Club was as follows: Messrs. A. L. Alpers, C. P. Wilcox and Chas. H. Day. The officers of the Athletic meeting were as follows: Clerk of Course, Otis G. Webb; Ass't. Chas. MacQuoid; Starter, J. M. C. Marsh; Judge of Walking, C. P. Wilcox; Scorer, G. Leveridge; Timekeers, Chamberlain and ————; Judges, E. D. Chamberlain, Frank Earll; Referee, John Burhans.

WHAT THEY LEAD TO.

Kidney troubles and liver troubles, unless checked in time by Dr. David Kennedy's "Favorite Remedy," will end in constipation, piles, rheumatism and gravel. The latter are ailments of very serious character. "Favorite Remedy" acts upon the disordered kidneys and liver with quickness and certainty. It is Nature's own device for this purpose. HAY FEVER.

MESSRS. Ely Bros., Druggists, Owego, N. Y.—I have been afflicted for twenty years, during the months of August and September, with Hay Fever, and have tried various remedies for its relief without success. I was induced to try your Cream Balm; have used it with favorable results, and can confidently recommend it to all similarly afflicted. ROBERT W. TOWNLEY, (ex-Mayor) Elizabeth, N. J. jy1w2

MESSRS. WHITE & BURDICK, Druggists, Ithaca, N. Y.—I recommend to those suffering (as I have been) with Hay Fever, Ely's Cream Balm. I have tried nearly all the remedies I could find, and give this a decided preference over them all. It has given me immediate relief. C. T. STEPHENS, Hardware Merchant, Ithaca, N. Y. Sept. 6, 1880. Price 50 cents.

A HEALTHY STATE.

People are constantly changing their homes from East to West and from North to South or vice versa, in search of a healthy State. If they would learn to be contented and to use the celebrated Kidney-Wort when sick they would be much better off. The whole system can be kept in a healthy state by this simple but effectual remedy. See large adv.

Carter's Little Liver Pills will positively cure sick headache and prevent its return. This is not talk, but truth. One pill a dose. To be had of all druggists. See advertisement. 1jyw

THE COST OF IT.

If the total cost of sickness simply in its business aspects were reckoned up, it would be found to be great enough in five years to pay the national debt. The merchant has a headache from a fit of indigestion, and misses a good bargain. The lawyer does the same with a case. To say nothing about doctors' fees, etc. It don't pay to be even a little sick. Dr. David Kennedy's "Favorite Remedy" is a friend to the business man, for it clears his brain. One Dollar a bottle. Rondout, N. Y. jy1w2

THE hot weather has a very cooling effect upon the ice man.

WONDERFUL POWER.

When a medicine performs such cures as Kidney-Wort is constantly doing, it may truly be said to have wonderful power. A carpenter in Montgomery, Vt., had suffered for eight years from the worst of kidney diseases, and had been wholly incapacitated for work. He says: "One box made a new man of me, and I sincerely believe it will restore to health all that are similarly afflicted." It is now sold in both liquid and dry form.—Roxbury News.

HOW TO SECURE HEALTH.

It seems strange that anyone will suffer from the many derangements brought on by an impure condition of the blood, when SCOVILL'S SARSAPARILLA AND STILLINGIA, or BLOOD AND LIVER SYRUP will restore perfect health to the physical organization. It is indeed a strengthening syrup, pleasant to take, and has proven itself to be the BEST BLOOD PURIFIER ever discovered, effectually curing Scrofula, Syphilitic disorders, Weakness of the Kidneys, Erysipelas, Malaria; all Nervous disorders and Debility, Bilious complaints and all Diseases indicating an impure Condition of the Blood, Liver, Kidneys, Stomach, skin, etc. It corrects indigestion. A single bottle will prove to you its merits as a health renewer, for it ACTS LIKE A CHARM, especially when the complaint is of an exhaustive nature, having a tendency to lessen the natural vigor of the brain and nervous system.

BAKER'S PAIN PANACEA cures pain in Man and Beast. For use externally and internally.

DR. ROGERS' VEGETABLE WORM SYRUP instantly destroys worms and removes the Secretions which cause them.

GOVERNMENT officers are finding much fault about the large number of mutilated and defaced coins that are continually coming under their observation, and the public generally is warned against receiving coins made light in this manner. This punching and "sweating" of coins is pursued by some swindlers as a business, and to insure themselves against loss, the people should reject all coins thus mutilated.

"My case is just here," said a citizen to a lawyer: "the plaintiff will swear that I bit him. I will swear that I did not. Now, what can you lawyers make out of that if we go to trial?" "A hundred dollars, easy," was the reply.

Statistics often prove unwelcome facts and none more so than that twenty per cent. of the people of this State die from consumption and kindred diseases. The great question how to reduce this terrible mortality has engaged the science of our most eminent scholars and physicians. From the testimonials of thousands who have used ARTHUR'S ELIXIR OF SULPHUR, nothing in the way of medicine has ever done so much toward this end. In all afflictions of the throat and lungs its remedial effect is simply wonderful. Once introduced into every household it would banish the terror of this disease from the land. Sold by A. Kilbourn, Druggist.

A FIENDISH JOKE.

"I think," said a well known orchestral leader, "the best joke ever played in this town was on an ambitious amateur pianist when Gottschalk was here. The amateur's father was the owner of a large hall, and he offered the use of it to Gottschalk for his benefit. There was to be a piece for eight pianos, and the amateur was to play one of the instruments. I was leader. I thought Gottschalk would have a fit when I told him that the amateur couldn't play three straight notes of the piece."

"He is sure to throw us all out," said I, "and ruin the performance."

"Gottschalk swore like a major, but 'twas no good. The bills were out, and he couldn't go back on his programme, even if the gift of the hall for the night was no consideration to him. At last I hit on an idea that fixed the whole business. The amateur came down to rehearsal, and we praised him up until he thought he was to be the star of the night. As soon as he left we took the hammers out of his piano and made it dumb as an oyster. I guessed he would never know the difference with several pianos going at once."

The tuneful convention laughed.

"And just as I thought," said the leader, hammering on the table with his glass, "that amateur or his friends never discovered the trick."

"No?"

"No, sir; he just sailed in and pounded on that piano as if it was the worst enemy he ever had. He was bound to show off among so many good pianists, and hammered on his keyboard until the perspiration nearly blinded him. Now and then I looked at him approvingly to give him fresh courage, and every time that I did he gave the piano a lick that nearly made matchwood of it. His friends all around threw bouquets at him till he looked like a wedding arch, and when 'twas all over his fond parent fell on his neck in the green room and slipped a check for $250 into his hand. The old man didn't know whether he was standing on his head or his heels, he was so tickled."

"Didn't he do fine," said he to me, "among so many first-class professionals, too?"

"I never heard an amateur do so well in public," said I, "and what's more I meant it, eh? Don't you think I was right?"—San Francisco Chronicle.

SHE WAS MISSED.

She was getting dinner when her husband came in and announced the death of a neighbor.

"Dead!" she exclaimed, holding her potato-masher suspended in the air. "Ah, how true it is that in the midst of life we are in death. Put on some of the tomato pickles, Tildy; they're spilin' an' we may as well eat 'em up, and when you cut the bread, cut one slice around, that's enough; if it ain't you can get some more afterwards."

"I hope that funeral will be at the church. There was Simmons' wife's funeral. They would have it in the house, an' it was so crowded. I thought my dress would be spoiled. Are going to have it in the house, eh? I'll bet it was one of her mother's notions. She's always as full of notions as an egg is full of meat.

"Make a good lot of gravy, Tilda, they don't eat so much butter when there's lots of gravy, and I want to fill that three gallon crock this week."

"Well, I shall miss her. She was what I call a good neighbor. I borrowed a receipt book there just a little while ago. There won't be no hurry about carrying it back yet awhile. Likely they'll be so overcome they won't care for anything but common vittles. I wonder if them girls will wear black! Well, the Lord gave and the Lord taketh away."

"Come, set right down; dinner is all ready. Have they got anyone to help 'em over there? I guess I'll run over after dinner. How funny it'll seem not to see her around! I shall miss her dreadfully. Sam'll get married again, of course. One of them Stockman girls would make him a good wife. They're all good housekeepers and used to children. Funeral to-morrow, hey? Well, I hope it'll be cool, I want to wear my black sack. There will be lots from the city here."

"Let the fire go down when the dish-water gets hot; hain't got to cook nothing more, there's apple-sass for tea."

"So she's dead! Dear me, dear me! How I shall miss her!"

KEEPING THE PATIENT QUIET.

"He seems to be very much worse to-day," said the doctor, as he contemplated the patient. "Did you keep him perfectly quiet, as I directed, nurse?"

"Sakes a massy! of course I did," replied the nurse. "Goodness gracious! he hasn't moved all night."

"Anything going on in the house to disturb him?"

"My sakes, of course not. They had a little dancing party in the parlor, and a fight upstairs, and some burglars got into the basement, and the servant girl set fire to her bed, and the fat butcher fell down the second flight, and the man in the next room licked his wife, and the water pipe busted on the floor below, and the gentleman in the back parlor gave a little supper, and there was some music in the third story, and the cats out on the back fence, and there was a baby born in the second story front, and the little girl up the third pair died last night, but he never moved. Bless your heart, he was the quietest man you ever saw."

"Quite right; quite right. Did you give him the pills?"

"My gracious! I forgot the pills, but I gave him all the powders, eight seidlitz powders, four Dover powders, and all the quinine powders and the mixtures, three of 'em, and all but the pills."

"Just so. Did you change the bandages on his head?"

"It wasn't any use. You never saw anything like him. I put four pillows on his head and he kept as still as mice after that."

"I see. Was he delirious during the night?"

"Oh! wasn't he! but he hasn't hollered much for two hours. He's been pretty quiet since he fell out of bed. Before that he was restless."

"Of course, naturally. Any of his friends been in to see him?"

"There were ten or a dozen here all night, playing cards and enjoying themselves, but he paid no attention to them."

"I suppose not. Hasn't asked for anything, has he?"

"Not for a long time. He is doing well, isn't he, doctor?"

"Yes, yes, as well as could be expected. As near as I can judge he has been dead about twelve hours. You needn't continue the medicine. Just keep him quiet and don't let anybody talk to him, what he wants now is rest."

MR. Wm. WESTFALL,

Of Dutchess Co., N. Y., 60 YEARS of AGE, Suffered Continually for Many Years from STONE in the BLADDER.

Great age and painful disease are a sad combination. Yet Mr. William Westfall, formerly of [illegible] City, Dutchess Co., N. Y., now of Washington Hollow, in the same county, came to the office of Dr. David Kennedy, the eminent Physician and Surgeon, of Rondout, N. Y., some time since, in a condition to excite the sympathy of the most cold-hearted and hard-hearted person in the world. We say he came—he was, rather, carried to the Doctor's office, for he was totally helpless, and bore the weight of 60 years beside. He had suffered long from Retention of Urine, and had all the symptoms of an aggravated case of calculus formations in the bladder. The usual instrumental examination revealed the presence in the bladder of a urinary calculus of uncommon size. Dr. Kennedy frankly told Mr. Westfall that, owing to his age and debility, an operation was out of the question, but that he could, by the prescription of "Kennedy's Favorite Remedy," together with local treatment, make him comfortable and leave him to live out all his days. The outcome of this was that the patient enjoys good health to this day.

The Reason Why

Dr. Kennedy's "Favorite Remedy" is being extensively used by our people are as follows: It is a combination of vegetable alteratives. It is pleasant to the taste; adapted to both sexes and all ages, is effective in affording immediate relief in all cases of Kidney troubles, Liver Complaints, Constipation of the Bowels, and derangements peculiar to women. At the same time purifies the blood, thus giving tone and strength to the system debilitated by disease or age. "Dr. Kennedy's Favorite Remedy" for sale by all druggists. jy7w4

TUBULAR HOT-BLAST NON-EXPLOSIVE

Oil or Gas Stoves!

THE REASONS WHY THE TUBULAR HOT-BLAST OIL OR GAS STOVE IS SUPERIOR TO ALL OTHERS:

Its appearance is more like a stove than anything that has yet been offered.

It requires no wire gauze or water tank to make it safe.

A continual current of air passes to the burners over the Oil Pot, preventing the oil from getting warmer than the atmosphere in which it is burning. The bake oven is not in the way of the kettle or boiler.

Baking, roasting, and boiling can all be done at once, and in less time than with any other oil stove.

The No. 3 or Three-Burner Stove will make 12 inches of pure white flame at a cost of 1½ cts. per hour. The reservoir holds four quarts of oil, sufficient to burn for twelve hours.

The No. 4 or 4-Burner Stove will make 16 inches of white flame at a cost of 2 cents per hour. The reservoir holds 5 quarts of oil sufficient to burn for twelve hours.

The No. 3 Stove will consume between three and four cents worth of gas per hour.

The No. 4 will consume between four and five cents worth of gas per hour.

No. 4, with four 4 inch burners, including oven, $15

M. M. B. Goodwin, an editor in Chardon, Ohio, says, he was not expected to live, being bloated beyond belief, but Kidney-Wort cured him.

THE NEW BUSINESS

OF THE

EQUITABLE

Life Assurance Society of the U. S.

FOR THE YEAR 1880, WAS OVER

Thirty-Five Millions of Dollars,

The Largest Business Done by any Company in the World.

REASONS FOR THIS RESULT.

The Equitable is the strongest Company in the United States.

Its policies are, by their own express terms, made incontestable after three years. [For precise terms see form of policy contract.]

ALL such incontestable policies are paid immediately after receipt of satisfactory proof of the death of the Insured, and without even the customary delay of sixty or ninety days.

EACH ordinary policy provides for a definite surrender-value in paid-up assurance, in case the policy is forfeited after three years from its date and is surrendered within a reasonable time thereafter.

BY THE TONTINE SAVINGS FUND plan of assurance, returns in policy-holders, after the expiration of what is called the Tontine period, are greater than are obtainable in any other system. Actual settlements of Tontine policies have been made in which policy-holders have withdrawn amounts varying from eighty to one hundred and twenty per cent. of premiums paid, besides enjoying a life insurance indemnity during the period. No other company can show such results.

THE TONTINE plan is the only one offered by which a person may withdraw from his insurance contract at specified periods, receiving the entire reserve and surplus accumulations in cash.

ALL the ordinary forms of insurance with annual dividends of profits, both cash and reversionary, are issued by this Society.

ASSETS, -	$41,108,602.
SURPLUS, -	$9,228,294.

Its business for the last ten years (represented by the new policies issued) has been larger than that of any other Company.

POETRY.

AMBITION'S REWARD.

A massy lump of brass and bronze,
  Molded by ponderous blow on blow
For Nero or Vespasian's son,
  In the ages dim and long ago.

A cruel mouth, a swinish chin,
  A wolfish eye almost erased,
But half the date, a victory,
  Two words, and those almost defaced.

Where is the golden palace now,
  That on the Palatine arose?
Where are the statue-guarded doors?
  Where are the temple porticoes?

For disks of metal shaped like this,
  Swords have been drawn and Lethe crossed;
For this, in greedy hope, men's souls
  Have been by passion's tempest tossed.

This is ambition's rich reward:
  This is a buried Cæsar's fame—
Upon a lump of rusty bronze
  For two-thirds of a doubtful name.

MISCELLANEOUS READING.

AN INVESTMENT.

"Now we are not only out of debt, but we have got one thousand dollars ahead, and the question is, how we are going to invest it?"

Hiram Graham, sitting just outside of the open door to enjoy the grateful coolness of the summer evening, threw aside his paper as he spoke, and awaited his wife's reply. His wife, busy over her sewing, did not reply immediately.

"Come," he said, "let me have your opinion. I'll bet you've made up your mind who to do with it long ago. You know the saying, 'A man to save money and a woman to spend it;'" and he laughed good-naturedly.

Yes, Mrs. Graham had made up her mind long ago. The thought of a time when they should be clear of debt, and some of their surplus earnings could be expended for home comforts, had helped her to make over and repair many an old garment that she was about to throw away in despair; it had encouraged her to contend with numberless inconveniences. But now the time had really come, she felt a rather strange reluctance about revealing her thoughts. She was oppressed with fear that her long-cherished plans might be dashed to the earth. However, she commenced bravely enough:—

"I have thought we could paint the house some pretty color, such as silver-grey, and have shutters put up at the windows the right shade of green to harmonize with the color of the house, the same as the green leaves of the popular harmonize with the soft gray of its trunk, and—"

"Why, Jennie," exclaimed Mr. Graham, "there's a good coat of paint on the house now; and there is no color so durable as red lead in my estimation."

"And," continued his wife, "I would have the yard closed in with a neat picket fence—"

"I don't see any use in tearing down that fence. The rails are as good and sound as they were twenty years ago."

"Please don't interrupt me, Hiram. I would repaper the rooms, buy a new in*grain carpet for the parlor, and muslin* curtains for the windows."

"What is the sense of having curtains if you have shutters? Besides, these paper curtains answer every purpose, as far as I can see. The paper on the walls is perfectly whole. It is true that you have patched it considerably, but that don't show much. And as for the carpet—why, haven't you got a new rag carpet in the room now?"

"Yes; but that would be for the sitting room. And I would have a bay window made in the south side of the sitting room for plants."

Mr. Graham laughed outright at this. "Now, Jennie," he said, "I never said anything about it, but I always thought it was kind of foolish to spend so much money and time as you do fussing with flowers outdoors; but when you come to make flower beds of—that beats me!"

"Hiram," said Mrs. Graham, "you asked me for my opinion; now please don't interrupt me."

"Very well; go ahead."

"I would have a portico built over where you are sitting, and a wood-house and a large, cool pantry, that I need so much, on the back of the kitchen. One part of the wood-house would be finished off, where the cook-stove could stand in warm weather. It would be so much cooler for us to eat in the kitchen. Besides this, there are many little adornments, such as pictures, etc., that I would add afterward."

"Why!" exclaimed Mr. Graham, "if we were to go into that it would take every cent of the money."

"Well, we earned it to invest in something, didn't we?"

"Yes, but I want to invest my money in something that will bring me in some income."

"It would bring us in the best of all incomes—not in dollars, but, what is better far, in joy and happiness. Life would have a fuller and purer meaning for us both; it would bring a higher and better atmosphere in which to rear our children. Even the humming-bird loves to deck its sweet little nest with pretty mosses and lichens. Ought we not to have as much love for home and its adornings as God's dumb creatures?"

"I have something more important to live for than a humming-bird has," said Mr. Graham, tartly. "I would rather leave something more substantial to my children—such as bonds and well-tilled acres, for instance. I will tell you what I have been thinking of," he said, with an air of one who felt that the expressing of his opinion must necessarily bring conviction of his superior judgment. "You know that I have always wanted that forty-acre lot of Southwell's that joins me on the north. They say he is hard up now, and when he finds out that I can make a large payment down, I believe I can get it mighty reasonable. And when I get that paid for I would have one of the best farms in the country. Now what do you say to that?" he asked, triumphantly.

"It would run us right in debt again," said Mrs. Graham.

"Well; supposing it did. We have swung clear this time easy enough, and can again. You must remember that this land was badly run down when I first got hold of it, but the farm is in good condition now."

"Easy enough!" Mrs. Graham did not repeat the words aloud. Her husband did not know of the little sacrifices and acts of self-denial it had cost her. He never could know it; and therein lies the pathos of many a sacrifice.

The next morning Mrs. Graham was up betimes and busy as usual amidst her household cares, but her heart had lost its lightness. She could think of nothing but the great barn-like house, painted a glaring red, with its large, shutterless windows, like lidless eyes, staring out upon the dusty highway. Inside it was equally barren of grace and beauty; the walls were dingy and unadorned by pictures of any kind; the furniture was guiltless of paint or varnish; with no works of literature worthy of mention beside the weekly paper, the Bible and an almanac. Outside there were pleasant walks and drives, and a flower garden filled with the rarest floral treasures; and then she sighed softly as she thought to herself:

"But love would not have been there, and life would have been worth very little to me without that."

"Jennie! Jennie! Oh, here you are," and Mr. Graham came out through the kitchen door and seated himself upon the edge of a huge log that had been hewn out and did duty for eavesdrop and cistern.

It was not unusual for him to seek her; he always did when he came in and did not find her in the house. It was not a bad habit in the man. His life seemed bound up in her; and although he had the reputation among his neighbors of being "close" in his business transactions, he was kind-hearted and generous, too, in his way. This morning he had something of importance to communicate.

"I didn't tell you last evening," he said, "that I had already had some talk with Southwell about the land. He wouldn't listen to a cent under two thousand dollars then, and I wouldn't offer more than fifteen hundred. He came over to see me this morning, and offered to split the difference. Ain't that a bargain, though? A little better than spending money for paint and paper, Jennie! Oh," rising to go, "I came near forgetting to tell you. Powers is here. He wants to hire out during harvest. I have hands enough, but I suppose the more help I have the better I shall get along, so I told him to go right to work. I don't suppose he has been to breakfast yet, his folks are so sick, so you might send out a bit for him to eat. Try and have the lunch ready at half-past nine; you can blow the horn, and I will send one of the men down for it."

Poor Jennie! It was like the last straw that broke the camel's back. She struggled hard, but the tears would come. Mr. Graham turned back and came instantly to her side when he saw that she was in trouble.

"What is the matter dear?" he asked, compassionately, while his large kind hand glided down her hair with a soft, caressing touch. "If you are not feeling very well I will slip down and get Miranda Powers to help you. I guess I had better anyway, hadn't I?"

Mrs. Graham mastered her emotion with an effort. "Oh, no," she said, "There isn't anything the matter."

Mr. Graham hesitated; he was not satisfied with this explanation.

"There," she said, "now do go along to your work, or I shall be foolish enough to cry again!" and she looked very much as if she might.

Hiram Graham had a faint idea as to what the matter was, and was very willing to do as she bid him. He felt considerably annoyed that his wife could not see the advantage of the proposed purchase that would so materially add to their mutual property. And then he began to wonder what she was thinking so silently about, while she stood looking off toward the distant hill. A little jealousy crept in with the thought. The owner of that fine mansion had once been a formidable rival of his. There could have been no reason for her choice but the one she so shyly confessed to him in a soft twilight of a summer evening ten years ago.

When he came to dinner, followed by his troop of hands, he could not help noticing how flushed and tired she looked; but she was as cheerful as ever. The morning cloud had passed, and with the sweet spirit of self-sacrifice that characterized her, had buried here dead hopes and had taken up the burden of life again as best she could.

Hiram Graham was not ignorant of this sacrifice, and it touched him keenly; the thought of it troubled him during the afternoon. He even forgot to estimate what the probably yield per acre would be as the heavy sheaves were shoved off the rear platform and lay so near together on the shorn ground. He could not deny that his wife had worked as hard as he during the years past, and the economy he had practiced had been mostly in her domain. He had began to wish he had treated her wishes a little more respectfully. But then he could not help looking over to where that forty acres lay. What a choice piece of land it was! How long he had wanted! And now, when it was almost within his grasp, must he let go? And even were he to yield to Jennie's wishes now, would she not know that he had done so reluctantly, and against his better judgment? And during the afternoon he thought the matter over and over.

"Powers," he called out as the individual was leaving the field at night, "if the folks at home can spare Maranda, let her come up in the morning and help my wife."

"All right; she will be glad to come," was the answer.

* * * * * * *

Harvest was over, and Mrs. Graham spoke of discharging the girl.

"You had better keep her to help you," advised her husband.

"No," said Mrs. Graham; "when there is none but my own family, I can do the work easy enough alone. I believe I like work," she added, smiling. "At least I am happiest when I am busy."

"How long has it been since you have been home to your father's on a visit?" he asked, abruptly.

"Five years ago last June, when sister Ellen was married."

How prompt was the answer! Perhaps she had counted the time.

"How would you like to go and see the folks this fall?"

What a glad light came into her face, and then faded, as she said hesitatingly:—

"How can I go?"

"Never mind about that. You have earned a play-day, and none of my transactions shall hinder you from taking one. You had better take the children with you; the folks will want to see them. We will go to town to-morrow, and you can get what things you need, and Miranda can stay and help you get ready. You want to get off as soon as you can, for you will like to make a good long visit while you are about it.

He appeared anxious to hasten her departure, but Mrs. Graham was too happy at the thought of seeing the home of her childhood again to notice it at the time.

"But what will you do without us if we make too long a stay?"

"Don't mind me. I can keep old bachelor's hall, he added," laughing.

Two week after, Mrs. Graham had gone, and Hiram Graham had the house all to himself.

After the laps of five weeks he went to the station to meet his wife and children. They had enjoyed the most delightful visit, and all were well and happy, and as they drove homeward there was much to be told; and many inquiries to be made. As they neared the house, Mrs. Graham looked suddenly forward, while her husband watched her face and rubbed his hands together in quiet glee. What was the soft lustrous gray gleaming out from among the green leaves? Was she dreaming? No; it was the house with its green shutters and portico.

"Why, Hiram Graham, what have you been doing?" She looked again. "And a picket fence! And a most charming little gate! And a graveled walk!" and then she couldn't keep the glad tears from coming.

"Come, Jennie," said Mr. Graham, teasingly, although his eyes moistened with sympathetic happiness, "don't feel so glad about it. I may have worse things yet to show you. There, how does that suit?" he asked, after they had entered the house, pointing to the bay window. "I didn't understand such things, so I got a workman who did, you see it is all complete, ready for the plants. And there," throwing open the door, "is the wood-house, and there is a pantry that can't be beat anywhere. And here is something you didn't mention." he continued, approaching a neat sink in the kitchen, and laying hold of the handel of a cistern pump that stood in one end, up gushed a jet of water which told of a good cistern underneath. "Look through the window and you will see a covered drain that carries away all the waste water. You see I didn't do anything with these things," he said, after they had entered the sitting-room, glancing deprecatingly at the dingy colored paper, the delapidated furniture, and threadbare carpet. I would rather trust that to you. And, beside, I found there was so much real enjoyment in it that I would be generous and leave some of the pleasure for you. Here is the money that is left," he added, presenting her with a goodly roll of bills.'

One pleasant day in autumn all was complete, and indeed, as Mrs. Graham said, it did look like "a bit of Eden."

"I do believe," Jennie said, turning toward her husband, with a glad, bright look on her face, "I do believe I am just the happiest woman in the world!"

He drew her gently to him.

"Jenny," he said, "what were you thinking of the morning I found you churning under the locust tree, and looking so intently at that old stone building on the hill?"

Her only answer was a merry laugh.

"Did you ever think so before?"

Although he asked the question hesitatingly, he looked wistfully into her face for an answer.

"No, you dear simple darling, and, I am sure I never shall again;" and, looking up archly, "I didn't then!"

* * * * * *

Six years had passed away, and one bright morning in spring Mr. Graham entered the house. He had changed in these years; the slight roughness which had characterized him previously had worn away; there was increased dignity and manliness in his bearing. His children had also grown to be a constant source of parental pride and delight. So surely do our inner natures conform to the plan of our otward surroundings. He held up the paper he had in his hand.

"There," said he, addressing his wife, "is the deed of the Southwell forty, clear from incumbrance. If it had not been for you," he continued, smiling, "I should have owned it long ago, and the whole Southwell farm, too, perhaps. But I thank God that I didn't," he added, earnestly. "If I had I would have been so close over the work-rack by this time that I never would be able to look at it."

MR. MARTIN'S SCALP.

This was the way it happened: I was playing Indian in the yard. I had a wooden tomahawk and a wooden scalping-knife and a bow'n'arrow. I was dressed up in my father's coat turned inside out, and six chicken feathers in my hair. I was playing I was Great Thunder, the Delaware chief, and was hunting for palefaces in the yard. It was just after supper, and I was having a real nice time. Mr. Traverse came, and he said, "Jimmy, what are you up to now?" So I told him I was Great Thunder, and was on the war path. "Said he, 'Jimmy, I think I saw Mr. Martin on his way here. Do you think you would mind scalping him?' I said I wouldn't scalp him for nothing, for that would be cruelty; but if Mr. Traverse was sure that Mr. Martin was the enemy of the red man, then Great Thunder's heart would ache for revenge, and I would scalp him with pleasure. Mr. Traverse said that Mr. Martin was a notorious enemy and oppressor of the Indians, and he gave me ten cents and said that as soon as Mr. Martin should come, and be sitting comfortably on the piazza, I was to give the war whoop and scalp him.

Well, in a few minutes Mr. Martin came, and he and Mr. Traverse and Susan sat on the piazza, and talked as if they were all pleased to see each other, which was the highest hypocrisy in the world. After a while Martin saw me, and said, "How silly boys are? that that boy makes believe he is an Indian, and he knows he is only a little nuisance." Now this made me mad, and I thought I would give him a good scare, just to teach him not to call names. So I began to steal softly up the piazza steps, and to get around behind him. When I had got about six feet from him, I gave a war whoop and jumped at him. I caught hold of his scalp-lock with one hand and drew my wooden scalping-knife around his head with the other.

I never got such a fright in all my life. The knife was that dull that it wouldn't have cut butter; but, true as I sit here, Mr. Martin's whole scalp came right off in my hand. I thought I had killed him, and I dropped his scalp, and said, "For mercy's sake! I didn't go to do it, and I am awful sorry!" But he just caught up his scalp, stuffed it in his pocket, jammed his hat on his head, and walked off, saying to Susan, "I didn't come here to be insulted by a little wretch that deserves the gallows."

Mr. Traverse and Susan never said a word until he had gone, and then they laughed till the noise brought father out to see what was the matter. When he heard what had happened, instead of laughing he looked very angry, and said that Mr. Martin was a worthy man. "My son you may come up stairs with me."

If you have ever been a boy, you know what happened up stairs, and I needn't say any more on a very painful subject.

I didn't mind it so much, for I thought Mr. Martin would die, and then I would be hung and put in jail; but before she went to bed, Susan came and whispered through the door that it was all right; that Mr. Martin was made that way, so he could be taken apart easy, and that I didn't hurt him. I shall have to stay in my room all day to-day and eat bread and water; and what I say is, that if men are made with scalps that come off any minute a boy just touches them, it isn't fair to blame the boy.—Jimmy Brown in Harper's Young People.

LESSONS IN LOVE MAKING FOR THE GIRLS.

Don't love too many young gentlemen at once.

Don't do any "spooning" in public.

Recollect that a wedding ring on your finger is worth a good many of them in your mind.

Don't fancy that because your lover is fond of you that you can snub him when you feel hateful and capricious, expecting to be able to wheedle him back when you want to, as a hunter does his hound. That sort of thing won't work with a beau worth having, and one of those fine days he'll take a hand at snubbing, and leave you high and dry.

Be reasonable, and use a little common sense. Don't expect a man working for $10 a week to furnish you with a ticket to the sea shore every other week.

Don't be afraid to show the man of your choice that you are fond of him, provided, of course, he is fond of you. Love is a two-handed game, you know, and both have a part to play.

Don't try to bring too many suitors to your feet. They have feet as well as you have, and you may see one pair of feet walking off from you some day that you would be very glad to call back.

Keep your temper if you expect him to keep his. If he doesn't suit you sack him as soon as you decently can. If he does suit don't expect him to put up with your ugly moods.

Deal careful with bashful lovers; lead them carefully to the point (of proposal, of course,) but don't let them suspect what you are at or they might go crazy on the spot.

It is said that lovers' quarrels always end with a kiss. This is partly true, but if you are not careful those little spats you indulge in will some day end in the kisses you covet being given to some other girl.

If it is possible, try to suit your sisters, cousins, aunts, grandfathers, neighbors, *friends and acquaintances when you hap*pen to fall in love. If you can't suit them all, don't worry particularly about it, for the thing has never been done yet.

AN ECCENTRIC MAN.

There is nothing so noble and so touching as a really spontaneous act of generosity, after all.

The other day, a rough, careless-looking stranger was walking up Mission street, when he observed a lot of hoodlums clustered around the gate of a small house, in front of which a poor woman was weeping bitterly, surrounded by her terrified children. A scanty array of household goods on the pavement showed that it was a case of ejectment.

"What are you abusing that woman for?" demanded the "man from below," addressing an ill-favored individual who was carrying out the furniture.

"I ain't abusing her," growled the landlord; "she can't pay her rent, and I'm goin' to bounce the whole outfit, that's just the matter."

"I've a good mind to bounce you," said the stranger indignantly, "what's the amount she owes you?"

"Twenty-two dollars."

"Here, take it out of that," and the angry man took from his wallet and handed over a $100 greenback.

The evictor respectfully turned over a receipt and the change. Forcing an additional "V" on the happy woman, the stranger walked rapidly away.

"'Centric cuss, that," said the house-owner, looking after the philanthropist musingly.

But the philanthropist said nothing until he turned the corner, when he softly murmured to himself, as he put on a little more pedestrian steam:

"It's no use talking—virtue is its own reward. I couldn't have gotten another such a chance to work off that counterfeit in a year."

"I SHALL PULL THROUGH!"

THE BANE.

The government of the United States is strong, perhaps the strongest in the world, yet innovation has weakened it at certain points, which, unless effectually remedied and for the future prevented, promises disaster.

Governments, like individuals, are not danger-proof, but, justly comparable with the human system, they can, through watchful care, be kept robust and useful.

Vigilance is the price of both liberty and health.

The government under which we happily dwell was founded upon the principles of popular sovereignty and rigid official integrity. It came into existence not as a machine to corruptly dispense political patronage, but as a dignified agent of the people, qualified and empowered to impartially protect the rights and promote the welfare of all. The escutcheoned motto of the State of Pennsylvania—"Virtue, Liberty and Independence," well portrays its real character.

Our Republic was fashioned by patriotic hands to live forever, yet, neglected, it may prematurely die. The Commonwealths of Greece and Rome were in their days vigorous and renowned, but, through corruption, they fell into endless ruin.

So may ours.

Political corruption and the tyrant spirit of monopoly are its most virulent enemies.

Of the first we would here briefly speak. The bane of American politics is corruption, rank and disgusting. That cannot be denied, because evidence is boldly apparent.

Corruption shows its brazen head everywhere, in the election of Presidents, Senators and Representatives, and thereafter, as a natural following, through that sewer of iniquity the present spoils system of appointing to office, even down to Custom House Inspectors and Village Postmasters.

"Is he honest, worthy and capable" has almost ceased to be the requisite inquiry. Has he served the party with zeal by disreputably using money, falsehood and intrigue for its success, now constitutes the supposed needed affirmation for official favor, and as a sure consequence, the land swarms with partisan tramps, some revolver armed, disgracefully seeking important offices, and what is equally as bad, if not worse, finding encouragement in the words and actions of prominent leaders whose sole ambition is mercenary political power.

It is time for a change.

A change radical and permanent.

THE LAW OF SUCCESSION

The Constitution left it to Congress to provide by law "for the case of removal, death, resignation or inability both of the President and Vice President, declaring what officer shall then act as President, and such officer shall act accordingly until the disability be removed or a President shall be elected." Agreeably to this provision, Congress in 1792 placed the President pro. tem. of the Senate first in order after the Vice President for succession to the Chief Magistracy, and after him the Speaker of the House of Representatives to hold office until a President can be elected for the unexpired term, for which the Secretary of State shall issue his proclamation. The Senate adjourned without electing a President pro. tem. to succeed Senator Thurman, to whose seat General Garfield was elected, so that the next in the line would be the Speaker of the House. But the House of the Forty-sixth Congress is dead and the House of the Forty-seventh Congress has not yet organized. There is, therefore, now no officer of the Government after Vice President Arthur authorized to fill the Executive Chair. If, for any reason, the Vice President should vacate his place, there would be an interregnum for which the constitution does not provide. In that event the people would recognize the expediency of some high officer assuming charge, and the Secretary of State, being already authorized by law to act in a somewhat similar case, would be looked to. He would doubtless convene the Senate at once, and that body would choose a President pro. tem. to discharge the duties of President of the United States, until the people could elect under the proclamation of the Secretary of State. The law requires that when the first Wednesday in December is more than two months off, Presidential Electors are to be chosen within thirty-four days before that day. This is all the law that exists on the subject, but in the absence of more it is enough to prevent anarchy among a free and order-loving people.—Phila. Press.

GUITEAU'S PUNISHMENT.

Should the President recover, the question of the day will be, What punishment can be inflicted on Guiteau? No special law exists punishing an unsuccessful attempt to kill the President. It cannot be dealt with as treason unless committed in aid or furtherance of some disturbance tantamount to war, for the Constitution expressly limits treason to levying war against the United States, or adhering to their enemies, giving them aid and comfort. The life of the President, or of any other officer of the Government, is regarded by the existing law only as that of a private individual; it receives the same protection, and no more.

The law applicable is, undoubtedly, Section 1,150 of the United States Revised Statutes relating to the District of Columbia, a volume which must be distinguished from the one ordinarily known as the United States Revised Statutes. Its language is: "Every person convicted of manslaughter, or of any assault with intent to kill, shall be sentenced to suffer imprisonment and labor, for the first offense for a period not less than two nor more than eight years, and for the second offense for a period of not less than six nor more than fifteen years."

The tone of the Southern press upon the attempted assassination is most happy, and proves how greatly Garfield is esteemed in the South as well as the North. The Richmond Dispatch gives the key-note to all the papers south of Washington: "We claim him at once as our President, and if—which Heaven forbid—he should die in consequence of his wounds, every Southern house will go in mourning and every Southern heart will bleed, as every Southern tongue claims the martyr as its own."

The heated term has sent many families to the sea shore.

THE WICKED PRINTER.

At the Editorial Banquet given at the Kaaterskill House, on the occasion of the New Jersey Editorial Excursion, Hon. Joseph T. Crowell, of Rahway, was called upon to respond to an ironical toast—"The Wicked Printer." During the gentleman's remarks, he said: I have carefully examined the reports of the Comptroller and State Treasurer, and append hereto a statement of the aggregate expenditures of the State, under the headings of Printing and Advertising the Laws, Legislature and Judiciary, for ten years from 1871 to 1880 inclusive, with the per centage of increase in 1880 over the expenditures of 1871:

Years.	Printing.	Advertising.	Legislature.	Judiciary.
1871	[illegible]	[illegible]	[illegible]	[illegible]
1872	[illegible]	[illegible]	[illegible]	[illegible]
1873	[illegible]	[illegible]	[illegible]	[illegible]
1874	[illegible]	[illegible]	[illegible]	[illegible]
1875	[illegible]	[illegible]	[illegible]	[illegible]
1876	[illegible]	[illegible]	[illegible]	[illegible]
1877	[illegible]	[illegible]	[illegible]	[illegible]
1878	[illegible]	[illegible]	[illegible]	[illegible]
1879	[illegible]	[illegible]	[illegible]	[illegible]
1880	[illegible]	[illegible]	[illegible]	[illegible]
Per cent. increase in 1880 over 1871:	[illegible]	[illegible]	[illegible]	[illegible]

These figures prove that the increase in the cost of advertising and printing has been less than the increase in the population during the period enumerated, and that the expenses under the heads of Legislature and Judiciary have increased enormously in comparison. But if we take the aggregate payments in the ten years, the per centage will be found still more favorable to the printing and advertising. The average for the printing is only $40,749.79 per year, an increase of only 11 per cent. over 1871: the average for advertising is $49,519.55, an increase of only 9½ per cent. The average for Legislative expenses is $63,638.87, an increase of 50 per cent. over 1871. The Judiciary expenses average $69,300.15, an increase of 24 per cent. The entire expenses of the State for ordinary purposes, shows an increase of 25.40 per cent. from 1871. The inequalities in the amounts paid for printing from year to year will be noticed, and occurs from the fact that bills for work in one year are occasionally not paid for until after the Comptroller's report is made up, and the cost is included in the report for the succeeding year. The payments for 1879 are below the average, while those for 1880 are in excess. Take the two years together and the average is about equal to the average for the ten years.

As to the printing, that is a necessity. The Laws and Reports and miscellaneous printing cannot be dispensed with. The Legislature can only regulate the prices and quantity. The publication of the laws in the newspapers may be restricted or abolished. But I hold it to be the duty of the Legislature to enlarge rather than restrict this mode of dissemination. "Ignorance of the law excuseth no man," yet prior to the publication of the laws in the newspapers, not one citizen in ten thousand had the means of obtaining a knowledge of the laws, for six months in every year, and then but a limited number had access to them at all, for the three thousand copies printed were exhausted before the Lawyers, Judges and State and County officers could be supplied. The question of cost is a matter too insignificant to be seriously considered. A tax of one tenth of one mill on the assessed value of real and personal property in the State would raise the necessary amount, or an assessment of 18 cents on each citizen over 21 years of age would exceed the sum yearly paid for this purpose, and if the maxim that "human legislation is governed by the force of public opinion" is regarded, the laws will soon be published in every permanently established newspaper in the State.

A WORD WITH BOUND BROOK.

If we may be allowed the privilege of mildly criticising our neighbors, we would call the attention of the residents of Bound Brook in general and its merchants in particular to a lack of creditable consideration on their part of certain services recently rendered their city by our firemen. At the last meeting of the Board of Managers of the Plainfield Fire Department, it was necessary to vote certain sums of money in payment of sundry claims arising out of the attendance of No. 2's Engine, Hose Carriage and men, at the destructive conflagration that visited Bound Brook some months ago. If we remember correctly, our delegation of workers was the first to arrive on the scene and its engine the first to put a stream on the burning buildings; it is consequently fair to suppose that the subsequent quenching of the flames and the arrest of the fire's progress, was directly due—to some extent—to the efforts of Plainfield's firemen and their apparatus. We do not wish to be understood as desiring to depreciate in the slightest degree the credit belonging to the Somerville firemen for their labors of equal merit. But, unless we are mistaken, they were pointedly and particularly thanked by "resolution," and a sum of money contributed as a token of appreciation. Such a compensation as a reward is not necessary in the case of Plainfield—its firemen are volunteers in every sense of the word, and its Department is liberally supported by the public—but we beg to remark that it would have shown a spirit of courteous esteem and been no more than common civility, had those residents of Bound Brook whose property was probably saved in some degree by the thankless labors of the Plainfield firemen, inquired the amount of expense or damage occurring in their service.

The report of Joseph Orr, Fish Warden of Camden county, to the State Commission, gives the following facts concerning the shad fishing this year: Two seines were used, one at Gloucester, with 600 fathoms of net, and the other at Pea Shore with 380 fathoms. Besides these there were five separate points or rendezvous for gill-net fishers—Gloucester Point, with 2210 fathoms of net; Knighn's Point, with 990 fathoms; Railroad Wharf, 1240 fathoms; Cooper's Point, 5165 fathoms, and Mozart Fish House, 800 fathoms. Total gill nets, 65, with 10,405 fathoms; seines, 2, with 980 fathoms; total length of net used, 11,380 fathoms. The catch of shad was Gloucester Fishery, 60,450; Bennett's, 25,380; Gill nets, 97,500. Total, 183,330. The total catch last year was 115,000, an increase this year of 68,330 or 59 per cent. The shad were larger on the average this year than for many years past. Two shad weighed 8¾ pounds each. The average catch of the gillers was 1500 to the net.

The intense heat in the south-west the past few days, has caused a great deal of sickness and death in Cincinnati. At 8 o'clock on the morning of July 12, the thermometer registered 90 degrees.

The Governor of Kentucky has issued a proclamation making Thursday, the 14th day of July, a day of public fasting and prayer for the recovery of the President.

OUR WOUNDED CHIEF.

The bulletins daily received and expectantly waited for from Washington, fail to convey any satisfactory or understandable idea regarding the condition of President Garfield. Up to Monday it was reported that he was progressing towards recovery, but on that evening there were some changes in the President's symptoms which were not favorable. The form in which this fact was given to a portion of the public Tuesday morning awakened undue and painful anxiety, until those who had seen the more temperate statements were able to correct the impression made by the unfortunate exaggeration. During Wednesday the condition of the President was again reported favorable. The disturbing changes of the night before did not again appear; the symptoms of fever recurring each afternoon were decidedly less marked, and his strength showed perceptible improvement. Without forgetting the danger which certainly exists, it is now reasonable to hope, and strongly, for Mr. Garfield's recovery.

THE OBSTINATE MINORITY.

The resultless ballot at Albany for State Senator still continues and it seems as if no break of the dead-lock will occur until the minority chooses. Conkling's "guard stand firm by their master, and every effort to draw a single one from the ranks has proved unavailing. Since our last the Half-breeds have held a caucus and united on Lapham for the short term and Miller for the long term, but need about ten votes to elect their candidates. On adjournment each day, the majority of the Democrats vote with the Stalwarts. In a private business letter from Conkling, he says incidentally that he does not intend to withdraw, and enormous efforts are being put forth to secure a new caucus in favor of the ex-Senator and Wheeler, the latter of whom is favored by a number of the Half-breeds. The struggle is a bitter and intense one with no prospect, as yet, of any final result.

Mayor King, of Philadelphia, having revived and enforced the law against fireworks and explosives in that city, has now turned his attention to the enforcement of the law against carrying concealed deadly weapons. He says that "the prohibitory law should never have been suffered to become lax. Men and boys sport deadly weapons and seem proud of doing so. Daily some promising life is cut short by the bullet from a pistol carried as a pocket piece. Many a man is a murderer through this dangerous practice. The practice is as foolish as it is dangerous. The revolver indiscriminately carried is the characteristic of the coward and bully, who with mock courage picks a quarrel and answers the honest fist stroke with a pull on the trigger. The possessor of a pistol as likely as not frequently leaves it within the reach of innocent children to blow their brains out. Language has not the strength to permit me to convey my utter detestation of the fool who turns himself into a walking arsenal. If the evil-doers are convinced that the law will be sternly enforced there will be no need of hip pockets; the dockets of the courts will not be burdened with homicides; fewer homes will rest under the shadow of a loved one's untimely and terrible death and fewer wretches will swing. We cannot arrest a man on suspicion of carrying a pistol, but when he is apprehended on another charge and a search discloses a deadly weapon he shall be subjected to the fullest penalty." Few persons will question the truth or wisdom of these views, and Mayor King will not only accomplish a good work if he succeeds in suppressing the practice he denounces, but the example of enforcing laws, instead of allowing them to be dead letters, will be salutary.

Most people know the benefit of lemonade before breakfast, but few know how it is more than doubled by taking another at night also. The way to get the better of a bilious system without blue pills or quinine, is to take the juice of one, two or three lemons, as the appetite craves, in as much ice water as makes it pleasant to drink, without sugar, before going to bed. In the morning on arising, or at least half an hour before breakfast, take the juice of one lemon in a goblet of water. This will clear the system of humors and bile, with mild efficacy, without any of the weakening effects of Congress water. People should not irritate the stomach by eating the lemons clear; the powerful acid of the juice, which is almost corrosive, infallibly produces inflammation after a while; but properly diluted, so that it does not burn or draw the throat, it does its full medicinal work without harm, and when the stomach is clear of food has abundant opportunity to work the system thoroughly.

The annual report of the operations of the Philadelphia mint during the past year shows that there were received 3,352,505 ounces of gold metals, valued at over sixty-two million of dollars, and 5,756,901.62 ounces of silver, worth $6,482,376.98. The amount and value of the bullion operated upon by each of the operative offices in the different processes of coinage was the largest in the history of the Mint. The gold bullion was 290¼ tons, with a value of $157,590,000 and the silver, 596¼ tons, valued at $20,243,600. Upon this bullion there was a legal allowance for wastage of 52,372.66-1000 ounces, or $257,778.64, but at the Philadelphia Mint the wastage for the year falls very much below the allowance, being only 3,467,275-1000 ounces in gold and silver, with a value of $13,602.65, or $234,175.99 less than is allowed by the Treasury Department. In addition to the precious metals there were coined 38,335,685 pieces of five, three and one cent coins, equal in weight to 132 tons.

Griscom, the faster, ended his 45 days fast on Tuesday. On that day he partook of his first meal during that time, which consisted of mashed strawberries, milk toast and milk. He ate the meal on the stage of the Olympic theatre, Chicago, in the presence of some 200 persons. The country is now to be afflicted with lectures by him on the subject of fasting. No need for editors to listen to him. They know what it is to fast.

THE corner loafer still occupies his position along the curb-stones of our principal streets.

THE base ball fever in this city seems to have gone up like a rocket and come down like the stick.

WHEN is the Plainfield Base Ball Association and the Hose Co's. nine going to play off that tie?

THE interior of the First National Bank's offices, has been handsomely painted.

THE Potter Press Work's base ball nine has lost the services of its able catcher, Burns, who has left the city.

PICNICS of private parties in the deserted wilds of Feltville, are considered the correct thing, nowadays.

H. S. BARNES at No. 6 west Front Street, has added a new stock of papers which he is selling at reduced rates for the next 60 days.

THE business establishments of Messrs Clare and Zukschwert on Park avenue, have been handsomely painted on the exterior.

WE have, as yet, heard of no new appointment to the vacant office of dog-pounder. There seems to be no ambition for office among the Republicans of this city.

IT is decidedly suggestive of the equity with which the late fire tax was assessed, that not a person appeared before the Board of Appeals with a claim for reduction.

IN making out their premium list, the managers of the Union & Middlesex Co's. Mutual Agricultural Society should remember to offer a prize to the fastest bicycle rider.

WEAK fish are biting at Woodbridge and those loving the sport should put up at the Sewaren House, Woodbridge Beach, where they will find excellent accommodations.

No more comets wanted. A number of wives report that their husbands came home last night in a terribly bewildered condition, and stated that it was the effect of looking at the comet!

THE Board of Managers of the Plainfield Fire Department, publish in this issue a notice to delinquent tax-payers, which those who come under such category would do well to heed.

THE city is divided into wards at last. The members of the Council privately reconsidered their intention of making five divisions, and the ordinance was passed, on Monday evening, unchanged.

A YOUNG lady of this city has been visiting relations in Metuchen for some time past, and the press of the State is extensively publishing an item to this effect: "It is said that the prettiest girl in New Jersey lives at Metuchen."

THE Common Council has at last taken certain action looking towards the curtailing of the expense of this city. The lamps throughout our streets will hereafter remain unlighted, and only those under the railroad-bridges will burn as usual.

IT is hardly necessary to suggest to the public that it should take advantage of the chance offered to visit Long Branch and Ocean Grove on Friday of next week, with the First Baptists. Tickets are for sale at Howatt's, Randolph & Son's and Stelle's.

AN exceedingly handsome and massive gilt frame, to surround the portrait of Gen. Hancock, recently painted for the Hon. Joseph Yates by Col. Julian Scott, has just been completed by Mr. R. Waldron, at his establishment on Front street, opposite Park avenue.

AN exchange says that some societies are imitating a certain class of mean business men. They asked the newspapers to give them free notices to help them along, and then when they want job printing run around and dicker with some amateur cheese press printer.

ONE of the finest suburban residences in our city will be sold at auction by Messrs Bleecker & Mumford, on Thursday the 28th inst., at 2 o'clock p. m. The property is that owned and occupied by the widow of Mr. David W. Weiss, on Park avenue, opposite the Fair grounds.

THE handsome plot of ground on Grove street, belonging to Gen. W. H. McMahon of the N. Y. Custom House, was sold at auction on Thursday of last week and Mr. E. B. Pope was the fortunate purchaser at a price which will eventually bring a satisfactory profit.

THE case of Rocap vs. Lyon, conducted by the plaintiff in his own behalf and Mr. Craig A. Marsh for the defendant, was tried on Thursday afternoon of last week, before justice Nodyne and a jury. After a consultation of five minutes duration, a verdict was given of "no cause of action."

Boone of this city through his attorney, Mr. Wm. Stillman, against Mr. Robert McNabb of Bound Brook for professional services rendered the defendant's brother while sick with small-pox, on Fifth street, during the past Spring.

THE Common Council has adopted a recommendation of a special committee to the effect that only such money be expended on the streets as is necessary to prevent accident and damage. Mr. Coriell during his late position as Chairman of the Street Committee, endeavored to carry out such economical provision and even refused to sign bills for work done against his orders and undoubtedly unnecessary, but his colleagues passed the claims against his protest.

DURING the past cold winter many of our people suffered, and sickness was caused by the poorly-constructed, gassy furnaces that seem to be in so many of our houses. It is universally conceded that this expense of sickness can be wholly saved by having a first-class durable gas-tight Boynton furnace, that is unequaled for producing large volumes of pure, warm healthy air. They are the best furnaces in the country, and are manufactured by Richardson, Boynton & Co., of New York.

A "UNION Meeting" to give praise for the favorable condition of President Garfield and offer prayer for his ultimate recovery, was held in the First Baptist Church on Sunday evening. The attendance was unusually large. The Rev. Dr. Bliss conducted the affair and an opening prayer by the Rev. Mr. Meeker was followed by the addresses of Drs. Bliss, Lewis, Yerkes and Mayor Randolph. The Rev. A. F. Raymond offered prayer, and Dr. Lowry pronounced the benediction. A quartette composed of Mrs. John Shotwell, Miss Gussie Runyon and Messrs. Ed. Burr and A. Vanderbeek lead the singing very effectively.

A MEETING of the Constitutional Commission to consider the highly important subject of the Courts of the State is to be held at the United States Hotel, Atlantic City, at 6 o'clock, on the evening of Friday, July 22d, inst. All who are interested in this matter are invited by the Commission to appear before it at that meeting, to express their views thereon. The subject is a highly important one that has excited much attention and discussion throughout the State for years, and those who have given it special study should not fail to appear before the Commission to urge their views in regard to what changes they may deem necessary.

THE first locust of the season began his song on Second street yesterday (Wednesday).

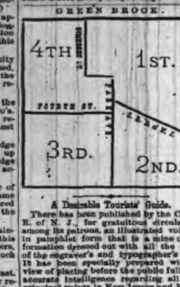
AT a meeting of the Board of Directors of the "Union & Middlesex Counties' Mutual Agricultural Association" held at the Mansion House, this city, Tuesday evening, July 12th, Mr. John F. Plummer, of Netherwood, was elected a member of the Board in place of M. H. Ackes, resigned.

THE Dunellen Hotel, at Dunellen, N. J., has again passed into the hands of its former popular proprietor, Mr. William Dean, who has thoroughly renovated and refurnished the house in a fine manner. Mr. Dean has made himself popular as landlord of road houses by his thorough appreciation of the wants of the public in that line, always keeping the best liquors and segars and affording good accommodations for man and beast, at reasonable rates. Besides, he is genial and always to be found at home by his friends. Success to the Dunellen Hotel under his management.

ON Wednesday evening as the train from New York that left Plainfield depot at 7:24 was running between New and Liberty streets, it struck a young colored man named Bobley Pollard, aged about twenty years. The unfortunate victim had been walking on the opposite track and had stepped off and between the tracks to allow a mixed freight to pass. He stood waiting unconscious by, unable to hear the approaching passenger train and probably not noticing how close to its track he stood. He came here about three weeks ago from Virginia. He died in a few moments after he was struck.—The remains were conveyed to the depot where County Physician Terrill afterward viewed them, deeming no inquest necessary. The mother of the unfortunate lad is in the employ of Mr. Spicer, on Fifth Street. They purposed attending the excursion to Asbury Park on Thursday.

The City's Wards.

In order that the public may the more easily understand the boundaries of the wards of the City, as adopted, we publish below a sort of impromptu map:



A Desirable Tourists' Guide.

There has been published by the C. R. R. of N. J., for gratuitous circulation among its patrons, an illustrated volume in pamphlet form that is a mine of information dressed out with all the skill of the engraver's and typographer's art. It has been specially prepared with a view of placing before the public full and accurate intelligence regarding all the principal points in New Jersey and Pennsylvania which are usually visited by pleasure seekers, and are reached by the main line and branches under control of the Company. It gives the distance of the different places from New York, the fares thereto, a list of hotels and boarding houses thereat with the rates by the day and week, together with a brief historical mention of the attractions and leading points of interest. No more appropriate publication at this season of the year has ever been placed within the reach of the tourists, and the compactness of the volume is not secured at the expense of its completeness. Copies may be had upon application at the office of the C. R. R., 119 Liberty street, New York.

A Change in the Law.

Up to the 4th instant stealing rides on the trains of any railroad was a misdemeanor, and was punishable by a fine not more than $25 or imprisonment for not more than thirty days. The offence being a misdemeanor, all persons arrested for its commission had to be sent before the County Courts for trial. In many of the cases sentence was suspended. In others fines of $1 each and costs of Court were imposed, and the offenders imprisoned until the fine and costs were worked out. In the cases where sentence was suspended, the imprisonment of the offenders would have worked great hardship to them, many of them being guilty of the offence through ignorance of the law, and innocent of any intention to do wrong. In all such and in many other cases the costs fell on the county, while all of the cases entailed more or less costs upon the county. At the last session of the Legislature, the law was amended so as to make the offence disorderly conduct instead of misdemeanor, so that the case could be disposed of by a Justice of the Peace and all expense of the county saved. The law went into effect on July 4th.—True American.

The Union Chapel at Netherwood.

Although the weather of Sunday afternoon last was not conducive of personal comfort amidst indoor assemblages, yet quite a number of our citizens gathered at the Netherwood Chapel upon the occasion of its dedication. The Rev. Mr. Murray of the Drew Theological Seminary, who had preached from the same pulpit in the morning, occupied the platform with the Rev. Drs. Lowry, Bliss and Yerkes of Plainfield, Kittredge of Chicago and the veteran layman Peter Balen, Esq., of this city. The services were commenced at 4 o'clock, and consisted of addresses by those mentioned above, singing by the assemblage and vocal solos by Miss M. Louise Segur of New York. The remarks were all timely and encouraging to the band of workers who had achieved so much in the direction aimed at. Mr. John F. Plummer extended a few sincere sentiments of thankfulness to the friends who had so ably and satisfactorily assisted the completion of the project. The dedicatory prayer was offered by the Rev. Dr. Kittredge and the benediction pronounced by the Rev. Dr. Murray.

Bound Brook's K. of P.

The public installation of the newly elected officers of Somerset Lodge, No. 56, K. of P., took place on Monday evening last at Bound Brook and was a most interesting occasion. Addresses were delivered by Supreme Representative Ward, Grand Chancellor Rutan, and Grand Inner Guard Ferris, of Newark, Grand Master at Arms McCullough, of Perth Amboy, and Grand Keeper of Records and Seals Lorton, of this city. Delegations were present from the following lodges: Perseverance of Plainfield, Henry Clay of Newark, Good Will of Scotch Plains, Olive Branch of Elizabethport and Lodge of the Castle of Somerville. The officers installed were:

C. C. E. S. Barber,
V. C. E. S. Peterson,
P. I. Swick,
M. at A. W. Hoppock,
I. G. Hiram Voorhees,
O. G. C. C. Bush.

The exercises were ably conducted and most impressive; one of the most pleasing being the singing by a fine quartette. A grand collation was afterwards served and sociable intercourse enjoyed. The majority of the members of Plainfield's organization unite in the opinion that they never were more thoroughly repaid for a fraternal visit, while the minority—numbering three—only cite one objection to the evening's programme, and that was their midnight walk home on account of missing the last train.

Hon. Chas. A. Campbell.

It is with sincere sorrow that we record the death of the Hon. Chas. A. Campbell, at his residence in Woodbridge, on Monday morning last, at five o'clock. The deceased was stricken with paralysis on Thursday, June 9th; but since that time, although confined to his bed and experiencing much suffering, late reports had given rise to a hope and expectation that he would recover. The news of his death was, in consequence, all the more saddening as it was unexpected. The deceased was a prominent citizen of the township in which he resided, and well known throughout the State. He was an active member of the Democratic party and so trusted and popular as to represent his district for two terms in the State Legislature, besides holding numerous offices of honor in Woodbridge and Middlesex County. At the time of his death he held the position of a Director of the Union & Middlesex Counties' Mutual Agricultural Association, in which institution he took an active interest and prominent part. He was a genial and kind hearted man, and did much for the township in developing the wealth that lay concealed in the clay banks of the section. Personally, he was largely interested in such project, and at one time employed a number of hands in marketing the clay and amassed considerable wealth thereby. His loss cannot but be felt by friends, neighbors and business connections; while the sympathy of all is undoubtedly with his bereaved family. The funeral, which occurred on Wednesday, was largely attended, the remains being interred at Metuchen.

Refused Admission to the Bar.

The New Jersey Supreme Court has refused to admit John T. Dunn of Elizabeth, to examination for admission to the bar. Mr. Dunn has been a member of the Assembly for two years, and last autumn was a conspicuous candidate for Congress in Miles Ross' district. Four years ago he registered his name as a law student in Ex-Prosecutor Fay's office, and at the end of his period of probation made application for admission to the Supreme Court of the State. Objection was made, however, that he had, during the four years for which he was registered as a student, followed his avocation of painter; and the matter was referred to a commissioner to take testimony on the point. The commissioner reported that Mr. Dunn had spent more of the four years with the paint brush than he had at the law books, and the court, after having the matter under advisement for six months, has just made known its refusal to allow Mr. Dunn to practice. Dunn says that the opposition to his admission was because his action in the Council (of which he is also a member) on the city debt matter did not please a certain element in Elizabeth.

What Conkling Thinks of the Democracy.

The following has been extensively published on the authority of the Hon. Lewis Lawrence, of Utica, New York. It was about the time of the decision in favor of the Louisiana fraud by the Electoral Commission. Mr. Lawrence says:

"One night I was with him in his room silently smoking while Conkling walked up and down like a raging lion. At last he broke out: 'I can't keep company with this riff raff any longer. They are rotten with corruption, and, after having taken everything else, they are bound to steal the Presidency. Sherman reeks with plunder. Wheeler is a virtuous log-roller. Stanley Mathews would sell his soul for office. As for Hayes, he is simply a pious sneak, ready to give money to be President, and to drop on his knees in tears if caught at it.' I have a great mind to get up in the Senate and denounce the whole thing to-morrow, and call on honest Republicans to give the election to Tilden, to whom you, as well as I, know it belongs.' I told him it would drive him into the Democratic party! and he said: 'Let it drive; there are more gentlemen and fewer hogs than with us.' These were just his words."

The extract given below from the New Orleans Picayune, evidences the opinion of a Democrat regarding Conkling:

Conkling is credited with saying: "Let them drive me into the Democratic party; there are more gentlemen and fewer hogs there than with us." It does not follow, however, that the Democratic party wants more hogs, and the great statesman may not find a vacancy.

Purifying the Peace St. Sewer.

It seems that at last the nuisance occasioned by the emptying of all sorts of sewerage into the brook from the drains laid by the railroad company for the purpose of carrying of the surface water from under its bridges, is to be regulated. Contrary to all good sense and judgment a number of private residences and other buildings have been connected with the sewer since its construction, and the waste thereby contributed added to that from the depot, flows out of the mouth into the brook a most offensive mass. Mayor Randolph has for some time past been in personal communication with the Attorney and Ass't. Receiver of the Central Railroad Co., and with such satisfactory effect that latterly those officers have taken so rational a view of the subject and so friendly an interest in the welfare of the city, as to make a most generous offer. The Company propose to sink a large receptacle for the receiving of all objectionable waste from the depot, at their own expense (which will be about $700) and place it in charge of the city, to be cleaned under direction of the proper officers of the city whenever necessary. Private parties in its vicinity will be allowed the privilege of connecting their buildings with this cess-pool upon paying the extremely nominal sum of $10 per annum. The ventilation necessary will probably be placed at high points in two or more places, and thereby the slightest ill-effect that otherwise might arise will be entirely done away with. Steps will be taken (in a friendly way at first) to have all connection with the sewer, severed; and in the near future nothing will pass through it into the brook excepting such drainage from the streets after a rain storm, as collects beneath the railroad crossings.

Resolved, That the sorrow and danger which have brooded over the Nation since the assassin's shot was fired at President Garfield, have deeply touched the hearts of the people of Plainfield, whose horror of the miscreant's crime is only equalled in degree by their appreciation of the value of that life so nearly lost to our country;

Resolved, That the indications pointing to the recovery of our honored President rejoice our hearts and give rise to daily gratitude to our Heavenly Father;

Resolved, That the Mayor be requested to transmit these resolutions to Hon. James G. Blaine, Secretary of State, as a sincere expression of the sympathy, solicitude and hope of this Council, and of this community of ten thousand souls.

Plainfield, N. J., July 11th, 1881.

On motion, unanimously adopted.

FIRE MATTERS.

At a regular meeting of "Alert Hose Co. No. 1" held in their house last Monday night, the proceedings were varied by the presentation to the Company by Foreman Saltzman, of two handsome framed pictures, which he brought over from Europe with him recently. One represents the coat of arms of the different Cantons of Switzerland, the other is an Allegorical Representation of Switzerland. The valuable gifts were received with thanks by the Company. Ex-Chief Voorhees also presented the Company at the same time a colored lithograph of old 13 Hose of Brooklyn, N. Y.

NORTH PLAINFIELD PARAGRAPHS.

The Boards of Freeholders of Morris and Somerset Counties met recently and resolved to build a new bridge over the Passaic river, near Sterling, (adjoining the residence of Hon. David Smalley.) The bridge is to be an 88-foot span, 16-foot roadway structure, with iron stringers.

There was a small gathering of members of the "National Greenback Labor Reform" party at Blair's Hall last Wednesday evening, who perfected a permanent organization to be known as "The Nationals" by the election of the following officers:

President—John Blimm.
Vice President—James M. C. Smith.
Treasurer—Abraham C. Coriell.

Resolutions were presented and laid over until next meeting, Wednesday evening, Aug. 10th, at which time a prominent speaker will address the meeting, further particulars of which will be given by posters.

SPORTSMEN'S CORNER.

Woodcock are not very plentiful, although several good bags were made on the 1st inst., by parties along the Passaic river, or "Cut Off." There is a growing feeling among sportsmen to do away with summer woodcock shooting by putting the law of 1880 again in force.

One day last week while some quarry men were engaged in getting out flag-stone at Prospect Hill, Port Jervis, they found imbedded in the solid rock a rattle-snake that had become petrified. It measured seven feet two inches and had 14 rattles. How it got there is a mystery as there was no crevice in the rock, and it must have been there for many thousand years. The snake was sent to the Smithsonian Institute at Washington, where it will be on exhibition.

The legal season for catching black bass began on the 1st of the month, as the fishermen are fully aware. But the bass don't seem to be properly informed of the fact, as they have not yet begun to bite worth a cent. The best thing that can be done under the circumstances is to drop a line to the wayward bass.

The Fish Commissioners have already begun the work of hatching at three points on the Delaware river, and thus far more than three hundred thousand young shad have been hatched.

What the Fish Commissioners are Doing.

Notwithstanding the unfavorable season the Commissioners of Fisheries of the State are meeting with fair success in their shad hatching operations on the Delaware. We are informed by Major Anderson that operations are being carried on at three different points, and that already more than half a million young shad have been produced by artificial process, and added to the natural supply. The frequent rains, causing high water, have interfered with the catch of spawning shad, but it is proposed to continue operations through the present month, and it is expected that a very large number of young shad will be deposited in the Delaware. The extraordinary catch of the past season has given the Commissioners great encouragement to continue their efforts to increase the supply of this delicious fish. The increase in Burlington and Camden Counties alone over the catch of last year, was over one hundred and eighty thousand shad, or about one million pounds of fish, as appears by actual returns made to the Commissioners. On Wednesday of last week one hundred thousand shad fry hatched in the Delaware were deposited in the Raritan river at New Brunswick. To insure their speedy and safe transfer, Major Anderson gave them his personal supervision, and they were taken from Columbia, N. J. (six miles above Belvidere), to New Brunswick, and deposited in the Raritan inside of five hours and without the loss of a single fish. The railroad companies throughout the State appreciate the advantages of the work of the Commissioners, and afford them every facility for the speedy transfer of live fish, allowing them to be carried on express trains, accompanied by the necessary attendants.—Trenton Gazette.

WESTFIELD WISPS.

The family of Dr. C. E. Aguirre arrived from Oneonta, N. Y., this week.

Engineer Wilcox returned to his duties at Irving's factory on Monday last.

The latest athletic contest this week was between lamp sup't Pfeifer and a lamp post. John won in good time.

The daily parade of Burt's goose from the Hotel to the Westfield river, with his quack quack, is highly edifying to our citizens.

Mr. Fred Clark of this place, was married to Miss Roberts of Elizabeth, at Woodbridge N. J., on the 6th inst. Our congratulations are extended.

Mr. Elliot D. Jacques, formerly resident here, is one of the attaches of The American Exporter, published in New York.

Old "Hickory" should be more particular in the use of head lines, the initials "N. G." after a marriage notice might be misconstrued.

One of our ablest Amateur Athletes gave an exhibition on Broad street this week of his ability as a chair lifter. Won't do, Sq.; straighten your arm.

The relief association of our Fire Department has received from the Secretary of State, $244.84, being its share of the $9000, distributed by that officer among the different associations in the State.

The placing of an iron railing around the balcony at Gale's building on Broad street, is an improvement. Samuel E. Young had the contract for iron, and Wilcox Bros., for ornamentation.

Prof. William Eustace, with his highly trained stud "Prince," favored our citizens with a very interesting exhibition of his abilities as a bare-back and fancy rider, on Elm street last Tuesday afternoon.

John M. C. Marsh, our popular Assessor, Constable, Surveyor, &c., &c., &c., has completed his assessment for the year and is ready to meet with the Board of Assessors on Monday next. The valuations vary very little from last year.

The "Village Improvement Committee" still continue their good work in the extension of the lamp service, over fifty lamps being already in use. If our citizens only meet them half way, our entire village will be properly lighted at an early day.

Our photographer has been quite busy during the past week, taking pictures of horses, vehicles, and their drivers. Among others who have availed themselves of this opportunity, we notice Messrs. Darsh, (the bake-ist) and Woodruff (the milk-ist).

The regular daily trips to West Brighton beach via Central Railroad, Steamboat Chancellor and N. Y. and Sea Beach Railroad, commenced Monday last. Many of our citizens have already availed themselves of this privilege. The fare for the round trip is only 90 cents.

Messrs. B. C. White and G. W. Buck of the Flower City Nurseries, Rochester, N. Y., have been stopping with mein host Moffett, for the past week, and we understand have made large sales of trees both ornamental and fruit, flowers, &c. This speaks well for the future appearance of our village.

Quite a number of our citizens have already paid visits to "Boynton Beach" this year, and we hear of several other parties making up. Our popular knight of the whip, Chas. Lyon, will probably be kept busy from the present time to the end of the season in coaching to this favorite resort.

The celebrated trotting horse "Dispatch," property of Mr. Harry C. Kugler of this place, can be seen on our roads daily. The horse looks in excellent condition, in fact an ignis fatuus. "Dispatch" showed a half mile on "Smalley's" track last week in 1:15. He can unquestionably do much better than this, however.

The tickets for the excursion of the Methodist Sabbath School on Aug. 10th, are now on sale. The destination is the Highlands of the Navesink, certainly a very pleasant place to visit. The excursion will not only prove, but deserves to prove a decided success. The weather clerk should be interviewed and fixed at once.

The almost daily arrival at our depot of agricultural machinery gives evidence that our farmers are alive to the fact that better tillage as well as better facilities for gathering their crops are needed. We presume Mr. Lewis G. Thols who is agent for a variety of agricultural implements, deserves credit for their introduction here. Let the good work go on.

The following elected officers of Westfield Lodge No. 169, I. O. O. F., were installed by D. D. G. M., Y. H. Sanborn of Elizabeth N. J. on Wednesday evening, July 6th:

N. G.—W. B. Chamberlain,
V. G.—G. F. Trimmer,
R. S.—J. R. Barcalow,
P. S.—T. C. Starr,
Trees.—F. Decker.

Mrs. Carlyle Miller while leaving the Methodist church on Sunday evening last, met with a serious accident. While descending the stairway, her foot slipped and she fell heavily against the side-wall. She was conveyed home and Dr. J. B. Harrison summoned. Upon examination it was found that her collar bone had been fractured. Dr. Harrison set the bone and at last accounts Mrs. Miller was doing as well as could be expected for one of her advanced age, 72.

Having secured the privilege of the following fence lines and placed the words "CONSTITUTIONALIST BILL BOARD" upon them, we claim the right to their use. Anyone desiring to use them for posting privileges should apply to our local representative.

Broad St., Ingram's to Wittke's.
Elm St., Traynor's to Hansman's.
" " Roulston's, corner of North Ave.
" " French's " " " "

Bill boards will also be placed as follows, and are included in these privileges: Broad St., at Wittke's, Post Office, Pierson's, Squire Jacques and Hotel Hall.

The first case of arrest for violation of the Game Laws in our township occurred on Thursday of last week. The complaint was made by Mr. W. B. Woodruff, the florist, and the party charged was Augustus Dolbier; the violation consisted of shooting a cat-bird. It proved, however, a case of mistaken identity, Mr. Dolbier bringing undoubted proof that he was in New York at the time charged. This case will undoubtedly bear fruit, however, and prove a warning to others. The hearing was before Squire Godfrey.

Considerable objection has been made by property owners on Road District No. 8, to the voting of a special road tax of $500. Upon examination of the subject, we find that the valuation of property in this district is $190,000, which adds the small amount of 26 cents per 100 as a special tax. Other road districts pay a much larger per centage, notably No. 6, where it amounts to 45 cents per 100. Upon this basis No. 8 should have raised $1000, and as it covers the centre of the village where improvements are most desirable, $1500 would be nearer the correct figure. We trust that the voters of this district will consider this subject next year. A flag walk on Elm from Broad to North avenue, would be a sensible improvement.

At the request of a number of our citizens, Prof. A. A. Star gave one of his interesting microscopic exhibitions in the Sunday School rooms of the Presbyterian church, on Monday evening last. The weather proved inclement and the audience was consequently small, but we are sure that all who were present felt fully repaid for their attendance. The exhibition was very interesting throughout, the specimens of insect life exhibited being numerous and fine. One of the most interesting portions of the entertainment was the Professor's instructive descriptions and his running commentary upon the subjects exhibited, fairly bringing down the house by his many witty sayings. The exhibition of Water Tigers eating and Water Devils fighting abilities was alone worth the price of admission.

The following communications published at the request of the Westfield Athletic Club explain themselves:

Westfield, N. J., July 7th, 1881.
Messrs.—Augustus L. Alpers,
C. P. Wilcox,
Charles H. Day.
Committee on Games,
Westfield Athletic Club.

Gentlemen:

Your favor of the 5th duly received, and I thank you sincerely for the kind expression of your feelings therein contained, although I hardly deem the services rendered worthy of such a return. I shall be pleased in the future as in the past to aid you in anything tending to the advancement of Athletic sports, and trust that by our united efforts we may eventually effect a more general interest in these health and pleasure giving exercises.

Respectfully Yours,
Otis G. Webb.

MRS. Philip Maguire, residing on the Rahway road just outside of the city limits of Plainfield, was instantly killed on Sunday last. She had returned from church in the morning, and after her dinner climbed into a cherry tree from which she almost immediately fell breaking her neck and dying without a word. She left a family of nine children, the youngest about four months of age, who were largely dependent upon her daily labor.

DON'T TRUST THEM.

When you feel badly, and have pains here and there in your body that you don't know how to account for, it is the most foolish policy in the world to take the advice of people who say: "Oh! there's nothing the matter with you. Let yourself alone and you will come out all right." These folks know nothing about it, and may be trifling with your life. You may have Kidney or Liver trouble. Send right on to your druggist and get a bottle of Dr. David Kennedy's "Favorite Remedy" and then you will be all right, or write to the Doctor at Rondout, N. Y. jl5w2

If you want a New Carriage or Business Wagon, call at Jas. F. Homan's, No. 13 Somerset Street. Prices reasonable. 15jy2m

OUR exchanges are filled with warnings against smoking cigarettes. The paper mostly used in their manufacture is bleached by arsenic and combustion produces oil of creosote dangerously injurious to the membrane of the throat and the lungs.

WHY IT IS SO.

The reason why Dr. David Kennedy's "Favorite Remedy" cures complaints of the liver, Kidneys, Bowels and Blood, is that it is compounded of the very remedies which Nature herself has provided for this purpose. Being at first scattered through the woods and fields, Dr. K. has collected them, and condensed their virtues in the form which he now confidently offers to the sick and suffering. One dollar expended for a bottle will convince you and make you grateful that you read this item. The Doctor's office is in Rondout, N. Y. Write him a statement of your case. jl5w2

IT is stated that apples are falling prematurely from the trees and that the crop which promised to be a fair one, will prove a failure. Pear trees are full of fruit.

HAY FEVER.

For twenty-five years I have been severely afflicted with Hay Fever, and have tried many remedies without relief. While suffering intensely I was induced, through Mr. Titsworth's testimonial, to try Ely's Cream Balm. The immediate effect was marvelous. I have been enabled to perform my pastoral duties without the slightest inconvenience. Have been exposed to heat, draughts and dust, and have escaped a return attack. I pronounce Ely's Cream Balm a cure for Hay Fever. WILLIAM T. CAR, Presbyterian Pastor, Elizabeth, N. J.

Having been afflicted with Hay Fever for years I gave Ely's Cream Balm a trial; was much benefited if not permanently cured. I have had no real attacks since using it. E. H. HATCH, Editor Carbon County Democrat, Mauch Chunk, Pa. Price 50 cents. jl5w2

THE Morristown Banner says: One of our exceedingly bashful youths has not yet recovered from the shock he experienced recently. Pointing to the west, he said to the lady at his side, "that beautiful star that twinkles yonder like a diamond in the sky, is called Venus," whereupon she turned toward him, all radiant with enthusiasm, and innocently inquired, "where is Cupid?" The young man blushed, Venus covered her face with a cloud, and the Comet whisked his tail at the North star and—

RESCUED FROM DEATH.

The following statement of William J. Coughlin, of Somerville, Mass., is so remarkable that we beg to ask for it the attention of our readers. He says: "In the fall of 1876 I was taken with a VIOLENT BLEEDING OF THE LUNGS followed by a severe cough. I soon began to lose my appetite and flesh. I was so weak at one time that I could not leave my bed. In the summer of 1877 I was admitted to the City Hospital. While there the doctors said I had a hole in my left lung as big as a half dollar. I expended over a hundred dollars in doctors and medicines. I was so far gone at one time a report went around that I was dead. I gave up hope, but a friend told me of DR. WM. HALL'S BALSAM FOR THE LUNGS. I laughed at my friends, thinking that my case was incurable, but I got a bottle to satisfy them, when to my surprise and gratification, I commenced to feel better. My hope, once dead, began to revive, and to-day I feel in better spirits than I have the past three years.

"I write this hoping you will publish it, so that every one afflicted with Diseased Lungs will be induced to take DR. WM. HALL'S BALSAM FOR THE LUNGS, and be convinced that CONSUMPTION CAN BE CURED. I have taken two bottles and can positively say that it has done more good than all the other medicines I have taken since my sickness. My cough has almost entirely disappeared and I shall soon be able to go to work." Sold by druggists.

Wonderful successes like those of Stewart, the Vanderbilts, or the Astors are seldom reached by luck or accident. It is the result of something within that commands success; and it is only time that proves them as such. While new discoveries are daily brought forward how few reach the monuments of their worth. It is the result that lasts—ANTHONY'S BALSAM OF SULPHUR for Coughs, Colds, Consumption, etc., first discovered and originated after long years of study by a patient Massachusetts chemist, has gradually proved itself a success from Maine to Oregon, and to-day no more successful preparation for the cure of Throat and Lung complaints can be found in the world. MISCELLANEOUS READING.

UNDER THE SEA.

During a tour to Panama Bay and St. Marguerite (a speculative trip after pearls) another diver and myself visited the wreck of a Brazilian ship, the Ibiauby of Rio, where a number of Aspinwall divers were at work.

Our visit was one of curiosity merely, at the invitation of one of the divers, with whom we had a passing acquaintance, and we descended from their schooner with the use of their pumps.

The vessel, once a fine barque, lay half embedded in broken coral and bright yellow sand; and so clear was the water and so brilliant the tropic sunshine overhead, that I could easily have seen to read the finest print at a depth of eighty feet. Never before or since have I descended into so beautiful a sea, where the water had such dazzlingly clear and bright tints.

As we stood on the ruined deck, one of our diver acquaintances approached, and beckoning me to follow, led the way aft to the cabins, which were built upon the after deck. The door of the innermost stood ajar. The diver signed for me to enter.

I looked in and never shall forget the spectacle. The heavy mahogany chairs and sofa still kept their places, and in the uppermost of the two berths, wrapped in a gaily-colored blanket, lay a fair young lady as if asleep.

Her long black hair floated like seaweed, streaming out on the water. One little jeweled hand hung over the side of the berth; and on her beautiful oval face, with its dark brows, there was no sign that life was gone. Her eyes were closed and the long lashes rested dreamily on the lids. It seemed as if she might be only asleep; and the crimson curtain hanging half drawn away by rings on its silver rod, still cast its roseate glow into the berth.

I could hardly believe that her soul had long left its fair earthly abode, and that she had been lying there drowned for two months or more. That clear sea-water had embalmed her, and death was half robbed of his prey.

Without exception, it was the most impressive image of death I have ever witnessed. A vision of it haunted my mind for many a month, yet not unpleasantly.

Those divers were rude fellows. Yet not one of them had the hardihood to approach and take the sparkling rings from the fingers of the poor girl. In conversation, after we had ascended, they said they "preferred not to disturb the lady," though they seemed to have no scruples about plundering the ship.

By hearsay, we subsequently learned that some time after, her brother—some said her lover—came there and himself descended to the wreck. I can immagine, though perhaps but faintly, the emotions which must have filled his heart when first he stood within the sea-lit cabin.—[From a Diver's Note Book.]

A Disputed Honor.

Two simultaneous dispatches were received by Prof. Swift, of the Warner Observatory at Rochester, N. Y., regarding the great comet that has been discovered. Prof. Sharpless of Haverford College, Pennsylvania, states that L. T. Edwards saw it with the naked eye on the morning of June 22d, and Mr. Edgar L. Larkin, of New Windsor, Ill., also reports seeing it and that it was vast. It seems probable that the tail is not less than 15 deg. in length while the head is as bright as Jupiter. The new comet is located in the constellation of Auriga about 8 degrees from Capella, and it is not improbable that it may be the much expected comet of 1812 which should appear not far from that locality. As the two dispatches were received in Rochester simultaneously, there is some question as to whether the honor of discovery, and the Warner prize of $200, belong to Mr. Edwards or Mr. Larkin.

Trenton Business College.

The Annual Session of the C. C. C. C. or Trenton Business College, closed on Friday June 30. The students and faculty gathered in the morning in the College Hall for the purpose of awarding Diplomas, Prizes, &c.

The Annual Cash Prize, No. 4, for the best three months' record in Language Lessons and Spelling, was awarded to Walter C. Kite, of Trenton; Prize No. 5, for the best Book-keeping, to J. H. Cornell, of Ewing, N. J.

The following were the graduates, Class of '81.

Edward D. Anderson, Ewing, N. J.; Chas. W. Bergen, Greensburg, N. J.; James A. Bergen, Trenton; Fred E. Dickinson, Lakewood, N. J; Fred W. Davey, Finderne, N. J.; Nathan J. Holmes, Forked River, N. J.; W. F. Yard, Trenton, N. J.

The following were in the graduating class, but were called or sent to positions before finishing the course. They are engaged with the firms named: E. E. Buckman with Morrisville Rubber Works; W. S. Case with Pennsylvania Railroad Company; H. Eastburn with Trenton Rubber Company; J. F. Heath with Richardson & Heath; E. E. Johnson with W. C. Hendrickson & Co.; E. E. Kresson with commission house, New York City; B. A. La Rue with Coxon & Co., Clinton street Pottery; John J. Miller with Etruria Pottery Co.; Charles H. Patterson with E. W. Bliss, Press and Die M'frs., N. Y.; A. T. Rogers with Matlack, Ocean Grove; Wm. Reives with Pennsylvania Railroad Company; John D. Rice with Joseph Rice; Geo. N. Yard with Glasgow Pottery Co.

The Principal, Hon A. J. Rider, in addressing the graduating class said their graduation could hardly be called a commencement. They had chosen a business life for a calling, and he was glad to say that nearly all had already entered upon their work, so the question with them was not what shall I do? But how shall I do it? They had learned the wish of their instructors in the matter. They had been taught that unless work was well done it was not done at all—well done was the only done—they would find it so in the world.

To be a business man in the truest sense of the words, thorough-going, honest, upright, had a more charming sound than a whole catalogue of honorary titles. It was to be won only by diligence and hard work.

He advised them to be honest with themselves and he had no fear but that they would be toward the world. Honesty was not only the best policy but the only true policy. He cautioned them against a desire to possess what they did not squarely earn, and told them not to be in a hurry to get rich. Fortunes quickly made were generally quickly spent.—He advised them to be economical; thousands of young men founder every year on the rock of extravagance. High living was epidemic. If they caught it it would be their ruin.

He advised them to live within their incomes and leave a margin for investment. The secret of wealth was not earning but saving.

He was pleased and gratified to know that the graduates of this institution had, as a rule, been successful and have taken leading positions in our manufacturing and other industries. He believed these young men would take their places beside them and become like them, an honor to themselves and their friends and a blessing to society and the world. He wished them God sped on their career.

The year just closed has been one of the most prosperous in the history of the College. The number of students enrolled in the different departments, day and evening sessions is 254.

Land Under Water.

Chief Justice Beasley recently rendered the following decision in a case tried in the Supreme Court of this State:

By the ancient common law the title of owners of land bounded by the sea or by navigable rivers, where the tide ebbs and flows, extends to ordinary high water mark only. The title to the shore between ordinary high and low water mark, as well as the title to the soil under water belongs prima facie to the sovereign. The title, which by the common law of England was vested in the King, upon the revolution became vested in the people of the State. While the State cannot lawfully make a grant of all the waters of the State, to the utter destruction of the rights of navigation and fishery, it may by grant limit the common rights and may appropriate to individual enjoyment lands covered by water, to the exclusion of the public common rights of navigation and fishery. It may grant the land in all navigable tidal water within its territorial limits, to ordinary high water mark, without the consent of the owner of the land adjoining high water line.

A Tax Decision.

Messrs. Suydam & Jackson, of this city, Attorneys of Piscataway Township, have received notice of a decision rendered by the Supreme Court in the case of the State, (Jacob R. Casselbery et. al. pros.) against the Inhabitants of the Township of Piscataway, which was argued at the February term before Justices Reed, Parker and Dixon. The decision was rendered by Judge Dixon, and it has a local interest. The decision is that "where there has been undue delay in suing out a writ of certiorari to review a tax sale, and the writ is not prosecuted in aid of the prosecutor's title, the writ will be dismissed;" and "a municipality is not bound to refund the purchase money received on a tax sale merely because there has been illegality in the proceedings, which defeats the title of the purchaser."

Can a Chinese ship-yard be called a junk-shop?

A man, who didn't care three shakes of a lamb's tail for the newspapers, rode fourteen miles through a fierce rain storm to get a copy of a weekly that spoke of him as a prominent citizen. Perfectly natural.

"Going away this summer?" queried a bootblack of a fellow-mortal at the Post Office. "Naw!" "Well, you needn't be so short about it." "Maybe I needn't, but the idea of our going off to Saratoga when we can't raise $10 to git dad out of the work house does us injustice as a family."

A Miss Ewing has been giving cooking lessons in Chicago. She said some wise things to a gentleman. "Heavy bread," in her opinion, is a frequent cause of divorce, for "bad cooking leads to everything bad." And further: "The wife of a devoted husband is always a good cook. Intemperance, profanity, disgust of home life, are born of bad cooking."

Ladies' dresses in France are becoming rather elegiac. The new colors of dipcrest and pale hues are called by such mournful names as "stifled sighs," "indiscreet murmurs," "vain desires," "useless regrets," "weeping eyes," &c. The favorite style of hairdressing is a la victime. This doleful dress is particularly patronized by forsaken, forgotten or romantic ladies.

One of the most gratifying incidents of the Fourth was the scene at Tammany Hall, New York. That building was crowded to excess by Democrats—by men who fought James A. Garfield tooth and nail, men who spared no effort to defeat his election at the polls. "Let us, one and all, unite in a fervent prayer that his life may be spared to the nation," said John Kelly, and his bitterest political enemies sprang to their feet and cheered the sentiments in sincere and hearty accents.

MISCELLANEOUS.

MR. Wm. WESTFALL,

Of Dutchess Co., N. Y., 60 YEARS of AGE, Suffered Continually for Many Years from STONE in the BLADDER.

Great and painful disease are a sad combination. For Mr. William Westfall, formerly of Rock City, Dutchess Co., N. Y., now of Washington Hollow, in the same county, came to the office of Dr. David Kennedy, the eminent Physician and Surgeon, of Rondout, N. Y., some time since, in a condition to excite the sympathy of the most cold-hearted and hard-hearted person in the world. We say he came—he was, rather, carried to the Doctor's office, for he was totally helpless, and bore the weight of 60 years beside. He had suffered long from Retention of Urine, and had all the symptoms of an aggravated case of calculus formations in the bladder. The usual instrumental examination revealed the presence in the bladder of a urinary calculus of uncommon size. Dr. Kennedy frankly told Mr. Westfall that, owing to his age and debility, an operation was out of the question, but that he could, by the prescription of "Kennedy's Favorite Remedy," together with local treatment, make him comfortable and leave him to live out all his days. The outcome of this was that the patient enjoys good health to this day.

The Reason Why

Dr. Kennedy's "Favorite Remedy" is being extensively used by our people are as follows: It is a combination of vegetable alteratives. It is pleasant to the taste, adapted to both sexes and all ages, is effective in affording important relief in all cases of Kidney troubles, Liver Complaints, Constipation of the Bowels, and derangements peculiar to women. At the same time purifies the blood, thus giving tone and strength to the system enfeebled by disease or age. "Dr. Kennedy's Favorite Remedy" for sale by all druggists. 1y1w4

NO SMOKE! NO SMELL!

TUBULAR HOT-BLAST NON-EXPLOSIVE

Oil or Gas Stoves!

THE REASONS WHY THE TUBULAR HOT-BLAST OIL OR GAS STOVE IS SUPERIOR TO ALL OTHERS:

Its appearance is more like a stove than anything that has yet been offered.

It requires no wire gauze or water tank to make it safe.

A continual current of air passes to the burners over the Oil Pot, preventing the oil from getting warmer than the atmosphere in which it is burning. The take oven is not in the way of the kettle or boiler.

Baking, roasting, and boiling can all be done at once, and in less time than with any other oil stove.

The No. 2 or Three-Burner Stove will make 12 inches of pure white flame at a cost of 1½ cts. per hour. The reservoir holds four quarts of oil, sufficient to burn for twelve hours.

The No. 4 or 4-Burner Stove will make 16 inches of white flame at a cost of 2 cents per hour.

The reservoir holds 8 quarts of oil sufficient to burn for twelve hours.

The No. 2 Stove will consume between three and four cents worth of gas per hour.

The No. 4 will consume between four and five cents worth of gas per hour.

SEASON 1881.

IDOL!

[Formerly Peck's IDOL,]

By the great Mambrino Chief founder of the Mambrino family; 1st dam by American Eclipse, son of Duroc (founder of the star family) by imported Diomed. Dam of American Eclipse, Miller's Damsel, by imported Messenger; 2d dam, Kitty Mann by Shakespeare; 3d dam, Ellen Jenkins, by Sir William of Transport; 4th dam by Orphan, son of Ball's Florizel; 5th dam by imported Bernard; 6th dam by Silvertail; 7th dam by imported Dove.

IDOL is a rich dark bay, weighs 1,200 lbs., with high hind foot white, full sixteen hands high, a horse of great substance, fine temper, elegant trotting action, record 2:41¾ as a four-year old, distancing his field, and at five years old showed 2:30, third heat, to wagon. As a six year old he made his first season in the stud, but the war prevented the development of his progeny. Few of his colts have been trained, but those few are mostly fast. Idol Girl, 16 hands high, won Beacon, Mystic, and Prospect Park stakes for four year olds during 1871, obtained a record of 2:35¾. This mare at that age could beat 2:30, and at Prospect Park trotted during her race a half mile in 1:15¼, and a quarter in 35¾ seconds—a 2:23 gait. As a five year old she met with an accident which ended her turf career. Barbara Patchen, in 1879, as a big 16½ hand green 5 year old mare, won all her races in a jog, and the seventh heat, on a half-mile track, gained record 2:34¼. Don, at Topeka, Kansas, won his race in 2:29. Wayne won both stakes at Hartford. Nannette trotted, 3 years old, in 2:44. Ideal, same age, trotted in 2:40, and John R., in 1880, gained a record of 2:39 on a half mile track at Owego, N. Y., and won first money in all his races. There are others that will drop into the 2:30 list this year without doubt.

IDOL will be limited to 10 mares, besides those engaged, at $50.00 the season, money payable (or secured) at service.

Good care and pasture furnished at $3 per month. All accidents and escapes at owners' risk. IDOL and some of his colts can be seen at the grazing farm of D. F. CARLE, Stirling, Morris Co., New Jersey.

Breeders desiring an entorcee should call and see IDOL, and after seeing him, judge for themselves.

THE NEW BUSINESS

OF THE

EQUITABLE

Life Assurance Society of the U. S.

FOR THE YEAR 1880, WAS OVER

Thirty-Five Millions of Dollars,

The Largest Business Done by any Company in the World.

REASONS FOR THIS RESULT.

The Equitable is the strongest Company in the United States.

Its policies are, by their own express terms, made incontestable after three years. [For precise terms see form of policy contract.]

All such incontestable policies are paid immediately after receipt of satisfactory proof of the death of the insured, and without even the customary delay of sixty or ninety days.

Each ordinary policy provides for a definite surrender-value in paid up insurance, in case the policy is forfeited after three years from its date and is surrendered within a reasonable time thereafter.

By The Tontine Savings Fund plan of assurance, returns to policy-holders, after the expiration of what is called the Tontine period, are greater than are obtainable on any other system. Actual settlements of Tontine policies have been made in which policy-holders have withdrawn amounts varying from eighty to one hundred and twenty per cent. of premiums paid, besides enjoying a life insurance indemnity during the period. No other company can show such results.

The Tontine plan is the only one extant by which a person may withdraw from his insurance contract at specified periods, receiving the entire reserve and surplus accumulations in cash.

All the ordinary forms of insurance with annual dividends of profits, both cash and reversionary, are issued by this Society.

ASSETS, - $41,108,602.
SURPLUS, - $9,228,294.

Its business for the last ten years (represented by the new policies issued) has been larger than that of any other Company.

POETRY.

RULES FOR SUNDAY.

Dress hard all morning, such is fate,
Then enter church some minutes late.
All eyes will then be turned on you,
And will observe your bonnet new.
Let bonnets modestly wreathe your face,
And take your seat with faultless grace.
Let all your thoughts be turned on high,
And re-arrange your cardinal tie.
Think how religion's prone to bless,
And criticise your neighbor's dress.
Let all your heart be filled with praise,
And notice Mrs. Maggie's lace.
Put from your mind all thoughts of sin,
And re-adjust your diamond pin.
Think of how good religion proves,
And then smooth out your buttoned gloves.
Catch well the precepts as they fall,
And smooth the wrinkles in your shawl.
Think of the sinner's fearful fate,
And notice if your bonnet's straight.
Pray for the influence of Divine—
That lady's basque; mark the design.
Let tender peace possess your mind,
And criticise that hat behind.
Reflect on Christian graces, dear,
And fix those curls beside your ear.
Let your heart warm with silent prayer,
And view that horrid green silk there.
Reflect upon the wicked's ways,
See if your gold chain's out of place.
Think of the peace the good shall find,
And wonder who are sitting behind.
Think of the burdens the Christians bear,
And notice those strange ladies there.
The last words hear with contrite heart,
And fix your pull-back when you start.

PAYING A DEBT.

"S'pose the good old dominie would say I was very wicked, but I don't see anything to be very happy or thankful about," growled John Armstrong, as he piled more wood on the fire, shivered as he listened to the wind howling up the chimney, and drew nearer to the flame.

He sat in the great kitchen of the great farm-house alone. For five years he had been a childless widower. All the "help" had departed the previous evening to join in a distant wedding frolic, and left him to take care of himself after the best fashion he could, and that without any special provision for his creature comforts.

He had arisen late, was very hungry, and in anything but a pleasant state of mind. Everything went wrong. No hot breakfast awaited his coming when his "chores" were finished, and he knew as much about cooking as he did of Hebrew. The weather was bitter cold. Somehow his stock required more attention and were more unruly than usual. The fire smoked and wouldn't burn as it ought. He couldn't find food for breakfast for a long time, and when he did, the sausages burst wide open, and burned to a crisp, while he was trying to get the buckwheat batter to the right consistency for baking, and then he found he had used salt in place of soda, so as to render them uneatable. The coffee boiled over, and the kettle boiled dry. The dog stole and devoured the hard cheese he had cut in place of the ruined sausages. The cat and kittens stuck their noses into the pan of milk he intended to use. He blistered his fingers, upset the molasses, had a most unsatisfactory time generally, and remained half starved.

"The old Nick take the luck," he growled audibly. "I've half a mind to—"

He didn't say what, for just at the instant, and as he was getting up, one of the buttons of his coat caught in the table-cloth, and he dragged it off, scattering the dishes over the floor, and reducing them to fragments.

That was the poor beginning of the day, and sent him to thinking. If he had made such an utter failure of the breakfast, how would it be dinner? He kicked the dog out-of-doors, gathered up the offending cat and kittens into a ball, and threw them after him, endeavored to fill and light his pipe, let it fall upon the stone hearth, ruined it beyond redemption, and came more near to swearing than ever before in his forty years of mundane existence. Then he sat down so heavily as to crush the chair under him, rolled to the floor with his nose plowing the hot ashes, arose spluttering, and went out slamming the door after him.

The cool, clear air somewhat restored him to his senses. He looked over his broad, well tilled acres with a glow of satisfaction, felt he was "well to do," and ought to be taking comfort. Then came recollections of former days, of the bountifully loaded table, the pleasant companionship of wife, the thousand comforts contributed by her hands; and in contrast with these, sternly arose the now, with his desolate home, no fire, no dinner, no welcoming smile, the cold, lonely nights, and something of kindness to all earthly things crept back to his heart, and he called the dog and cat and kittens back to him, petted them, took them within doors, gave the one every particle of cooked meat he could lay his hands on, and the others an entire pan of milk, whistling merrily as he thought what a row his housekeeper would kick up when she came back, and found the larder empty, and the immaculant floor of her kitchen looked very like a demoralized slaughter house.

"I'll do it!" he repeated more positively.

The resolve appeared to have reference to shaving, and dressing in his best suit, and he was not long in accomplishing it. Then he harnessed up his team, threw into the sleigh buffalo robes and blankets, and drove to the church; where some sort of quarterly meeting was being held.

The long services over, he lingered at the door, and as a young and comely woman came out, said:

"Very cold to-day, Marth."

"Yes, very, Mr. Armstrong."

"And you have quite a long way to walk. I'm alone, and can take you and your little boy into my sleigh just as well as not. Jump in."

Martha Edmunds thanked him, accepted the offer, and as they had been friends from childhood, they chatted sociably.

"You were always very kind to me," said the widow. "No one could have been more so when my poor husband was injured, lingered so long, and finally died."

And tears dimmed the brightness of her eyes.

The intense cold or something caused great drops to stand in those of John Armstrong as well. Cold, most probably, for he tucked the robes more closely about his companion, and hurried his horses along faster.

"You were, Mr. Armstrong, and—"

"Call me, John, as you always did, Martha," he interrupted.

"And I'll never forget it Mr.—John, and I've often wished I could do something for you in return; and—But, John, you are driving past the lane leading to my poor little house. What is the matter with you? Whoa—"

"Might just as well try to hold a pair of locomotives," he answered, audibly, and then chuckled to himself at the idea of any team running away with him; and after a pause he continued, "But I reckon a little longer ride won't do you any harm, Martha, for I don't believe you have one very often."

"No," sighed the widow.

"Then we'll go on. There, you brutes, you are satisfied to stop now, you have got home; and, Martha, you might as well get out, and warm yourselves, and I've got something to show you."

He lifted out the widow and her boy before any objections could be made, and bade them run in while he put the blankets over his horses. A few minutes later he followed, and found her standing in the middle of the kitchen floor, laughing heartily.

"What upon earth has been going on here?" she questioned, looking roguish and rosy.

He told her and her laughter increased, she now and then ejaculating: "Just like a man!" and then asking where his "woman folks" were, and when they would be home.

"Not for a couple of days, and I shall either starve or kill myself by that time. By the way Martha, you and the boy must be hungry, and 'spose we get up a rousing dinner, and eat it together for—"

He turned away. Was to big hearted to even hint that his meals must generally be slim ones. But she caught the idea, and in her heart blessed him for his tender consideration.

It didn't take John Armstrong very long to chop wood, and when he returned Martha had laid aside bonnet and shawl, found an apron, and was busy clearing up the wreck. With his assistance this was soon accomplished, and order brought from chaos. Then he slaughtered a couple of chickens, dressed them, and blundered around until Martha laughingly told him he was only in the way, and, sitting down where he could watch her, he took the little boy in his lap, and attempted to amuse him by telling stories.

But he made even more blundering work than at housekeeping. His eyes and thoughts were upon the woman whom by strategy he had gotten to cook his dinner; and a trim figure was Martha Edmunds', fully ten years his junior, with wavy, nut-brown hair, clear, blue eyes, full, red lips, white teeth, round waist, and, as she rolled up her sleeves to make biscuit, he would have sworn there never were more snowy and plump arms in the world.

And such a dinner! It always made his mouth water when he recollected it. He fancied chickens must enjoy being cooked in such a fashion, that no woman, living or dead, ever made such puddings or pies, that potatoes were never mashed so white, rich, and smooth, that a table was never arranged so daintily.

He ate and ate until there was a "comfortable pain" beneath his vest, and then laid the little fellow away to take a nap while he assisted Martha in clearing the table. That done, the floor swept, and the house "tidied" up, both declared it was the pleasantest day they had passed for many years.

"But," said the widow, suddenly, with the richest color flaming in her cheeks, "I must go home. How people would talk if they only knew."

"Wait until the boy wakes," suggested John. "I've been thinking of old times to-day, Martha."

"I don't wonder, when you had such a hard time getting breakfast. I'd have given anything to have seen you messing around."

And again she laughed merrily.

"It was no laughing matter for me. But, Martha, you have made the day very pleasant and happy for me, and as you say you wanted to pay me for my kindness, why, why,—"

"Oh! I would never be able to do that, John," she said. "You are so very, very good."

"I didn't think the debt was so very large," he answered, with a smile; "but if you can't pay the principal you might the interest."

"I don't know how, or I would," was the reply.

She sat with her hands folded demurely in her lap. Her face red as a peony, her eyes half veiled, and suspicious twitchings of roguishness at the corners of her mouth, for you can't find a young and buxom widow fool enough not to understand a man's actions every time, and especially when he is getting up courage to talk "sweet and pretty."

"Well, Martha, I'll show you how," he said.

And instantly one arm was around her waist, the other around her neck, with the hand resting under, and turning up the dimpled chin, and, with "This is the how," he kissed her warmly.

"Oh! oh! for shame, John!" she exclaimed.

"Hush! You will wake up the boy," he whispered, drawing her still nearer to him. "Let me see, Martha, how many years' interest do you owe me?"

"It must be five, John," she whispered, with the greatest sham of innocence.

"Yes, and well compound it."

And he did!

"You call that interest?" she said; laughing, as soon as she could get somewhat free from his embrace.

"Certainly."

"Then what is the principal, John?"

"Yourself, Martha."

And as she started to run away, he followed, caught, and seemed to never tire of collecting his dues.

"Be still, John. What if any one should come?"

He didn't care for all the world. Gained her promise to become his wife, promised on his part to be a father to her boy, and—

Her hand stopped any further suggestions, and at last he took her home.

"I said, Martha, to myself this morning that I had half a mind to do it," were his words as he was about taking his leave.

"And I should think you had done it," she laughed, as she playfully shut the door in his face.

For both warmth had come,—the warmth of the heart; and soon as man and wife their interest became mutual, and the principal of love made them very contented and happy.

A WOMAN'S AFFLICTIONS.

"It's all very well to talk about working for the heathen," said one, as the ladies of the circle put aside their sewing, "but I'd like to have some one tell me what I'm to do with my husband."

"What's the matter with him?" asked a sympathetic old lady.

"William is a good man," continued the first, waving her glasses in an argumentative kind of way, "but William will invent. He goes inventing around from morning till night, and I have no peace or comfort. I didn't object when he invented a fire escape, but I did remonstrate when he wanted me to crawl out of the window one night to see if it worked well. Then he originated a lock for the door, that wouldn't open from midnight until morning, so as to keep burglars out. The first time he tried it he caught his coat tail in it, and I had to walk around him with a pan of hot coals all night to keep him from freezing."

"Why didn't he take his coat off?"

"I wanted him to, but he stood around till the thing opened itself trying to invent some way of unfastening it. That's William's trouble. He will invent. A little while ago he got up a cabinet bedstead that would shut and open without handling. It went by clockwork. William got into it and up it went. Bless your heart, he stayed in there from Saturday afternoon till Sunday evening, when it flew open and disclosed William with the plans and specifications of a patent wash-bowl that would tip over when it got so full. The result of that was I lost all my rings and a breastpin down the waste pipe. Then he got up a crutch for a man that could also be used as an opera glass. Whenever the man leaned on it up it shut, and when he put it to his eye to find William it flew out into a crutch and almost broke the top of his head off."

"Don't any of his inventions amount to anything?"

"He says they do. Once he invented a rope ladder to be worn as a guard chain and lengthened out with a spring. He put it around his neck, but the spring got loose and turned it into a ladder and almost choked him to death. Then he invented a patent boot-heel to crack nuts with, but he mashed his thumb with it and gave it up. His coal scuttle has made more trouble than anything else. It was riveted to the grate and when the fire got low it would turn over and pour on coal. The rivets got rusty so he couldn't get it off, and I just sit up in bed and listen to that scuttle all night. Then he arranged a corn popper so it would wiggle itself, and now he can't stop it. You can hear that popper going around in the closet, and he won't let me throw it away, because he wants to invent something to hold it still. Why he has got a washtub full of inventions. One of them is a prayer-book that always opens at the right place. We tried it one morning at church, but the wheels and springs made such a row that the sexton took William out by the collar and told him to leave his fire engines home when he came to worship. The other day I saw him going up the street with the model of a grain elevator sticking out of his hip pocket, and he is fixing up an improved shot tower in our bed-room."

"Does he make any money out of his inventions?"

"He doesn't appear to. The other night a man came down and wanted William to get up a patent umbrella fastening. Since then he has wrecked all the umbrellas and parasols in the house. We haven't a thing to use if it should rain. Now he's at work on a combined cat and rat trap. The cats and rats go in at different ends and eat each other up—at least he says they will; and after that he is going at a pair of pantaloons, in which a man can fall down without spraining his leg. William means well, but he's got that mania for inventing, and I don't know where it will end." And the old lady sighed as she started for home to see what new inconvenience her ingenious husband was preparing to perpetrate.

A BED IN A BATH TUB.

Some men can sleep anywhere and on anything, except a lounge. There is something about an ordinary lounge that will drive away sleep from the sleepiest person in the world.

A person will sit straight up in a pew and go to sleep while the minister is doing his best to keep the sleeper awake, but let the same man go home and lie down on a lounge and he can't go to sleep to save his head.

Nobody knows what it is about a lounge that drives sleep away. Harry Morrison, a young gas fitter of Eu Claire, who is boarding at his brother-in-law's, was asked to sleep on the lounge in the sitting-room as it might be necessary to call him to go for the doctor.

He never was much on lounges any way, but there was nothing mean about him, so he prepared to go to his rest in order to be handy in case of emergency. He camped down, and for two hours tried to go to sleep. Sometimes the back of the lounge would rear up and strike him in the back, and then it would stab him some other place. The springs would work up through the cover and corkscrew themselves into his flesh, and every hair of the lounge cover seemed to stand on end and run into his vital parts.

He got nervous and wished they would call him and send him clear to Chippewa Falls after a doctor. Finally he got up and went into the bath-room where there was a bath-tub which looked as if it would make a downy bed, such as an angel might sleep in, compared with the awful lounge.

He got some quilts and a pillow and put them in the bath-tub and lay down in it, and in five minutes he was asleep. Most young men kick more or less in their sleep, and Harry was no exception. He kicked, and his foot came in contact with the faucet, and turned the water on. The cold water struck the quilts and made no noise to awaken him, but gradually the cold fluid found its way up his trowsers legs, along his spine, and in fact all over his body.

He began to dream that he was running for Vice President on the ticket with Charles Francis Adams. Then his dream changed, and he fancied he was on an expedition to the Arctic regions, and while he was lunching on a piece of frozen boiled seal, a polar bear was eating his feet off. Then he dreamed he was shoveling snow on the railroad, and a snowplow ran into him and threw him forty feet in the air. It was at this time that he was grabbed by the hair of his head by his brother-in-law, and jerked out of the bath-tub under the impression that he was trying to commit bathtubicide.

The brother-in-law, who had got up to call him, found him pearly covered with water, and snoring as sweetly as a deacon in church.

THE WOUNDED PRESIDENT.

It is with sincere pleasure that we hail the prospect of President Garfield's final recovery from the wound inflicted upon his person by a depraved political vagabond and would be murderer. True, a relapse may yet produce fatal consequences, but the President's steady improvement, under the watchful care of eminent surgical attendants, and the aid of a Power mightier than human, warrants the expectation that his life will be spared and official duties resumed at no very distant day.

If the President passes the danger line, the proposal to render national thanks unto Almighty God, by the Governors of States designating the same day for that purpose throughout the Union, commends itself to general approval.

The hand of an all-wise Providence is not withheld from the affairs of nations. Repeatedly has it been extended for the guidance and protection of our own beloved land, and gratitude bids that we as a people should acknowledge its saving interference.

The recent sad event affords abundant food for reflection. Startling as a thunder-bolt from out a cloudless sky, came the news from Washington that the President, in a time of unbroken peace, had been felled to the earth by an assassin's bullet and lay quivering between life and death.

There was no sign of disorder, not a whisper of revolution, but profound anxiety among all classes for the personal welfare of the stricken officer and stern detestation of the national outrage that had been committed.

No man with a particle of patriotism in his breast and decency on his tongue did other than severely denounce the base attempt to destroy by violence the official head of the Republic, and here, and there, when a partisan zealot dared utter contrary feelings, he was at once and properly overwhelmed with popular indignation.

A great party that had strenuously opposed the election of Mr. Garfield, with signal unanimity heaped instant execration upon the head of his murderous assailant, and anxiously longed for the President's restoration to health and vigor.

All of which certainly speaks well for the character of the American people and the solidity of their government, and if the infamous design to hurl into the jaws of death a Chief Magistrate, prompted by the corruption of partisan politics, shall eventuate in overthrowing that vicious cause and making moral excellence supreme, lasting national good will be the ultimate effect, and the present prove a silver lining to a darkened cloud.

Let us render thanks and battle for the right.

AT ALBANY.

The even tenor of the dead-lock in the New York Legislature, over a Senator to replace the resigned (?) Conkling, still drifts on. After the retirement of platt, no "official stalwart" nomination was made, and on Saturday last the long-term vacancy was filled by the election of Warner Wood-pulp Miller—at that time a member of the House of Representatives. To say that the Senator-elect is unworthy to succeed (even indirectly) Conkling, is enough detraction. He most certainly is unfit in principle and character to occupy a position once filled by William H. Seward.

AT THE SICK BED.

The President's progress up to the time of our going to press, is steady and uniform—with the exception of a slight relapse, recently. He rests well, and the wound continues to discharge favorably. Altogether, the attending surgeons report the condition of their patient as being as satisfactory as could be desired. His appetite is daily becoming stronger, and his physical strength keeps pace with it, but a light diet is still prescribed, small quantities of animal food being allowed only in the morning.

Guiteau has made a villainous confession which contains some remarkable facts. He did not act on a sudden impulse, but was fully prepared for the deed. As far back as the 18th of May, or six weeks before he fired the shots of the 2d of July, he came to his murderous determination; and before the close of the month of May he was searching through Washington for the kind of pistol he desired. This pistol he procured on the 8th of June, and at once began to practice with it. Four days afterward, or on the 12th of June (Sunday), he equipped himself with his pistol and followed the President to church; but, finding the circumstances unfavorable, he did not use it. During that week he visited the church, examined it with reference to the President's seat, and was satisfied he could accomplish his purpose, which he determined to carry out there the next Sunday; but learning the President would leave the city on Saturday, he made preparation to shoot him at the depot, practicing once more with his pistol in the early hours of that morning. He was kept from his purpose at that time, according to his own story, by his sympathies—Mrs. Garfield looked so frail that he had not the heart to shoot her husband in her presence. Four days afterwards, when the President was out riding, Guiteau armed himself with the pistol, and watched for an opportunity, which, however, he did not find. Again, on the 1st of July, when watching for the President, who came out of the White House alone, he followed him as far as the residence of Mr. Blaine, and when the President with Mr. Blaine returned to the White House he again followed them; but on neither of these occasions did he find his opportunity. It was the next day that he perpetrated the crime, having previously examined the pistol and tried the trigger.

The Republican papers find food for comment in the alleged wealth of the Democratic candidate for Governor of Ohio. They say that he will spend money in the campaign. The use of money in political campaigns is a great evil, but there are differences even in that. The difference between the Ohio Democratic candidate and the Republican is this: The former, if he spends money in the campaign, will use his own. The Republicans use the public money filched from the Treasury, as in the case of Indiana which, last fall, was carried for the Republican candidates with Star route funds.—True American.

"What are we here for except to get offices?" asked Flannigan, of Texas, at the Chicago convention. The convention laughed and applauded the frankness of Flannigan. Guiteau was there and heard it.

Proceedings of the Board of Chosen Freeholders of the County of Union, N. J.

[OFFICIAL.]

ELIZABETH, N. J., July 7, 1881.

The Board of Chosen Freeholders of the County of Union met at the Court House in the city of Elizabeth, on Thursday, July 7th, 1881, at 2 p. m.

Present—Director Martine and Freeholders Briant, Clark, Doty, Eller, Forsyth, Hubbard, Isenmann, Melick, Mapes, Newbury, Runkle, Smith, Sullivan, Thompson—15.

Absent—Freeholder Randolph.

The minutes of the last meeting were read (omitting bills ordered paid) and on motion approved as read.

The Director stated that in view of a recent event he desired to offer an important resolution, and requested Freeholder Hubbard of Plainfield to take the chair.

Freeholder Hubbard in the chair.

The Director then requested a suspension of the rules for the object named.

Which was carried.

By the Director:

Whereas, Since the last regular meeting of the Board, a thrill of horror has passed over our land carrying grief and sorrow to every home, caused by the attempt of an assassin upon the life of the executive head of our republic, the contemplation of which crime is so revolting to every sense of humanity and patriotism, that we feel it calls for an expression from representatives of the people wherever assembled; therefore, speaking for ourselves, and in behalf of the citizens of Union County, be it

Resolved, That in this attempt upon the life of our President, we feel that a blow has been struck at every individual and every individual interest in our Union; therefore, language falls far short of expressing our indignation and condemnation of the crime, and we do unite our prayers with those of the civilized world for the restoration of the President to health; we also extend to him, his distressed wife and afflicted family, the assurance of our keenest heartfelt sympathy in this hour of their great sorrow and suffering;

Resolved, That a copy of this preamble and resolution be forwarded by our clerk to the Secretary of State, to be by him transmitted at a proper time to the President or his family.

Freeholder Forsyth moved that the preamble and resolution be adopted and printed with the minutes of the Board.

The chair called for the ayes and nays by a rising vote.

Upon the call for the ayes, every member rising in his place, the preamble and resolution was declared adopted by a unanimous vote.

After which the Director resumed the chair.

COMMUNICATIONS.

A communication from Frank Bergen, Esq., attorney in the county line case between Union and Essex Counties, informing the Board that the decision is in favor of Union county, was read.

On motion, received and placed on file.

A communication from the County Physician relative to the case of a man killed March 22d, on the Central R. R., was read:

On motion, received and placed on file.

The following from the County Attorney was read:

ELIZABETH, N. J., July 7, 1881.

To the Honorable the Board of Chosen Freeholders of Union County:

GENTLEMEN:

Since the last meeting of your Board, the following causes have been argued in the Supreme Court of this State:

Sheridan Collector, vs. Brewster, Treasurer of Rahway; the same against Langstaff, Treasurer of Rahway; same vs. VanWinkle, Treasurer of Plainfield, and Fairbank, late Police Justice, vs. Sheridan, Collector.

In these cases it is not probable a decision will be given before the November term of the Court. The money due on the peremptory writ of mandamus, issued against VanWinkle, Treasurer of Plainfield, in February last, amounting to $6,206.64, has been paid, but not until after an argument for rehearing was had on this application, in which eminent counsel was engaged on both sides, but even when this application was denied, the Treasurer refused to pay until proceedings were taken to attach him for contempt of court. At the hearing of this motion he made another application for leave to pay the money into court, and on this argument it was decided he must pay to the County Collector, for the reason that he was in contempt and the court would not hear him until he had obeyed the writ. He paid the money on Saturday last, but immediately gave me two notices to appear before the Supreme Court, on the Wednesday following, to answer to two new applications; first, to have the County Collector directed to pay this money into court; the second, to obtain a rehearing of our original application for a mandamus. These motions were argued yesterday and the Court reserved its decision. For the purpose of obtaining a rehearing a great mass of irrelevant testimony has been taken. The authorities of the city of Plainfield evince a disposition to use every means in their power to thwart and defeat the payment and even collection of the State and County taxes. Through their Common Council a resolution directing their officials to proceed with the collection of these taxes was defeated. They sought the opinion of eminent counsel in Jersey City, and because that opinion advised them to pay these taxes, they repudiated it.

I deem it my duty to acquaint the Board with these facts; that the attitude of the City of Plainfield toward the County may become known to you.

Yours very truly,
P. H. GILHOOLY,
County Attorney.

On motion, received and ordered spread upon the minutes.

COMMITTEE REPORTS.

Town Committee on Public Buildings:

To the Board of Chosen Freeholders of the County of Union:

GENTLEMEN—Your Committee on Public Buildings would report that for a long time it has been contemplated to either build a fire-proof, or get a safe or safes of sufficient capacity to hold all the books and records of your Board as well as the books of the County Collector, the safe we have is old and much too small to hold one-quarter of the books and papers that should be under lock and key and safe from fire. The question with your committee has been as to where to build a fire proof, the location settled on had been between the Court room and record building, over the alleyway, changing one of the windows in our room into a door; this would necessitate the closing of a window in the Court room, one window in the Freeholders' room, darken the window in the hallway on the first floor and also a window in the record room of the County Clerk, and this may cause a considerable more dampness in the record room and hallway, which at the present time are none too dry. After looking about to see if any other arrangement could be devised, your committee find that three fireproofs can be built in the Freeholders' room similar to those in use in the front office of the County Clerk; by building on those now in the County Clerk's office would bring the three in the Freeholders' room in the rear corner against the Court House wall, this would encroach somewhat on the dimensions of our room, but would obviate all the other objections, therefore we think it the most desirable. We have had a rough estimate of the cost, made without the shelving, and think it cannot cost to exceed $315 to finish it in a way to be as little detriment as possible to the room. We herewith submit a resolution for the action of the Board if our views meet with your approbation.

All of which is respectfully submitted.

WM. H. BRIANT,
WM. J. THOMPSON,
GEORGE W. DOTY,
Committee.

Elizabeth, July 7th, 1881.

On motion the report was received and placed on file.

From Stationery Committee:

To the Board of Chosen Freeholders of the County of Union:

GENTLEMEN—

Your Committee on Stationery beg leave to report on the matter of indexes to mortgages which was referred to them at your last meeting.

We have examined said indexes and find them very much worn; in some the leaves are loose, in others the alphabet letters are worn away; about two years ago they were rebound and some placed in new covers, so that now repairs are out of the question.

The system that has been in use in this county only indexed the mortgages one way, or two names only, we understand at the present time most of the counties index them mortgagees and mortgagors; we are also informed by the members of the bar as well as by one of our members of the Legislature, that it is only a question of a very short time when we will be compelled to index them in that way, in fact a bill was before the Legislature last winter to that effect, so that copies of the present index books would be a waste of time and money, if in a year or so a new system would have to be commenced.

As to the cost we find it a difficult matter to arrive at with exactness, the first ten books are large and very closely written containing it is estimated at least fifty-four hundred names (the largest deed books have only twenty-one hundred) the number of mortgage books are fifty-one (51) the first ten have eight hundred (800) pages, the balance six hundred (600) pages. In indexing them mortgagees and mortgagors, the names would have to be taken from the original mortgage books without regard to the old index books, and then compared the new with the mortgage books, the cost per book would certainly be more than those for deeds recently made.

The conclusions of your committee are:

1st. That new indexes to the mortgage books are now a necessity.

2d. That they should be indexed mortgagees and mortgagors.

3d. That the books should be first-class in every particular as to paper, binding, etc., and that the work should be done by the County Clerk, who, under the law, is the custodian of the books and responsible for the safety and correctness of all records.

We herewith submit a resolution for the action of the Board.

All of which is respectfully submitted.

Elizabeth, July 7th, 1881.

On motion received and placed on file.

From the Committee of the Whole on bridge at Vreeland's mill, Cranford.

To the Board of Chosen Freeholders of the County of Union:

GENTLEMEN—

The Committee of the Whole met on the ground at the bridge in Cranford township at Vreeland's mill, June 9th, to take into consideration the necessity of building or repairing said bridge, would respectfully report that we find at that point on the Rahway River two bridges on a road leading from the mill into Westfield township; said road is located over and on the mill dam. One bridge is wholly for the overflow of the river, and one partly for the overflow of the river and partly for use of the mill as a head-race. The county has built the bridges and kept them in repair; it is this latter bridge that is much decayed and in a dangerous condition for heavy loads and should be made anew, as there is no sound woodwork to build upon.

All of which is respectfully submitted.

JOHN ISENMANN,
Chairman.

July 7, 1881.

On motion the report was received and placed on file.

Freeholder Mapes, from the Committee on County line bridges, between Union and Morris counties, reported verbally as to the condition of said bridges, and recommended that the necessary repairs be made.

On motion the report was received.

RESOLUTIONS.

By Freeholder Randolph:

Whereas, The desk so many years used by the late Jacob Seiple, deceased, in the County Clerk's office, and which was his individual property, and cost him $175, and the use of which, or one similar to it is indispensible; therefore be it

Resolved, That the County Collector be authorized to pay to the widow of the late Jacob Seiple one hundred and twenty-five dollars for the same, for the use and convenience of the County Clerk.

On motion referred to the Committee on Public Buildings.

By Freeholder Briant:

ONE of the most unjust and utterly ridiculous rumors that have ever crept into the columns of the press from an obscure source, is that inserted by the Rahway Times to the effect that a petition is being circulated and signed in this city requesting Mayor Randolph to resign. We would naturally suppose that the journal referred to, would be above publishing any such item when lacking the slightest responsible endorsement of its authenticity. It is false.

YOUR taxes will be higher this year than they were last. The present Council ordered that an additional tax levy of $800 should be imposed upon the citizens of Plainfield for the purpose of purchasing a library, which will be practically of no use to any one, while the street lights are cut off because there is no money to keep them lighted. Also you are taxed an additional sum to pay judgments against the city. "All on account—all on account of our New York Council."

NORTH PLAINFIELD PARAGRAPHS.

The trial of John Bute Holmes, of enviable notoriety, for alleged assault on his wife, which was to have come off at Blatz's Hotel last Monday was postponed for one week.

Complaints are made by near residents to the engine house, of obscene and boisterous language of certain parties during late hours of the night in that vicinity. If the names of offending parties will be given to the Foreman of the Company, we are sure he will see that the nuisance is abated, as it ought to and must be.

A cat of a miscellaneous species, belonging to Mr. George Stewart, of Washingtonville, was noticed as having some peculiar animal in his mouth, recently, which upon examination proved to be a gray adder. The snake was one of the most poisonous kind, and the subsequent death of the cat may justly be expected.

SCOTCH PLAINS SCRATCHINGS.

The members of Good Will Lodge, K. of P. of this village, with their families, cousins and aunts, went on an excursion to Boynton Beach, by stage, on Saturday last. A number of brethren of the Plainfield Lodge of the same order, joined them. The occasion proved a most enjoyable one to all concerned.

Some audacious thief stole Jimmy Baker's harness on Friday night, and but for the fact that Jimmy takes the precaution of stripping the wheels from his wagon and hiding them every night, undoubtedly he would have been relieved of his vehicle also.

MISCELLANEOUS.

Sitting Bull and about 200 of his people have surrendered to Major Brotherton at Fort Buford. He was forced to surrender to avoid starvation.

There are two little Garfields at Mentor, Abram and Irving, who are awaiting the President's convalescence before they can rejoin their parents. On Saturday they cooked up the following despatch and sent it to Washington: "Dear Papa: Hurry up and get well and come out here to see us. We are having a good time, and send you love." The message was read to the President.

The Minnesota cyclone last week swept a track one mile wide and forty miles long. It seems to have reached its greatest violence in the town of New Ulm, where more than thirty persons were killed and wounded, and the town was almost destroyed, the damage being estimated at from $350,000 to $500,000. The suddenness of such a blow to a young community, and the thoroughness of the work of destruction, would break the spirit of any but a courageous people, especially as there is no insurance to be recovered. The inhabitants of New Ulm are already at work, however, with characteristic Western energy, to repair damages—not an entirely novel occupation for them, as they say this is the hardest blow New Ulm has ever received, "next to the Indian massacre."

A train on the Chicago, Rock Island and Pacific Railroad was robbed at Winston station, near Cameron, Missouri, on Friday evening. The robbers were six in number, and supposed to have been under the leadership of the notorious Jesse James. Some of them boarded the train at Cameron, and the remainder got on at Winston. They suddenly rose up, drew their revolvers, and shot the conductor, Westfall, dead. They also killed a passenger who showed signs of resistance, and then went to the express car and overpowered the messenger, Charles Murray, compelling him to open the safe. It is not known how much money they got from the safe—it was probably several thousand dollars, but not as much, evidently, as they expected. The terror-stricken passengers made no resistance, and the ruffians escaped.

The Deadly Toy Pistol.

John McGuigan, a boy living in Mount Holly, who shot himself in the hand with a pistol last week, died from lockjaw on Tuesday last.

Four boys have died in Washington within a few days past of lockjaw, caused by wounds from toy pistols.

Four more cases of lockjaw resulting from wounds from toy pistols are reported in Baltimore, making 17 in all as a consequence of the 4th of July. Three of the new cases have proved fatal; the fourth is not expected to recover.

Garrett Stryker, aged 12 years, died at Trenton on Saturday, from tetanus, caused by a wound made with a toy pistol on the Fourth.

A young lad of Chambersburg died from the same disease and cause last week.

AN ORDINANCE

Regulating Sewage and Drainage in Peace Street, North Avenue and adjacent territory.

Whereas, on the 18th day of December, 1874, an ordinance was passed regularly laying a sewer to drain through Peace street, certain territory adjacent thereto, and

Whereas, said sewer is a public work under the care of the city, and

Whereas, said sewer has been used by the railroad company and, to some extent, by other parties for the disposition of sewage matters in a way to create a nuisance, and to endanger the public health, and

Whereas, the Mayor reports a willingness of the railroad company to construct, at its own expense, a capacious and substantial receptacle, on plans so specified, for the deposit of said sewage matter, in order to the abatement of the nuisance, now, therefore,

The Inhabitants of the city of Plainfield, by their Common Council, do enact as follows:

Section 1. That the improvement as set forth in the letter of the railroad company bearing date July 8, 1881, and the plans hereto attached, upon the conditions therein set forth and the drainage system described therein, are hereby approved and authorized and accepted.

Sec. 2. That the said drainage be under the care of the street commissioner, who in all things relative thereto shall act under advice of the street committee.

Sec. 3. That the street commissioner is directed to construct at once, at an expense not to exceed $50, an additional cesspool for the reception of overflow or water drainage at some convenient point on the line of the Peace street sewer.

Sec. 4. That any private citizen may, by the payment in advance on the first day of August of each year of ten dollars to the city treasurer, make properly trapped sewage connection with the sewer, under arrangements to be approved by the street committee, and may maintain the same at the discretion of the said committee so long as the said fee is annually paid.

Sec. 5. That in cases where the terms of the last section (4) are not complied with the street commissioner is hereby charged with the duty of severing any private sewage connection with the said sewer.

Sec. 6. That all ordinances and resolutions and parts of ordinances and resolutions inconsistent herewith are hereby repealed. 15jy2w

"LIVABLE" weather!

No dog-pounder yet and consequently no mad dogs.

KEEP off the railroad track unless you're inside the cars.

A LARGE crop of chestnuts is promised—the blossoms being plentiful.

A fellow has been arrested and fined in Phillipsburg for corner loafing.

WE are told that quail and rabbit will be numerous during the coming season.

No one need be idle now. Opportunities to work for good pay, are numerous.

ANOTHER comet reported—the fourth so far, and other "observatories" to be heard from.

THE usual number of accidents incident upon a celebration of the glorious Fourth, is reported by our exchanges.

CUPID's occupation as a toxophelite is gone, and he now uses the hammock as a medium in which two hearts may beat as one.

MUCH to the regret of the public, it is feared that Mr. Dunlap will be "unable" to accept his election as a councilman in Mr. Coriell's place.

A BEAUTIFUL little pony-cart with all appropriate accessories, is daily seen on our streets. It is from the stock farm of John I. Holly Esq.

THE National Greenback Labor Party seems to be the only political organization that makes any public appearance of activity in our midst.

THE magnificent private residence and grounds of the late David W. Weiss, Esq., will be sold on Thursday of next week, at 4 p. m., on the premises.

THE Bound Brook Land League is to hold a grand meeting in that town on Sunday afternoon next. Delegates from Plainfield's League are invited to be present.

PICNICS, festivals, and excursions are offered every day, but many patiently look forward to the 30th of August when the Crescent Avenue Presbyterians hie to Ocean Grove.

TAKE the brick out of your hat and put a moist cabbage leaf in its place instead of smoking it, and keep on the shady side of the street. This is a preventative of sunstroke.

THE Corporation Counsel has instituted four suits in this city and North Plainfield, which are now pending before the Supreme and Circuit Courts, testing the power to collect arrearages of taxes.

THE C. R. R. carpenters are cruelly closing up the apertures formed by the beams under the overhanging roof at the depot, where the industrious sparrow was wont to build its nest and raise its progeny.

THE daily stage trips to Washington Rock from this city are extensively patronized by the public. A fine ride, beautiful scenery, bracing air and a big dinner are a few of the attractions to be enjoyed.

PEACH orchards are beginning to show signs of ripening. In two or three week's time the luscious fruit will be in market. There being a poor outlook for peaches down in Delaware, the Jersey peaches will roost pretty high, we expect.

THE Elizabeth Base Ball Club that was expected to play in this city on Saturday last against the Potter nine, failed to arrive and a "scrub game" between sides picked from the disappointed crowd that had assembled, was the only diversion of the afternoon.

ON Thursday afternoon of next week at four o'clock, on the premises, will be sold at auction by A. L. Bleecker, the magnificent country seat and grounds of the late David W. Weiss on Park avenue. A full description of the property will be found in our advertising columns.

A GRAND Moonlight Picnic will be held on Thursday evening, August 4th, in the grounds surrounding St. Mary's Hall on Fourth street. Music will be furnished by Bannan's orchestra, and other attractive features will be presented. The proceeds are to be devoted to furnishing the parsonage of the new church.

A LARGE number of those who desire to learn "what are the wild waves saying," will undoubtedly leave for Ocean Grove, etc., on the First Baptist Excursion this morning, should the weather prove favorable. About 500 tickets have been distributed among the scholars alone, and an immense crowd is expected.

THE C. R. R. of N. J., advertises in this issue daily excursions to Coney Island direct by steamer "Chancellor," connecting at Bay Ridge with Sea Beach R. R., and arriving at West Brighton in two hours from Plainfield. The fare for the round trip is one dollar, and an enjoyable ride by rail and sail by water may thereby be experienced.

THE excursion that seems likely to prove one of the most attractive of the season, is that on Thursday, August 18th, to Excelsior Park on the Hudson. It is under the auspices of St. Mary's T. A. B. Society of this city, and managed by a committee composed of Messrs. Peter Galbraith, John Harding, Peter Flynn, John Welsh and John Hickey.

MESSRS. Shepherd, Johnson & Godown have been awarded the contract for the building of the palatial residence about to be erected in Netherwood by Henry P. Tallmadge, Esq. It is to be finished by June 1st, 1882, and when completed will be the largest and handsomest house in the vicinity. It is to be 60 feet by 90 in extent, and finished in hard woods throughout.

A LITTLE lad by the name of Willie Farley, was in some way or other thrown from the back of a wagon on which he was riding, on Wednesday afternoon last at the corner of Park avenue and Second street. He fell in such a position that one of the hind wheels passed over his left foot which was bare, and severely bruised it although fortunately breaking no bones.

AT about 10:30 o'clock on Monday night, a false alarm of fire was started by a man running through Fourth street from the direction of Liberty. The bell was rung, and the department all turned out and ran some distance up Park ave., before being ordered back. No damage, except such as was inflicted on each other by two rival firemen of No. 1 and No. 2 Hose companies.

ONE of the most select companies, although not the largest that has left our city, visited Long Branch and Ocean Grove on Thursday of last week and enjoyed itself thoroughly. The excursion was under the management of Messrs. E. Laing and E. Nelson, and so ably conducted that the future ones they propose giving will undoubtedly be more extensively patronized.

WE believe that those Philadelphia papers will lie. Read what the News says: "On a Coney Island verandah the other day three hundred or more gentlemen were promenading with as many Brooklyn ladies, when some wag yelled, "Look out, your wife's coming." Thirteen couple continued their promenade. The others slid around the back way and took the first train home."

THE "dog days" commenced on July 18th. This season, which we believe lasts six weeks, is regarded by many persons as more unhealthy than that which immediately precedes or succeeds it, and as being a time when mankind is more liable to attacks from disease from exposure or imprudence in their general habits. If there is no foundation in fact for this belief, it is a superstition of long standing.

LAST Friday was St. Swithin's Day, the day, from time immemorial, said to be the index for the weather for forty days following it.

"St. Swithin's Day, if thou dost rain,
For forty days it will remain;
St. Swithin's Day, if thou be fair,
For forty days 'twill rain nae mair."

It didn't rain in this city on Friday, so that there will be an opportunity to test the reliability of the proverb. It is to be hoped that the sign will fail this time. Unless it does we shall have a very dry time, and street sprinklers will be in great demand for the next five weeks.

THE Hunterdon County Democrat says: "A Plainfield paper is responsible for the statement that there is a cat in that city which jumps up on the sink, grabs the pump-handle and pumps herself a drink whenever she gets thirsty. This, the Rahway Democrat thinks, is in the CATegory of running her own CATNIP."

It is with sincere regret that we are called upon to chronicle the death—last week—of the animal referred to; and we now trust our contemporaries will cease their flippant reference regarding the deceased's intelligence.

MR. Randolph of New Brooklyn, brother of Barzilla J. Randolph, Esq., of this city, had a horse stolen from his barn, by some party unknown, on Friday night last. The stables of a neighbor named Fox, were also visited at the same time, and a harness taken. Learning of each other's loss, the following morning, Messrs. Randolph and Fox at once started on what seemed a vain search for the thief, but were agreeably surprised upon overtaking the missing horse, with the harness on him, walking along the road near Dunellen. The animal was unaccompanied by anyone, and the mystery regarding who purloined the property is yet unsolved.

THE summer is over half gone and as yet we have not had, altogether, a week of "trying" weather.

MR. James Connolly has purchased of Capt. Phillips the brick store building on Park avenue, now occupied by Garrett & Co.

GIVE us an ordinance against owning, selling, buying, carrying or having in possession any kind of revolver or pistol, toy (?) or otherwise.

WARREN's Steamer has been thoroughly overhauled and resuscitated under the direction of Chief Vail, and is now in a most satisfactory condition.

YOU can be supplied at your house, every morning, with Vienna bread and rolls fresh from the oven, by leaving your order at Walker's bakery on Park avenue.

MR. J. G. Cadmus, Livery merchant, Park avenue, has just made an addition to his large stock of horses of a pair of handsome black carriage horses of Kentucky breed.

ONE of the handsomest business wagons that traverse our thoroughfares, is that lately completed for Messrs. Arnold & Van Norstrand the popular grocers of Somerset street.

THERE will be preaching of the Gospel in the open air on Sunday afternoon, at 4:30, on the grounds of Mr. Paul Loizeaux, on Chatham street, at the foot of Water. Seats provided. All are welcome.

THE false economy of our neighbors in Red Bank, almost led to the destruction of that place by fire, recently. Plenty of water available and no apparatus to handle it, is a most condemnable state of affairs.

DON'T neglect the unusual opportunity offered on Thursday of next week, to purchase one of the most desirable private residences in the vicinity—that on Park avenue, occupied formerly by the late David Weiss, Esq.

THOSE of our citizens who seemed not to understand the item on their tax bill for '81, levying a percentage to meet judgments against the city, are informed that it is done under a law that so provides a way to meet such a liability.

MR. George Townley is suffering severely from an unfortunate casualty that happened to him a few days ago. While working upon a ceiling and looking up, a quantity of fresh lime was splashed into his eye, causing most terrible pain from which he has not as yet recovered.

"FEED the plant and the plant will feed you," is the very sensible advice given by Messrs. Curtiss & Griffen of Front street. To enable all growers of grain and vegetables to follow such suggestion, that firm is offering the very best line of phosphates and fertilizers in the country.

IN the case of W. J. Nelson vs. Lemuel W. Hart, et als., before the United States Court, at Trenton, on Tuesday last, a preliminary injunction was ordered on motion of Enos W. Runyon, counsel for plaintiff, W. J. Nelson, who desires to restrain Mr. Hart from putting down driven wells.

A FEMALE resident of this city recently saw fit to publicly express her opinion of the character of a lady neighbor in terms not even allowed by the unrevised edition. The two were taken before Judge Runyon on Tuesday, where the aggressor was given her choice of "$5 or 15 days." She paid the money.

EX-COUNCILMAN Marshall refuses to release the warrant for $125 ordered paid him by Council for services as Commissioner on the laying out of Linfield Avenue, a proposed new avenue from the depot to Front Street, without interest being added thereon, which will amount to some forty-five dollars.

Prospective Pleasure.

A committee of the Plainfield Saengerbund, composed of Messrs. E. Bachman, G. Bremer, H. Rohweder, W. Feibel and R. Laurent, are at present actively engaged in perfecting arrangements that will culminate on Thursday August 11th, in a grand moonlight picnic and summer-night's festival. Wooden's Grove has been selected wherein to hold the affair, an orchestra of eight pieces has been engaged to furnish melody for the dancers, and other attractions are being provided that will make the occasion one of the most successful of the year.

News from Judge Good.

We are in receipt of the following from ex-city Judge P. P. Good, who is making a tour of the Western States:

LIBERTY, UNION COUNTY, IND.,
16TH JULY, 1881.

GENTLEMEN:

I have traveled through five States and in Canada. The crops look poor. For the wheat sown in Michigan the farmers may get back their seed. The corn is drying up. No rain in the localities I have visited for six weeks. Nevertheless, the West is prosperous, Railroads gridironing all the States. I am surprised at the uprising in the Temperance cause. A grand convention is to be held in this State, at which Governor St. John, of Kansas, will be present. He says the Constitutional amendment is a grand success in Kansas and that the liquor laws there are successfully enforced. I am off for Missouri. A good word to all from

New Bishops for New Jersey.

A cable despatch announces the appointment by the Congregation of the Propaganda Fidei, at Rome, of two Bishops of the Roman Catholic Church to succeed Rt. Rev. M. J. Corrigan, Bishop of Newark, now elevated to the Archbishopric of New York.

Formerly the State of New Jersey, which comprised the Diocese of Newark, will be divided into two Dioceses, the boundaries of which are as yet unannounced. They will be known as the Diocese of Newark and of Trenton.

The newly appointed Bishops are Rev. W. M. Wigger, of Madison, Essex County, to the See of Newark, and Rev. M. J. O'Farrell, now pastor of St. Peter's Church, Barclay Street, New York City, to the See of Trenton. The latter gentleman is a noted divine, and one of the best theologians and historians of the church in this country. He is reputed to be one of the most distinguished pulpit orators in the United States. It is probable that St. Mary's Church, of Trenton, will be the Cathedral of the newly created Diocese of Trenton.

Sent Up.

Late on Thursday evening of last week, Mr. John Steiner at his cigar store on Somerset street was called upon by a young man who expressed a desire to purchase a meerschaum holder. A number was laid on the show case for the customer's inspection, but while the proprietor was reaching inside for others, the young man cooly pocketed five of those he was looking at and left the store before Mr. Steiner could reach the outside of the counter. Captain Dodd was notified and a general alarm sent out, which subsequently resulted in the capture of a suspected party by Officer Randolph. On being arraigned before Justice Wadsworth the next day, the prisoner gave his name as George Lawrence of Park place, Brooklyn, and his former occupation as a clerk in New York; but refused to make answer to the charge of larceny brought against him by Mr. Steiner, who identified him as the purloiner of the cigar holders. The value of the goods stolen was set at $6.50, and Lawrence was committed to the County Jail to await the action of the Grand Jury unless he should choose to appeal to the Court of Quarter Sessions for an examination at once. The stolen property was not found in the accused's possession, and has not yet been recovered.

Since the above was in type, the accused appeared before the Court referred to and was committed to the County Jail for three months. It seems that the "partisan bench," against which such a howl was instituted upon the appointment of ex-Mayor Harper, is the only body of the kind that has not shown itself culpably negligent in dealing out justice, for some time.

The Jolly Turn Verein.

A stream of young men in their Sunday clothes and young ladies in their best dresses, continuously and steadily making its way up Somerset street and into Wooden's Grove on Thursday afternoon and evening of last week, informed everybody what everybody already knew—that the Plainfield Turn Verein was holding one of the most successful festivals and out-door dances ever experienced in the vicinity. The great preparations made by the association through its committee of Messrs. Chas. Meyer, Geo. Becker, Peter Kelleher, Henry Meyer and Arthur Lisner, were on a most extensive scale, but the enormous patronage far exceeded the expectations of all. Old and young came by stage, by carriage and on foot, and Charley Cookey at the gate was compelled to call in an assistant to help him in his arduous duties. Those who crossed lots, climbed the fence and "rocked" the ticket taker, are also to be numbered by the score; so it is not surprising that the attendance was unequaled and the woods were full of the gay pleasure seekers.

Fenner's Quadrille Band supplied the dancers with music, and the commodious platform laid for the purpose was crowded at every dance. Interspersed between were exhibitions of the agility of Mr. Chas. Meyer and other members of the association, as well as finely sung melodies by the Saenger Bund delegation present. Large stands for the sale of solid and liquid refreshments were kept full of business, and large financial success is undoubtedly the result of the first annual affair of this growing society.

An Expression of Obligation.

Mr. J. Edward Flannery desires to express his sincere thanks to those neighbors and friends who so kindly and ably assisted him during the trying hours and circumstances of his wife's death.

Where is the Warden?

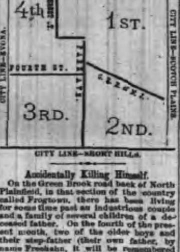
Complaints reach us that parties are in the habit of shooting with pistol and gun the black bass in the river at Raritan, N. J., which is claimed as illegal according to law, which reads:

"That it shall not be lawful to take at any time in any of the waters under the jurisdictions of the State, any black bass or Oswego bass, with any contrivance or device, excepting with hook and line, in the manner known as angling or with trawl, spoon or artificial bait, in the manner usually known as trolling, nor shall it be lawful to place any set lines in the waters of this State inhabited by black bass, Oswego bass, landlocked salmon, salmon trout or brook trout."

Where is the Fish Warden of the above locality, and why is not the law enforced?

The City's Wards.

For the benefit of those who failed to fully master the geographical construction of the map of wards published last week, we herewith again insert it, adding the position of the outer boundaries at the city lines. Cut it out and paste it in your hat.



Accidentally Killing Himself.

On the Green Brook road back of North Plainfield, in that section of the country called Frogtown, there has been living for some time past an industrious couple and a family of several children of a deceased father. On the fourth of the present month, two of the older boys and their step-father (their own father, by name Freshahn, it will be remembered was some years ago so severely burned in a fire that consumed the house he lived in, as to cause his death) were engaged in the presence of a younger brother, Frankie, in endeavoring to explode from a Smith & Wesson 22 calibre seven-shooter, a number of ball cartridges, intending to use the weapon during the day in firing "blanks" in celebration of the occasion. The hammer and inner works of the pistol, however, had become so rusty from disuse that it was found to be impossible to work it, and it was cast aside in a bureau drawer and forgotten.

On Wednesday morning last, between six and seven o'clock, after the husband had finished breakfast and had left for his day's labor, his wife who had lain down to sleep again was awakened by the loud report of a pistol in an adjoining room. She started up, but immediately following the sound her little son Frankie aged 6 years rushed through the doorway, threw himself into her arms and exclaiming "Mamma, I have shot myself," instantly expired. Dr. Endicott of this city was summoned, and upon his arrival found the cause of the death to be a bullet shot through the heart of the lad.

The unfortunate boy had taken the rusty pistol from the drawer where it had been thrown, and either in playing with it had accidentally discharged one of the chambers into his body, or he had in remembrance of his brothers' ineffectual efforts to fire it, been attempting the same thing with the terrible success that followed.

The Fair Association's New Officers.

A meeting of the Board of Directors of the "Union & Middlesex Counties' Mutual Agricultural Association" was held at the Mansion House, this city, Tuesday evening, June 19th, at which changes were made in officers and Directors, made necessary by the death of 1st Vice President Chas. A. Campbell and resignation of Director J. H. Platt. The following now constitute the officers of the Association:

President—John I. Holly.
1st Vice President—Nathan Robbins.
2d " " —J. Wesley Johnson.
3d " " —O. T. Waring.
Secretary—James S. Vosseller.
Treasurer—E. C. Pierson.

The vacancies in the Board of Directors were filled by the election of Eugene A. Gross, of North Plainfield in place of Mr. Campbell, deceased, and Joseph W. Yates, of Plainfield in place of Mr. Platt, resigned. The following resolutions of condolence were presented and adopted:

WHEREAS, Our esteemed and valued associate, Charles A. Campbell, has been removed from our Board by death, it seems fitting to us to place upon record some slight testimonial of our regard for our friend; therefore

Resolved, That the following be entered upon the minutes of the board, and that a copy of the same be sent to his family:

Charles A. Campbell was particularly endeared to the members of this Board by the scrupulously faithful manner in which he executed his trust as Director. Although living at a considerable distance from the place of meeting of the Board, in all the time he has been associated with us he has missed fewer meetings than any other member. He was ever ready with wise counsel, and never hesitated to undertake the performance of any labor however exacting, in behalf of our association.

We shall miss him greatly, both as a genial, social companion, and as a prudent, energetic co-worker, and we feel that both the members of the Board and the Association have lost one whose place it will be difficult and we fear well nigh impossible to fill. While mourning our own loss, we recognize that his family have suffered in the loss of husband and father a bereavement before which our own sorrow must pale. To that stricken family we extend our most heartfelt sympathy, and trust that after the first grief has passed they will find comfort in the fact that their loved one has left to them a spotless and honored name.

Active measures are being taken by the Board to make the approaching Third Annual Exhibition of the Association a greater success and more interesting occasion than any of its predecessors. $2,150 are offered as premiums in trotting, which comprises gentlemen's roadsters, owned in the counties of Union and Middlesex and North Plainfield; 2:30 class—open to all; three year olds—open to all; 2:45 class—open to horses owned in Union & Middlesex Counties and North Plainfield; trotting pairs—open to all; four year olds—open to all; 2:35 class—open to all; trotting teams owned in Union & Middlesex Co.'s and North Plainfield; stallions, owned in same places; 2:40 class—open to all; 3:00 class—open to all; free to all; 2:50 class—open to all and 5 year olds—open to all. Entries close at Mansion House, this city, Saturday, Sept. 10. The dates of the Fair are Sept. 26th, 27th, 28th, 29th and 30th. Trotting on last four days.

A Courageous Deed.

Two strangers driving a rather spirited bay horse to a light buggy, turned the corner of Park avenue and Second street so rapidly on Wednesday afternoon, as to overturn the vehicle and throw its occupants into the roadway. In an instant the horse, naturally terrified at the occurrence and enraged at the wreck clattering around its heels, started off on a run that would probably have been terminated by its own ruin. Mr. F. A. Pope of the Plainfield Bicycle Club, however, happened to see the accident; and as the animal rushed past him, that young gentleman sprang from the sidewalk, seized the maddened horse by the bit and clung to it in spite of the personal risk thus assumed. The horse struggled in the hands of its captor and pulled him along Park to the corner of North avenue—meanwhile frantically kicking the overturned buggy that dragged behind, and striking viciously with its front hoofs the young man who so bravely hung to the bridle. Mr. Pope was lifted from his feet a number of times during the perilous adventure, but subsequently succeeded in turning the horse into the curb at Rockfellow's corner where assistance arrived and the wrecked vehicle was detached from the traces. On being taken to Cadmus' stables, it was found that a few cuts around the heels of the horse were the only damages sustained, together with a broken wheel of the buggy. The two gentlemen that were thrown out were slightly bruised, but otherwise uninjured. Mr. Pope cannot be too highly praised for his courageous prevention of what might have been a serious accident to the horse, and possibly to other vehicles and their occupants that filled the streets at the time of the occurrence.

Benefits for the Firemen's Relief Assn.

For the information of insurance agents doing business in this city and North Plainfield, we would mention that an Act of the Legislature of this State, approved March 14th 1879, provides that 2 per cent. of all premiums received on policies issued by fire insurance companies not organized under the laws of New Jersey, shall be paid to the Treasurer of the Firemen's Relief Association. Many are not aware of such provision, and Treasurer Mallinson of the Plainfield Relief Association is actively engaged in bringing it to their notice. The First National Bank was notified of the existing law, recently, and immediately made out a statement of its receipts of fire insurance premiums since it had acted as the agent of certain companies. A check for about $44 (the amount of 2 per cent. on the total premiums received) was subsequently handed by the bank to Mr. Mallinson.

COMMUNICATED.

For "The Constitutionalist."

MESSRS. EDITORS:

I have just perused an article published in the Central Times of your city in six sections. As the writer seems to be slightly mixed in his facts as well as in his conclusions, I desire to call some attention to them. The article concludes by saying that the "court has decided nothing" which is not the case; as you know, proceedings were taken against your City Treasurer and City Collector; the court decided that it was the business of the City Treasurer to pay the State and County tax and would grant a mandamus against him only, and it decided upon figures furnished by your official, pages 8 and 9, that the City owed the County and ordered it paid; it decided that the Treasurer (though acting under advice of counsel and in accordance with the views of most of your council) was in contempt of court and again ordered the money paid, which he made no haste to do, (I presume under advice of counsel) so after a day or two a motion was made that he show cause why he should not be punished, after which the court again decided that he should pay the money forthwith and they would allow him to amend his return already made, (which was made I presume under advice of counsel). Now as to the article in question I will first take section No. 1. It says: "The court was misled last year as to what the City Treasurer had received, was lead to believe that he had received all money including State and County, School, &c., whereas he had received city tax only."

I would direct all inquiring minds to page 7 of the printed case which is in the hands of the court; there can be found the following: "Agreed by Council for the respective parties that all the State and County taxes received by the City Collector have been paid over by him to the County Collector" and "that the City Collector had received from Plainfield City tax more than a sufficient amount to pay the whole amount claimed" "this last named amount has been paid by the City Collector to the Treasurer to be used for the current expenses of the city as provided by the city charter," and all this argued and brought before the court ably by your ex-attorney. So No. 1 is worse than unfair, it is misrepresenting the case to your citizens through the press.

And now as to section No. 2; it says—

"The theory which the court says it acted upon was directly opposed to the theory which the County Attorney had laid down for the City Collector to base his actions upon, viz., that he should not pay any State and County taxes to the city Treasurer."

Now our County Attorney has no theories in this case at variance with the opinion of Judge Dixon and he has laid down nothing for the City Collector to base his actions upon, except possibly requesting him to forward moneys due, as he knew your city officials allowed him to do it, and it made but little difference to us which of your officials had that honor, for it is honorable to pay just debts. Now for No. 3; it says—

"The mean attempt made to effect a personal attachment against Treasurer VanWinkle, that is to put him in a prison for simply being honest to the city has miserably failed"

Mr. VanWinkle is respected by all who know him. Neither the County Attorney, myself, or any member of the County Board have any ill will or feeling against him. It was the Treasurer of the city of Plainfield we were dealing with, who (I presume under advise of Counsel and Council) would not obey the order of the court, and if he had not paid the money with interest, he probably would have before this been in confinement, not for being honest to the city but for disobeying the order of the court, (under advise also.) If the attempt in this line has been a failure, I fail to see it.

And now for the 4th; it says—

"The grab-all policy of the County officials which consists in taking money from the Collector and then demanding the same money over again from the City Treasurer does not seem to be entirely successful."

I am at a loss to know to what No. 4 refers, as no debt or bill should be paid twice, but I presume it has reference to the $3,300 paid by the City Collector since the mandamus was served. The said sum was received and credited as requested on 1880; we knew that your Attorney, Council and City Treasurer refused to recognize the mandamus which was for 1878-79, so that it was with pleasure we complied with the request, particularly so as it seemed to meet with the entire approbation of your Attorney, who wished it so stipulated in rehearsing testimony, page 31; it made no difference to us, but seemed to be pleasing to have us take the money that way, but you now owe $3,300 more on 1880.

Now for No. 5; it says—

"The Court having given a mandamus order on such admissions and stipulations as were made last year, regards it as a necessity to the maintenance of its consistency and authority to see that its order is obeyed, even though a different state of facts and a different and wider application of law have of late been developed. That is how we are at the mercy of the Court, with whom we certainly have no quarrel as to its present position."

Correct; the Court has seen to it that its order has been respected and obeyed, even refusing Plainfield the privilege asked of the County to credit tax money on 1880 instead of on the mandamus, and to think that Plainfield is at the "mercy" of a Court; "no criminal feels the halter draw with good opinion of the law," and again, "we have no quarrel with the Court in its present position," but by inference may have, and then "the wider applications of law have of late been developed." That sounds well for the 40 odd voters of that resolution to develop (contest) it up to the highest Court.

And now sixth and last; it says—

"The Court has decided nothing as to the merits of the case; it says in so many words: 'we say nothing' about the right that is for the City Treasurer to pay money to the County Collector. This reservation by the Court of the main question is a hopeful indication, and it seems to justify in a good degree the expectation of the gentlemen who are acting as trustees of the city's interest, that when the main decision shall come it will be about right; till then hope and be firm."

Nothing decided? Well wait, hope and be firm, and some one's eyes will be opened and the comfort the writer drew from those words of the Court, "we say nothing about the right," on this rock we build our hopes; and then, "a hopeful indication and it seems to justify in a good degree the expectation of the gentlemen, &c." And what are those expectations? Why, that your city may get clear of obligations binding on all sister cities and townships, and paying their just share to support a State and County government for 1878-79 and '80, and then "the gentlemen who are acting as trustees of the city's interest," is it not to her interest unbiased and out of debt to see that all taxes due the State and County are promptly paid including her own. Every man in your city of sound mind and understanding must say that it is so. But a majority of your Council say no, and proudly point back to a public meeting with 40 odd voters on their side. Now we know that some people we meet think that about the highest interest in life is to get clear of honest debts or pay them when and how they please either with or without interest they may select, and we also know that men in private life or business who act thus are not what the preachers say men ought to be, and not what the Young Men's Christian Association profess to make them. I don't know who is the author of the matter I have been criticising, but this is from a friend and well-wisher of Plainfield and all her people.

C. W. L. MARTINE.

WESTFIELD WISPS.

We regret to announce the death of a fly from starvation in a cracker box of one of our citizens.

We learn that Mr. Lafayette Moffett has scored a decided success as second violin in the Westfield Orchestra.

Mr. J. Warren Brown is at present Secretary of the Board of Trustees of the Lyceum in place of Mr. H. O. Bates, resigned.

Why is it that an unsealed circular can be mailed at Elizabeth for one cent, and that three cents is charged for the same service at our Post Office.

Our popular artist, Jerome Neil has finished his decoration of the front of Hook & Ladder Co. No. 1 House to the entire satisfaction of its members.

Mr. Winfield Townley has been appointed Superintendent of Lamps by the Village Improvement Committee in place of John Pfeifer, removed.

Those desiring to sell, purchase or exchange horses, should not fail to visit Roulston's Turf Exchange corner of Elm street and North avenue.

A son of Chas. Weeks was quite badly bitten by a dog the property of A. A. Drake, on Monday last. Messrs. Town Committeemen where is your ordinance?

Mr. Chas. H. Daniels, purser of the Pacific Mail Steamship Company's ship "Colon," is in town and proposes to remain with us over one trip. Welcome home, Charley.

We imagine from the appearance of the polite assistant at Gale's Pharmacy that he has accepted the agency for one of the many patent horse clippers now offered to the public.

Mr. James T. Pierson has decidedly improved his property cor. of Broad street and Central avenue (formerly the Osborne place) by re-building the fence that surrounds it.

From the sale of tickets to the Excursion of the Methodist church to the "Highlands of the Navesink" on August 10th, already made, looks as if its success was already assured.

The popular proprietor of "Gale's Pharmacy" has laid in a large stock of window screens, enabling our citizens by their purchase to fight successfully the affectionate fly and mosquito.

Our late Athletic contests seem to have aroused a spirit of emulation among our citizens generally. The standing broad and high and running broad jumps are the latest exercises being practiced.

The many friends of Mrs. Carlyle Miller will learn with pleasure that her condition steadily improves, as rapidly at least as could be expected when the serious nature of her injuries is considered.

Parties desiring to purchase those indispensable articles for the pleasure of their children, such as velocipedes, wagons, wheelbarrows, &c., should not fail to call on Mr. C. F. W. Wittke, who is in receipt of a large stock.

At the request of Dr. J. B. Harrison, the family of the late Edw. L. Trent, consented to a post mortem examination. Drs. Harrison, Cooper, Keach and Smith participated, and decided that death was caused by inflammation of the bowels and intestines.

Section No. — of the Central Railroad, which includes this township on that line, certainly, under the efficient management of Chief Patrick English, is kept in perfect running order. The larger portion of this section has been re-tied and re-ballasted this year.

The Champion Quoit breakers (not pitchers) have been found. Average break 3 quoits in 10 minutes. Result supposed to have been due to an increase in the laws of gravitation. This is probably true, although it is whispered about that they "don't know how."

We regret that at the last meeting of our Town Committee they failed to issue a notice to muzzle dogs or appoint some one to look after this important matter. We already hear of several complaints in this respect. Our neighboring cities and townships have long since attended to this important matter.

The present is the season for pin wheels. Mothers are almost driven distracted by the cries of their offspring for pins with which to pin the pin wheels to sticks, and when completed they are generally disposed of for pins. Several salesmen have been seen with the pin wheels pinned to their velocipedes.

Postmaster Decker left our village on Saturday last to visit relatives at Jerseyville, Jersey County, Illinois, and carried with him the well wishes of our citizens for a safe and pleasant journey. The office during his absence we are sure will be conducted to the entire satisfaction of our citizens by Miss Louisa Decker.

The death or suicide of a cat in the roadway in front of Henry Manning's this week was the cause of considerable discussion as to the proper person whose duty it was to remove the carcass. Constable and Assessor Marsh, Road Overseer Pierson and our Justices of the Peace were appealed to in the matter, and each laid the responsibility of its removal on the other. A liberal compensation was offered circus performer Wm. Eustace for its removal but politely declined.

A reward of $50 is offered for the arrest of the party or parties who stole a horse (a light bay, 15½ hands, dark mane and tail, full breast, a small lump on each hind leg near fetlock) property of Lyon Hetfield. A silver mounted carriage harness, dutch collar, plain single feather traces, red rosette on bridle, property of James Baker of Fanwood, and a square black painted Jagger wagon, property of L. W. Miller of Fanwood on Friday night last. Constable J. M. C. Marsh of this place has the matter in charge.

A visit to our popular carriage constructors, Henry Schafer's establishment, would prove undoubtedly interesting to those of our citizens interested in the better class of carriage work. Bodies varnished so perfectly that they mirror every passing object. Mr. Schafer numbers among his customers many of the leading citizens of this and adjoining townships, and the fact that the facilities of his establishment are taxed to its utmost, both in new work and repairs, indicates appreciation of his work. Our citizens will consult their own interests by visiting this establishment before giving their orders elsewhere.

For the information of those of our citizens who persist in the constant violation of the law relative to cattle on the streets, it is probably well to call attention to the law in this respect. It bears date March 1st 1859, and authorizes any person to pound any horses, cattle, sheep or swine found running at large in the public highways, or otherwise. As considerable complaint has already been made of this practice, those violating the laws do so with their eyes fully open to the penalty. Cattle pounded may be sold at auction to cover expenses of keeping, and after 10 days notice. Cattle tethered on the highways are liable.

Probably no death that has occurred in our community for some time has occasioned such wide spread surprise as well as regret as the death of Mr. Edward L. Trent, which sad event took place on Monday morning last. Less than a week previous to his demise he was on our streets in the apparent full possession of health and strength, and although his dangerous condition was known to his friends for a day or two previous to his death, hope encouraged all interested to look for his recovery. A resident of Westfield for the past twelve years, he had in that time endeared himself both by his manly and christianlike qualities to many here, and his loss will be sadly and truly mourned. The heartfelt sympathies of the entire community are extended to his afflicted family in their deep affliction. His funeral took place at the M. E. church on Thursday last, and was largely attended.

The Westfield Fish and Game Protective Society at their last meeting received the report of the Committee appointed to secure rooms for meeting purposes for the ensuing year to the effect that they had secured the rooms of Westfield Hook & Ladder Company No. 1 for the ensuing year. The report of the Detective for the Society proved hardly sufficient to convict by itself the parties implicated in violations of the law, but undoubtedly additional evidence will be forthcoming at an early day. A motion was carried inviting all members of the Association to attend Director's meetings.

A number of our citizens were particularly favored on Saturday evening last by the receipt of an invitation from Mr. and Mrs. John S. Burhans to witness the blooming of a very handsome specimen of the "Night Blooming Cereus." Our representative was favored with one of those valued favors and very pleasantly surprised at the conclusion of the exhibition by the presentation of the flower in full bloom. Mr. Burhans devotes considerable attention to the cultivation of plants and flowers, particularly to the culture of white pinks. Our citizens will find it not only a matter of pleasure but one of profit to themselves to visit his nurseries before purchasing elsewhere.

Cries of Murder! Murder, &c., drew a number of the citizens of Dublin to the Daly house on Friday night last about midnight. Upon examination it was found that the premises (unoccupied) had been taken possession of for the night by a male and female tramp, and that the latter was guilty of the alarm. Upon being questioned, however, she stated that the rats bit her. This statement was hardly confirmed by her appearance the following morning, marks of a first-class fight being noticeable. These parties continued as sojourners in our town during the ensuing day and only left town after several fights upon warning by Constable Marsh that their continuance here would result in their arrest.

The members of Westfield Lodge, No. 169, I. O. O. F., paid a fraternal visit to Somerset Lodge, No. 43, of Somerville, N. J., on Friday evening last, and participated in a Public Installation. Past Grands, J. Warren Brown and John B. Barcalow, of Westfield Lodge, were honored by the request to officiate as Grand Warden and Grand Guardian, and Past Grands George Todd, Gustavus Koester and Sparkman as escort to the elective officers of Somerset Lodge. After the installation services the visitors and audience generally were treated to a very fine musical programme (vocal) by a quartette composed of ladies and gentlemen. The visitors returned to Westfield under the coachmanship of Mr. Chas. Lyons at an early hour in the morning thoroughly satisfied with the pleasures of the occasion.

We have repeatedly avoided notice of the peculiar actions of a party of the name of Pfeifer, whose conduct in the past has been anything but correct, out of regard for his family and with the hope that the wise counsel of his friends would prevail and have the effect to induce him to amend his ways. Courtesy in this respect has been stretched to its utmost limits, and we consider it a duty to our citizens generally to publish a full account of his latest outrage against public decency. Saturday was selected by this person as his field day, and in order we suppose to secure its fullest fruit, he commenced action at an early hour. His first attack was made upon the earthen and china ware of his own establishment, and proved highly successful (no opposition). After due reflection, probably over its cost, he appears to have arrived at the conclusion that life was unindurable, and so concluded to curtail his by (thorax) contraction. After giving fullest notice of his intention to hang himself to our citizens generally and exhibiting the clothes line with which the deed was to be done (it is basely whispered in order to prevent its accomplishment) he started for the woods; not, however, before repeated offers of assistance, tendered by citizens, had been politely but firmly declined, and their many suggestions as to proper place and time discussed. Constable J. M. C. Marsh being informed of the dire catastrophe that was likely to shake our business and social foundations to the centre, followed the would-be suicide and without much persuasion induced him to return to town, where he exhibited the rope that he would not hang himself with to admiring crowds. Having attired himself in a suit of black, in order to present a more mournful appearance, he concluded to visit Plainfield. Prevented in this, owing to his condition, by Constable Koester, after an examination of the roads, he concluded that walking was good and started for Cranford, but, like the comet, returned at night, and securing a prominent location at the Post Office quickly secured an audience and regaled them and the citizens passing with loud, profane and indecent language, and despite the presence of two of Westfield's Constables (whom he defied to arrest him) continued his noise for half an hour. With all due respect to these constables we cannot help but think that they failed in their duty in not promptly arresting this disturber of the peace and taking him before a Justice who could not fail to have committed him upon their complaint. We trust that this is the last occasion that we shall feel obliged to give Mr. Pfeifer a notice and think that this lesson, that will undoubtedly prove an expensive one to him, will prove a sufficiency.

A LITTLE OF EVERYTHING.

A SMOOTH COMPLEXION can be had by every lady who will use Parker's Ginger Tonic. Regulating the internal organs and purifying the blood it quickly removes pimples and gives a healthy bloom to the cheek. See notice.

DON'T TRUST THEM.

When you feel badly, and have pains here and there in your body that you don't know how to account for, it is the latest fashion policy in the world to take the advice of people who say: "Oh! there's nothing the matter with you. Let yourself alone and you will come out all right." These folks know nothing about it, and may be trifling with your life. You may have Kidney or Liver trouble. Send right out to your druggist and get a bottle of Dr. David Kennedy's "Favorite Remedy" and then you will be all right, or write to the Doctor at Rondout, N. Y. jl8w2

Porcelain blue is a lovely shade for a cheviot traveling suit for a young person.

WHY IT IS SO.

The reason why Dr. David Kennedy's "Favorite Remedy" cures complaints of the liver, Kidneys, Bowels and Blood, is that it is compounded of the very remedies which Nature herself has provided for this purpose. Being at first scattered through the woods and fields, Dr. K. has collected them, and condensed their virtues in the form which he now confidently offers to the sick and suffering. One dollar expended for a bottle will convince you and make you grateful that you read this item. The Doctor's office is in Rondout, N. Y. Write him a statement of your case. jl8w2

HAY FEVER.

For twenty-five years I have been severely afflicted with Hay Fever, and have tried many remedies without relief. While suffering intensely I was induced, through Mr. [illegible] testimonial, to try Ely's Cream Balm. The immediate effect was marvelous. I have been enabled to perform my pastoral duties without the slightest inconvenience. Have been exposed to heat, draughts and dust, and have escaped a return attack. I pronounce Ely's Cream Balm a cure for Hay Fever. WILLIAM T. CARR, Presbyterian Pastor, Elizabeth, N. J.

Having been afflicted with Hay Fever for years I gave Ely's Cream Balm a trial; was much benefited; if not permanently cured. I have had no real attacks since using it. E. H. [illegible], Editor Carbon County Democrat, Mauch Chunk, Pa. Price 50 cents. jl8w2

THE KEY TO HEALTH.

Have you found the key to perfect health and strength? It is Kidney-Wort, the only remedy that overcomes at once the inaction of the kidneys and bowels. It purifies the blood by cleansing the system of foul humors and by giving strength to the liver, kidneys and bowels to perform their regular functions. See displayed advertisement.

HOW TO SECURE HEALTH.

It seems strange that anyone will suffer from the many derangements brought on by an impure condition of the blood, when SCOVILL'S SARSAPARILLA AND STILLINGIA, or BLOOD AND LIVER SYRUP will restore perfect health to the physical organization. It is indeed a strengthening syrup, pleasant to take, and has proven itself to be the BEST BLOOD PURIFIER ever discovered, effectually curing Scrofula, Syphilitic disorders, Weakness of the Kidneys, Erysipelas, Malaria; all Nervous disorders and Debility, Bilious complaints and all Diseases indicating an impure Condition of the Blood, Liver, Kidneys, Stomach, skin, etc. It corrects indigestion. A single bottle will prove to you its merits as a health renewer, for it ACTS LIKE A CHARM, especially when the complaint is of an exhaustive nature, having a tendency to lessen the natural vigor of the brain and nervous system.

BAKER'S PAIN PANACEA cures pain in Man and Beast. For use externally and internally.

DR. ROGERS' VEGETABLE WORM SYRUP instantly destroys worms and removes the secretions which cause them.

HUNDREDS OF MEN, WOMEN AND CHILDREN rescued in every community from beds of sickness and almost death and made strong by Parker's Ginger Tonic are the best evidences in the world of its sterling worth.—Post.

Gold bangles are the only jewelry much worn in street costume.

A miraculous escape from death is an oft quoted remark in our newspapers, and yet, how many such occurrences happen every day and are unchronicled, unheard of and unappreciated except by the few who are closely interested. There is probably no larger collection of such facts than in the correspondence of E. F. Andrews & Co., whose Elixir of Sulphur has caused many a grateful heart to express its thanks for help in time of danger. This preparation is a certain cure for all diseases of Throat and Lungs—Coughs, Colds, Consumption, Catarrh, etc., and is sold by A. Kingore, Druggist. 16dec

EDUCATED WOMEN.

Refined and educated women will sometimes suffer in silence for years from kidney diseases, which could easily be cured by a package of Kidney-Wort. There is hardly a woman to be found that does not at some time suffer from some of the diseases for which this great remedy is a specific. It is put up in liquid and dry forms equally efficient.—Springfield Union.

HIGH-PRICED BEANS.

Tom Watrous, commercial traveler, stopped off at the Marshall, Mich., eating house several years ago.

He was not very hungry, and called for a plate of beans, which he received. He inquired the price, and was informed that it was seventy-five cents.

"That's a thundering price for beans," said Tom.

The train was just starting. Tom paid the bill, and the coaches bore him and his indignation on to Detroit.

This was on Saturday. On Monday, Gilmore, the eating-house man, received a telegram, collect on delivery, $1.25, which he paid, and read on opening it, "A thundering price for beans."

Thirty days from that date a neat express package was handed in to Gilmore, C. O. D., who paid ninety cents for the privilege of opening it to discover a lot of saw dust, on the top of which lay a slip of paper with the bab-alistic symbols: "A thundering price for beans."

Two months from this Gilmore was summoned to Chicago to meet a former business partner, and the hotel clerk handed him a letter conveying the pleasant information: "A thundering price for beans."

During Gilmore's absence his son paid for two telegrams and one express package, all bearing on the subject of seventy-five cents being a "thundering price for beans." Cost of these articles, $3.88.

A genuine telegram from Gilmore's mining share broker, advising him to sell, was refused, and the loss of it entailed to Gilmore an actual damage of $1,500.

A year rolled away. Gilmore ordered a case of Mackinac trout from Detroit. They came C. O. D., $13.83; when opened he found every fish had been removed from the ice and sawdust, a shingle met his eye marked with a blue lead pencil: "A thundering price for beans."

Trouble arose between Gilmore and the Detroit fish house, and they went to law, Gilmore winning the suit, $25 damages, and all at a cost for the attorney's services of $86.90.

Gilmore grew dejected. Life looked gloomy. Letters poured in on every one of his family at regular intervals from all parts of the world, bearing the unpleasant information that it was "a thundering price for beans."

At last Gilmore sold the Marshall eating house and moved to Chicago. He carried his deep affliction along with him, gnawing like a cancer at his vitals. The persecution never ceased. Gilmore drooped, faded and finally died.

The terribly afflicted family followed him to his last resting place and the widow, with what little money she had saved from the expense of bogus telegrams and express packages, erected a plain marble slab to the memory of the tortured Gilmore.

WHAT THE FEATURES INDICATE.

We are told that the extreme of both largeness and smallness of stature are not favorable to the strength of intellect. Giants and dwarfs are generally deficient in this respect, and excessive corpulence or meagreness is seldom associated with mental activity. Aristotle, and Bonaparte, however, were very short. Charles James Fox was exceedingly fat, Daniel Webster both broad and tall, and, Lord Nelson a living skeleton.

A large head is generally the accompaniment of a great intellect, but a small one with a comparatively extensive forehead is quite consistent with mental capacity. Raphael, Charles XII., Frederick the Great, and Lord Brougham were illustrations of the latter fact.

It is said any nose which is less than the height of the forehead is an indication of the defective intellectual powers.

The eyes indicate character rather by color than form. The dark blue are found most commonly in persons of a gentle and refined character. Light blue and gray in the rude and energetic.

Lavator says:—"Hazel eyes are the more usual indicators of a mind masculine, vigorous and profound; just as a genius, so called, is almost always associated with eyes of a yellowish cast bordering on hazel."

The higher the brows rise the more their possessor is supposed to be under the influence of feeling, and the lower the better controlled by his reason.

A very small eyebrow is an indication of want of force of character.

A tolerable large mouth is essential to vigor and energy, and a very small mouth is indicative of weakness and indolence.

In a manly face, the upper lip should extend beyond and dominate the lower, and fleshy lips are oftener found associated with voluptuous, and meager ones with a passionate nature.

The retreating chin indicates weakness, the perpendicular strength, and and the sharp acuteness of mind.

IT IS HARD TO UNDERSTAND

Why people will get married when courtship is so sweet.

Why cold weather comes during the season when it is least agreeable.

Why boys should run after girls, when there is a house-full at home.

Why the desire to make a fool of one's self springs eternal in the human breast.

Why people will go into society to get bored when they can get bored just as well at home.

Why we are so much angrier against him who shows us our error than him who leads us therein.

Why a "young gentleman" swears so much louder and more copiously when strange ladies are within ear shot.

Why an endless procession of drinkers from a public dipper will, without exception, drink close to the handle.

Why the young lady who will eagerly chew boarding house mince pie will carefully eschew boarding house mince meat.

Why Jane finds Sarah's hateful brother so attractive, and why the hateful brother of Jane finds favor with Sarah.

Why a woman will make excuses for her bread, when she knows it is the best she ever made, and knows her company knows it.

Why a man who claims to have found marriage a delusion will again embrace that delusion upon the first convenient opportunity.

Why it is so much easier to be polite to people whom we shall probably never see again than to those whose good opinion we have every reason to cultivate.

The slouch who goes about with his hand in his pockets may be a better man than the genteel fellow who has his hands in some other fellow's pocket.

HOW TO GET ALONG.

Pay as you go.

Never fool in business matters.

Advertise in THE CONSTITUTIONALIST.

Learn to think and act for yourself.

Do not kick every one in your path.

Never stop to tell stories in business hours.

Use your own brains rather than those of others.

Don't be afraid of a liberal use of printer's ink.

A man of honor respects his word as he does his bond.

Have order, system, regularity, and also promptness.

No man can get rich sitting around stores and saloons.

Do not meddle with business you know nothing about.

If you have a place of business be found there when wanted.

More miles can be made in a day by going steadily than stopping.

Learn to say no. No necessity of snapping it out dog fashion, but say it firmly and respectfully.

Help others when you can, but never give them what you cannot afford to, simply because it is fashionable.

PLAIN, STRAIGHTFORWARD ANSWER.

Lawyers who demand precision in a witness sometimes get it with interest. Farmer Marston, of Norway, Me., riding one day in his one-horse wagon, ran over and killed one of Sam Pingree's pigs.

Pingree sued him, and at the trial of the case one of Marston's witnesses was Uncle Tim Smith, a good old soul—as honest as the day is long—truthful and simple-hearted, albeit a little inclined to tell big stories of his own exploits. Uncle Tim had seen the whole thing—had seen the pig run under the horse's feet, coming very near throwing Marston's team into a complete wreck. Holden took his witness in hand to cross-examine him.

"Now, see here, Mr. Smith. We want none of your s'posin's—none of your ifs or buts; but I want you to give plain, straightforward answers to my questions. Now, then. Give your attention; you saw Mr. Marston—the defendent in this case—driving his carriage past Mr. Pingree's dwelling?"

"No, sir!"

"What? You did not declare under oath?"

"No, sir!"

"What! You did not see Mr. Marston driving past Mr. Pingree's dwelling."

"Yes—I did!"

"Your honor!" exclaimed Holden, turning to the Justice with fire in his eye and a thunder-cloud upon his brow—

But the judge did not allow him to finish.

"Confine yourself to the witness, Mr. Holden. Evidently he knows what he is talking about."

Then, boiling with wrath, the peppery lawyer returned to the witness, who stood as calmly cool and serene as an autumnal morning in harvest time.

"Witness!" I will ask you once more. Did not you tell this court in your direct testimony that you stood near and were looking on, when Mr. Marston passed my client's house?"

"Yes, sir—I did."

"And now, sir, what was he driving?"

"He was drivin' his mare, sir!"

* * *

"I don't like that cat, it's got splinters in its feet," was the excuse of a four-year-old for throwing the kitten away.

* * *

It is never safe to take too much interest in the affairs of your neighbors. Six per cent. ought to be enough for any one.

* * *

The man who can see sermons in running brooks should not go and look for them on Sundays when trout are biting.

* * *

It has been ascertained that the reason for placing lumber yards near to railroad depots is to enable passengers to get a board easy.

* * *

No matter how good-hearted a boy may be, he can never go back on the rapture consequent upon playing on a passing pedestrian with the garden hose.

* * *

Don't despise a women because she can't drive nails or hang pictures. If you want to discover your own weak points, just carry a 6x4 mattress down a winding stairs.

* * *

It is our firm belief when we read that in heaven we shall all be changed that the passage ought to read that all who have disagreed with us, not we ourselves, will be changed.

* * *

A good man who went to Washington to see whether his representative had retained his political innocence, felt insulted when he was invited to take a seat on "the floor of the house."

* * *

Some wretched cynic once remarked that there would be fewer evils in the world if it were not for the existence of women. "Yes," was the sharp reply "you, yourself wouldn't be in it."

* * *

If you are about to go to Europe see to it that your life insurance policy is in force and you will do a good deal toward helping your family contemplate possible accidents with serene complacency.

* * *

There are a a great many people who would like to be relieved of drudgery. Coleridge's words, or better, the gospel words, would point out the way. The upward path is one of perpetual victory. There is an indirect way of getting the things of this world, and that is by way of the kingdom.

* * *

All that is noble and heroic in humanity, all that is devoted and tender in friendship, all the courtesy and grace of refined society, all the respect and chivalry due to women, all the self-denial and generosity which make life beautiful, have their root in the family, and in its soil are best cultivated.

* * *

In this age of romance it is refreshing to come across a person who is not so æsthetic that he can sit up all night to commune with the sweet soul of a sun-flower. "What kind of little boys go to heaven?" was the question. A dear little unæsthetic five-year-old sang out with all his might, "Dead ones, teacher."

* * *

So far from persistence being an associate of weakness and inferiority, it is itself a power which underlies and upholds all others, and without which they could never develop into value or efficiency. The feeble, inefficient, inferior man is he who, whatever may be his latent abilities, lacks the force requisite to make the most of them.

MR. Wm. WESTFALL,
Of Dutchess Co., N. Y., 80 YEARS of AGE, Suffered Continually for Many Years from STONE in the BLADDER.

Great are and painful diseases are a sad combination. Yet Mr. William Westfall, formerly of Rock City, Dutchess Co., N. Y., now of Washington Hollow, in the same county, came to the office of Dr. David Kennedy, the eminent Physician and Surgeon, at Rondout, N. Y., some time since, in a condition to excite the sympathy of the most cold-blooded and hard-hearted person in the world. We say he came—he was, rather, carried to the Doctor's office, for he was totally helpless, and bore the weight of 80 years beside. He had suffered long from Retention of Urine, and had all the symptoms of an aggravated case of calculous formations in the bladder. The usual instrumental examination revealed the presence in the bladder of a urinary calculus of uncommon size. Dr. Kennedy frankly told Mr. Westfall that, owing to his age and debility, an operation was out of the question, but that he could, by the prescription of "Kennedy's Favorite Remedy," together with local treatment, make him comfortable and leave him to live out all his days. The outcome of this was that the patient enjoys good health to this day.

The Reason Why
Dr. Kennedy's "Favorite Remedy" is being extensively used by our people are as follows: It is a combination of vegetable alteratives. It is pleasant to the taste, adapted to both sexes and all ages, is effective in affording immediate relief in all cases of Kidney troubles, Liver Complaints, Constipation of the Bowels, and derangements peculiar to women. At the same time purifies the blood, thus giving tone and strength to the system enfeebled by disease or age. "Dr. Kennedy's Favorite Remedy" for sale by all druggists. jy1w4

Something Entirely New!
NO SMOKE! NO SMELL! NO DIRT! NO ASHES!
TUBULAR HOT-BLAST NON-EXPLOSIVE
Oil or Gas Stoves!

THE REASONS WHY THE TUBULAR HOT-BLAST OIL OR GAS STOVE IS SUPERIOR TO ALL OTHERS:

Its appearance is more like a stove than anything that has yet been offered.

It requires no wire gauze or water tank to make it safe.

A continual current of air passes to the burners over the Oil Pot, preventing the oil from getting warmer than the atmosphere in which it is burning. The bake oven is not in the way of the kettle or boiler.

Baking, roasting, and boiling can all be done at once, and in less time than with any other oil stove.

The No. 3 or Three-Burner Stove will make 12 inches of pure white flame at a cost of 1½ cts per hour. The reservoir holds four quarts of oil, sufficient to burn for twelve hours.

The No. 4 or 4-Burner Stove will make 16 inches of white flame at a cost of 2 cents per hour.

The reservoir holds 5 quarts of oil sufficient to burn for twelve hours.

The No. 3 Stove will consume between three and four cents worth of gas per hour.

The No. 4 will consume between four and five cents worth of gas per hour.

Price List:
No. 4, with four 4 inch burners, including oven, $15

SEASON 1881.
IDOL!
[Formerly Peck's IDOL,]

By the great Mambrino Chief founder of the Mambrino family; 1st dam by American Eclipse, son of Duroc (founder of the Star family) by imported Diomed. Dam of American Eclipse, Miller's Damsel, by imported Messenger; 2d dam, Kitty Mure by Shakespeare; 3d dam, Eliza Jenkins, by Sir William of Transport; 4th dam by Orphan, son of Ball's Florizel; 5th dam by imported Buzzard; 6th dam by Silvertail; 7th dam by imported Dove.

IDOL is a rich dark bay, weighs 1,200 lbs., with nigh hind foot white, full sixteen hands high, a horse of great substance, fine temper, elegant trotting action, record 2:41½ as a four-year old, distancing his field, and at five years old showed 2:30, third heat, to wagon. As a six year old he made his first season in the stud, but the war prevented the development of his progeny. Few of his colts have been trained, but those few are mostly fast. Idol Girl, 16 hands high, won Beacon, Mystic, and Prospect Park stakes for four year olds during 1871, obtained a record of 2:30¾. This mare at that age could beat 2:20, and at Prospect Park trotted during her race a half mile in 1:15¼, and a quarter in 35½ seconds—a 2:22 gait. As a five year old She met with an accident which ended her turf career. Barbara Patchen, in 1879, as a big 16½ hand green 5 year old mare, won all her races in a jog, and the seventh heat, on a half-mile track, gained record 2:34¼. Don, at Topeka, Kansas, won his race in 1:38. Wayco won colt stakes at Hartford. Nansuttie trotted, 3 years old, in 2:44. Ideal, same age, trotted in 2:46, and John R., in 1880, gained a record of 2:28 on a half mile track at Olean, N. Y., and won first money in all his races. There are others that will drop into the 2:30 list this year without doubt.

IDOL will be limited to 30 mares, besides those engaged, at $25.00 the season, money payable (or secured) at service.

Good care and pasture furnished at $3 per month. All accidents and escapes at owners' risk. IDOL and some of his colts can be seen at the grazing farm of D. F. CARLE, Stirling, Morris Co., New Jersey.

Breeders desiring an outcross should call and see IDOL, and after seeing him, judge for themselves. 13mtm

THE NEW BUSINESS
OF THE
EQUITABLE
Life Assurance Society of the U. S.
FOR THE YEAR 1880, WAS OVER
Thirty-Five Millions of Dollars,
The Largest Business Done by any Company in the World.
REASONS FOR THIS RESULT.

The Equitable is the strongest Company in the United States.

Its policies are, by their own express terms, made incontestable after three years. [For precise terms see form of policy contract.]

ALL such incontestable policies are paid immediately after receipt of satisfactory proof of the death of the insured, and without even the customary delay of sixty or ninety days.

EACH ordinary policy provides for a definite surrender-value in paid-up assurance, in case the policy is forfeited after three years from its date and is surrendered within a reasonable time thereafter.

BY THE TONTINE SAVINGS FUND plan of assurance, returns to policy-holders, after the expiration of what is called the Tontine period, are greater than are obtainable on any other system. Actual settlements of Tontine policies have been made in which policy-holders have withdrawn amounts varying from eighty to one hundred and twenty per cent. of premiums paid, besides enjoying a life insurance indemnity during the period. No other company can show such results.

THE TONTINE plan is the only one existing by which a person may withdraw from his insurance contract at specified periods, receiving the entire reserve and surplus accumulations in cash.

ALL the ordinary forms of insurance with annual dividends of profits, both cash and reversionary, are issued by this Society.

ASSETS, - $41,108,602.
SURPLUS, - $9,228,294.

Its business for the last ten years (represented by the new policies issued) has been larger than that of any other Company.

POETRY.

SONG OF THE REAPER.

My Grandfather was right little and old,
And crooked and worn was he;
But his teeth were good, and his heart was bold,
And he swam the waves of a sea of gold,
But he couldn't keep up with me—me—me—
Couldn't keep up with me.
Then ho! away to the golden plain!
We will crash and dash through glistening grain,
And gather the wealth of earth and main,
And the world will eat when our work is done.

My father was bent and wan,
But a widespread hand had he;
And his fingers they were long and clean,
And he swung his broadsword bright and keen,
But he never could fight with me—me—me—
Never could fight with me!
Then ho! away where the sunlight creeps,
And the wide-floored earth a granary keeps:
We will capture its bushels, one by one,
And the world will eat when our work is done.

The grain-stalk bows his bristling head
As I clatter and clash along,
The stubble it bends beneath my tread,
The stackers' yellow tent is spread,
And the hills throw back my song—my song—
The hills throw back my song!
Then ho! where the food of nations grows,
And the yellow tide of the harvest flows,
As we dash and crash and glide and run;
And the world will eat when our work is done!

MY FRIEND HARRIS.

"There, Emily, I had nearly forgotten it!" I exclaimed, as I arose from the breakfast-table. "I have invited an old friend to dine with us this evening. Let us have those ducks which were sent here yesterday, done in cookie's best style."

"George, you are the most inconsiderate man!" returned my wife, with a rebuking smile and shake of the head.

"Where my heart has gone my head has followed," I replied, reseating myself. "You've got both; I've been beside myself ever since I married you."

I would say here to the reader that this was the first week of our house keeping, and that we had just ended our wedding tour.

"You are not always beside yourself, sir. You are frequently away from me," Emily declared, recognizing the fact that she was indeed my better-half.

"But I cant think of any one but yourself, or I would before this have told you of my meeting Harris, a dear old friend, whom I had not seen for five years. I know you will like him. I was in a great hurry when I found him, came near passing him, but a well-remembered limp he has made me stop. He was much changed in appearance; he wears a full beard now, but his eye had the same merry twinkle. I asked him when he had got back from Europe, but didn't await his answer, and commenced about you, and then gave him our address. He'll be here to-night. You've heard me speak of Harris?"

"You've so many friends, George—"

"Well you'll like him, any way, and now I'm off. Business—detestable business!"

Upon my walk home at four in the afternoon my memory was employed in furnishing me with anecdotes in which my friend figured; that sleighing party—ha! ha!—in which Harris had proved himself a hero; that escape of his on a fishing excursion.

But as I arrived within sight of my house my purpose was changed. I would not do any talking save so far as to draw him out. He had a fund of humor which could not fail to delight my wife. I must make him speak of his European travel; how well his old talent of mimicry would serve him in describing oddities he had met abroad. Above all, I must not let him leave without getting a pencil sketch from him of my darling Emily. Among other accomplishments Harris was a very clever draughtsman.

Emily met me with a kiss, as was her wont, but immediately left my side to superintend preparations in the kitchen, and after a change of my attire I entered my parlor, where I soon became interested in the pages of a new book. I was aroused therefrom by the ringing of the front door bell.

I rushed at once to welcome my friend. Despite my novel dignity as householder I had no thought of standing upon any ceremony with him.

Clasping both his hands in mine I fairly dragged him into the parlor, and then thrust him into my easiest chair.

"You must pardon my leaving you so soon yesterday. I had an imperative engagement when I saw you. Gracious man! how bald you have become?"

This final exclamation of mine was occasioned by my visitor's removing his hat, for which he had had no previous opportunity.

"Care, dull care," returned my friend, in a melancholy tone, and then I was nearly guilty of a surprised remark on the seediness of his attire. His linen, which he had concealed as far as possible, was ragged and even dirty.

Had Harris run through the large fortune which he had inherited? Some mischance had evidently befallen him. Mingled with my desire to offer him sympathy were saddened reflections upon the impression he was likely to make upon my wife, an impression so different from that I had pictured to myself. I hastely strove to turn the current of my thoughts by the remark:

"Well, I believe baldness improves you—you have a portentously intellectual aspect because of it. I have another reason of being pleased with it. I see more of you. But—come, tell me about yourself."

"Not just now, please. I had rather here you talk of yourself."

I proceeded to oblige him, but was constantly disturbed in my narrative by singularities on his part. How Harris had changed.

Poverty and presumable low associations had evidently demoralized him. I was fairly beginning to think of some decent excuse for ridding myself from him. I did not wish to present him to my wife.

But before I could excogitate a plan Emily came in.

I rose hastily, and stammered as I introduced him.

"I have heard so much of you, Mr. Harris," said she.

"I can return the compliment, madam," he replied, seating himself upon the edge of his chair, "Fine weather we're having!"

My wife glanced surprisedly at me, and my friend, affecting ease, threw himself back, so that his body and legs made a straight line at an angle with the floor.

And this was the man whose refinement I had lauded! Harris was undoubtedly under the influence of some drug.

A full minute of silence succeeded, and our guest again spoke, as to our relief he assumed a more becoming position.

"It's a very long time since your husband and myself were together," he said, with what was now to me a repulsive smile.

"You have been a great traveler, I understand?" Emily responded.

"I may say I have been in every State in the Union, North and South, East and West."

"I thought Europe was the continent you loved best to roam in?"

"Been there, too—Africa and Asia—but I have never met before so beautiful a lady."

Such gross flattery was as displeasing to me as to my wife, who replied:

"Is it possible, sir, that not even among the Hottentots exists my equal?"

"Madam, I assure you, not even there," returned Harris with seriousness.

"Emily, dinner must be ready," I interposed, disgusted with the vanity of my friend, whose intellect was truly under a cloud, but whose eye visibly brightened at my suggestion.

"I will see," said my wife, as she rose to leave us.

When, with my friend, I rejoined her at the table, I was depressed in spirits as he seemed to have been. Now, however, there was a decided animation in his expression, and movements, certainly, in the way he plied his knife and fork.

He was voracious, and pity for him succeeded to the vexation I had experienced. He ate like one who had fasted for a week. The seediness of his attire, too, was conspicuous under the brilliant lights of the table.

Emily's eye met mine with an expression of interrogation and compassion. Conversation flagged.

I determined to broach the subject of his altered circumstances as soon as we were alone together, but was forestalled by himself, to whom a plentiful dinner had furnished courage.

As we entered the parlor, he said:

"I suppose I have surprised you by my appetite?"

"It's the first square meal I have had for two days." He now drew closer to me, and continued: "Can't you lend me some money?"

"I'll write you a check at once for fifty, if it will serve you. Is it possible you have run through your fortune?"

"You've not heard, then, how I lost it? I supposed you knew all."

"I've heard nothing. You were reputed worth a million."

"All gone with the smash-up of a bank—Bowling Bros. But I have promise of employment, and will repay you."

"I will write the check at once."

With these words I entered the library, leaving him alone.

I sought my wife before I returned and explained the situation of my unfortunate friend, concluding with the remark that he had certainly suffered in his wits by the loss of his property.

She refrained from expressing a single word of the abhorrence with which he must have filled her, and was profuse in kindly sympathy.

"Don't come in for a few minutes after I have brought this to him," I said, in conclusion, showing her the check. "When you do, we will try to make him forget his losses by asking him to sketch your portrait, he admires you so extremely, and you will wonder at his skill."

He started as he again saw me, and seemed even less at ease than heretofore, turning toward me with both hands in his pockets, while his wandering eye refused frankly to meet mine.

But as I presented the check he scrutinized it eagerly, and then was almost nauseous with thanks.

He did not resume his seat, but almost immediately stated that he thought he had better leave, it was getting late; and he muttered some other unintelligible words.

"My wife will be here in an instant," I answered, to detain him; and, as I spoke she appeared. "I have promised her that you should show your skill as an artist," I continued.

"And I have brought with me paper and pencils!" she exclaimed, extending them to him.

But his hands again sought his pockets as he bowed and stammered:

"I—I am entirely out of practice."

"Only my wife's likeness. Come, now, it won't take you five minutes."

"Impossible, impossible!" said he, "I could never do such beauty justice."

"Well, then, sketch me," I demanded.

"I really could not at this time. Some other day. I really am not in the mood, not feeling well, in fact. You will excuse me. I—I am delighted with my visit, but I'd better go now. You will soon see me again;" and he passed into the hallway with these final words.

I followed to give him a farewell shake of the hand, and then watched his limping gait until he passed out of sight.

I then saw Emily beside me.

"Poor fellow!" said she.

"I could not have judged such a perfect change possible," I answered. "Would you believe that that man was once the light of the social circle, a wit, the glass of fashion—almost our Admirable Crichton?"

"I could not, indeed," she replied, demurely.

We returned to the parlor, and I lighted a cigar. Emily at once proceeded to the mantelpiece to place beside me a silver ash-receiver which usually stood there.

"George, where is it?" she soon asked, with a startled look.

"Where's what? Cousin Tom's present? Oh, upstairs, I suppose," I replied.

"It was certainly on the mantelpiece when we went to dinner," she returned, and then advanced to the centre-table beside which I was sitting.

After a rapid glance thereon she commenced turning over the books and other articles it held.

"And where is my gold card-case," she now exclaimed.

"Emily, you are too suspicious," said I, more in response to her expression of face than of words.

But the two presents were still missing, when a week after I encountered an old chum of both Harris and myself.

"Poor Harris!" I exclaimed. "How he is changed! Have you seen him lately?"

"Seen him? No! How could I? He's in Paris, lucky as ever. I had a letter from him yesterday. He informs me of his approaching marriage with the only daughter of his father's former business partner, a young lady whose debut in society recently made a sensation, and she is as amiable as accomplished, and as accomplished as beautiful. What do you mean by poor Harris? Why, he's about to secure another fortune equal to his own. Here's his letter."

I stared at it and read with wonder, but was wholly unable to respond to my friend's query.

There was another in my mind which I propound to the reader: "Who was my friend Harris?"

ABOUT LIGHTNING.

What is the cause of lightning?

Lightning is the result of electrical discharges from the clouds.

What is thunder?

Thunder is the noise which succeeds the rush of the electrical fluid through the air.

When does lightning occur?

When clouds, charged with the opposite electricities approach, the forces rush to each other and combine in a state of equilibrium.

Why does lightning attend this movement of the forces of electricity?

Because the atmosphere, being unable to convey the charges of electricity as they rush toward each other, acts as an insulator, and the lightning is caused by the violence of the electricity in forcing its passage. When the conducting power is equal to the force of the electricity it passes invisibly, noiselessly and harmlessly wherever it finds a sufficient force of conducting.

Why does lightning sometimes appear forked?

Because, being resisted in its progress by the air, the electricity divides into two or more points, flies from point to point, and seeks a passage in different directions.

Why is it dangerous to stand near a tree during an electric storm?

Because the tree is a better conductor than the air, and electricity would probably strike the trees and pass to the person standing near.

Why is it dangerous to sit near a fire-place?

Because the chimney being a tall object and the smoke a good conductor, would probably attract the electricity and convey it to the body of a person sitting near the fire.

Why is it dangerous to sit near water during a thunder storm?

Because water is a good conductor, and the vapor arising from it might attract the electricity.

Are iron houses dangerous?

No; they are safe, because their entire surface is a good conductor, and would convey the electricity harmless to the earth.

Are iron bedsteads dangerous?

No; they are safe, because the iron frame completely surrounding the body, and having a great capacity for conduction, would keep electricity away from the body.

Why is it safe to be in bed during a thunder storm?

Because feathers, hair, wool, cotton, etc., especially when dry, are good insulators or non-conductors.

What is the safest position to be in during a storm?

In the centre of the room, isolated as far as possible from surrounding objects, sitting on a chair and avoid handling any of the conducting substances. The windows and doors should be closed to prevent drafts of air.

If in the open air, what is the safest situation?

To keep aloof as far as possible, from any elevated structures, regard the rain as a protection against the lightning stroke, for wet clothes would supply a good conductor that a very large amount of electricity would pass over a man's body through wet clothes and he would be quite unconscious of it.

MORALITIES.

There is this of good in real evils, they deliver us while they last from the petty despotism of all that were imaginary.

As no roads are so rough as those that have just been mended, so no sinners are so intolerant as those that have just turned saints.

When we feel a strong desire to thrust our advice upon others, it is usually because we suspect their weakness; but we ought rather to suspect our own.

Whenever an educated man speaks, give him respectful heed, for he has read the opinions of thousands and they are the ones to whom you are really listening.

We are not more ingenuous in searching out bad motives for good actions when performed by others, than good motives for bad actions when performed by ourselves.

What Epicurus said three hundred years before Christ is justly applicable to the present day: "Not he is godless who rejects the gods of the crowd, but rather he who accepts them."

Fortune has been considered the guardian divinity of fools; and, on this score, she has been accused of blindness; but it should rather be adduced as a proof of her sagacity, when she helps those who certainly can not help themselves.

Two things, well considered, will prevent many quarrels: first, to have it well ascertained whether we are not disputing about terms rather than things; and secondly, to examine whether that on which we differ is worth contending about.

According to experiments mentioned by Liebig, twenty per cent. more potatoes are produced if the blossoms have been removed from the vines. Heaven often deprives us of our blossoming joys only that our lives may bear more fruit.

It is an unfortunate thing for fools that their pretentions should rise in an inverse ratio with their abilities, and their presumption with their weakness; and for the wise that diffidence should be the companion of talent, and doubt the fruit of investigation.

We speak of Jesus, Homer, Plato and Shakespeare just as though there had never been but one of each, whereas many have born these names. We see, therefore, that it is one thing to have a name, and quite another to make it cleave to one's identity. Perhaps your name is Smith: well, then, so live that whenever in future ages Smith shall be maintained, it will mean you.

AT THE WEDDING—WHAT THE LADIES SAY.

The following remarks have mostly been said time after time at all our "tony" weddings, and will be said again and again on every such occasion:

Here she comes!
Pretty, isn't she?
Who made her dress?
Is it surah silk or satin?
Is her veil real lace?
She's as white as the wall!
Wonder how much he's worth?
Did he give her those diamonds?
He's scared to death!
Isn't she the cool piece?
That train's a horrid shape!
Isn't her mother a dowdy?
Aren't the bridesmaids homely?
That's a handsome usher!
Hasn't she a cute little hand?
Wonder what number her gloves are!
They say her shoes are fives!
If his hair isn't parted in the middle!
Wonder what on earth she married him for?
For his money, of course!
Isn't he handsome?
He's as homely as a hedge hog!
He looks like a circus clown!
No, he's like a dancing master!
Good enough for her, anyway!
She was always a stuck up thing!
She'll be worse than ever, now!
She jilted Sam Somebody, didn't she?
No, he never asked her!
He's left town anyway.
There, the ceremony has begun.
Isn't he awkward?
White as his collar!
Why don't they hurry up!
Did she say she would "obey?"
What a precious fool!
There, they are married!
Doesn't she look happy?
Pity if she wouldn't!
(Wish I were in her place!)
What a handsome couple!
She was always a sweet little thing.
How graceful she walks!
Dear me, what airs she puts on!
Wouldn't be in her place for a farm!
I'll bet those jewels were hired.
Well, she's off her father's hands at last.
Doesn't she cling tightly to him, though!
She has a mortgage on him now.
Hope they'll be happy.
They say she's awful smart.
Too smart for him by a jugfull.
There! they are getting in the carriage.
That magnificent dress will be squashed!
The way she does look at him!
Worship be hanged! she's only making believe!
It's kind of nice to get married, isn't it?
No; it's a dreadful bore.
Wasn't it a stupid wedding?
What dowdy dresses?
I'll never go to another!
I'm just suffocated!
Tired to death.
Glad it's over!
Oh, dear!

AT LAST.

After long and bitter controversy among themselves the Republicans in the Legislature of New York have at last elected Messrs. Miller and Lapham, two gentlemen of second rate ability and no national fame, to be Senators of the United States in place of Conkling and Platt, resigned.

The whole affair from beginning to end, has been a scandalous exhibition of political corruption and sullies with lasting disgrace the Republican party. The contest was precipitated by Senator Conkling because Secretary Blaine, the power behind the throne, chose to wield himself and not transfer to a rival for disposal, the immense party patronage connected with the New York Custom House, and for the purpose of securing Conkling's return to the Senate by one faction, and his rejection therefrom by another, for two months the most disreputable efforts have been carried on at Albany, involving not only personal detraction, but criminal bribery.

The whole contest is a disgraceful record, and showing as it plainly does the degradation of American politics, duty appeals to every patriotic and independent citizen to enforce correction.

For the honor of the Democratic party, its representatives in the Legislature cast a solid vote to the end for two able and distinguished statesmen, Kernan and Potter, leaving the Republicans to manage the fight after their own peculiar fashion and to abide the result. The harmonious termination of the squabble is evidenced by the following telegram:—

NEW YORK, July 22.

The Honorable James Armstrong, Member of Assembly, Albany:

The heroic constancy of the Spartan band which so long has stood for principle and truth has my deepest gratitude and admiration. Borne down by forbidden and abhorrent forces and agencies which never before had sway in the Republican party, the memory of their courage and manhood will long live in highest honor. The near future will vindicate their wisdom and crown them with approval. Please let them all for me to receive my most grateful acknowledgements.

ROSCOE CONKLING.

"Borne down by forbidden and abhorrent forces and agencies." Significant language that for a once great party leader to use.

Blaine has defeated Conkling.

Has he conquered him?

Time will tell.

A LESSON.

Roscoe Conkling is undoubtedly the possessor of talents, and as a Senator acquired national repute, but, like other men, large or small, he has weak points.

Overweening confidence in the personal importance and invincible power of Roscoe Conkling is the block over which he stumbled out of the United States Senate into present retirement.

Egotism is his failing.

It is folly for any man in this age and country to presume that he is a superior mortal, knows everything, deserves all, and can make people bow to his individual will and register his decrees regardless of circumstances.

Simpletons of that class abound and their assumed self consequence reveals absurdity. A man of real intelligence will maturely form and distinctly avow his own opinions, but, at the same time treat with becoming respect the views of others.

A wise man will never imagine and act out the idea that wisdom, wealth and honor are sure to leave the earth when he dies. Yet pretenders of that kind are to be seen in almost every community.

Mr. Conkling petulantly resigned his Senatorial seat with the evident expectation that the Legislature of New York would instantly re-commission him.

It refused.

The lesson is wholesome and emphatic.

WHAT IT COST.

Fortunately, the bad news of last week regarding the condition of President Garfield, did not reach Albany until the Senatorial contest in New York State had been ended by the election of Elbridge Lapham to succeed the egotistical Conkling. If it had, the Stalwart surrender would have been postponed. As it is, the dead-lock is broken, and the Empire State that might have been represented by an Evarts and a Curtis, has sent to the Senate of the United States two attendants of as little ability and statesmanship as could have been selected. But—they can be "handled"; which is considered a desirable and necessary feature, nowadays, of a Republican office-holder's character.

Now that the fight is over, it is interesting to consider what it cost. The expense to the State has been about $150,000, for which there is no return whatever. It cost the fifty-four Democratic members of the Legislature eight weeks of valuable time and all the expense of living at Albany to the neglect of their private business. The candidacy of Mr. Depew cost parties interested in it, according to different accounts, from $64,000 to $95,000. The cost of the Sessions bribery investigation was nearly $10,000; and five indictments found by the Grand Jury will involve trials which will entail additional expense upon the State. What it has cost the Conkling and Robertson factions is known only to the managers; but it is estimated by those well informed, to have been not less than a quarter of a million of dollars. All of which does not take into account the fact that the fight has done more than anything in our history to demoralize and degrade the Republican party of New York.

DEATH OF JUDGE CLIFFORD.

On Monday was announced the death of a jurist, who, while in the full vigor of body and mind, was long an ornament to the United States Supreme Bench. Judge Nathan Clifford died at his home in Maine, 25th inst. His loss to the Bench preceded his death for some time, as with increasing years and failing health, his mind became impaired so as to incapacitate him for duty over a year ago. Up to that time he had rendered valuable service to the country as one of the ablest and most industrious members of the high tribunal of which he was so long an Associate Justice; and was one of the minority of the immortal "7 to 8." His superannuation was a public misfortune, and his death creates a vacancy among those who have been the faithful defenders of the Constitution. He leaves one of the proudest records that man can make—that of a faithful Judge. But one Democratic member of the Bench now remains.

Mr. Bookwalter's campaign for the Governorship of Ohio has begun in good earnest. The people all over the State are organizing on their own account, and with unusual enthusiasm.

THE PRESIDENT'S CONDITION.

In the midst of the general rejoicing of two weeks ago, over the favorable progress (as implied by the bulletins issued at Washington) of the President, we had occasion to caution the public against being too easily satisfied of the absence of possible danger to the patient in the days to come. Our warning was unfortunately shown to have been necessary by the sad news of Saturday last, and although since, the same reassuring messages from the sick chamber are sent forth, it would be foolish to shut our eyes to the fact that the President's condition is precarious and a slight relapse at any time may prove fatal. The cause of the crisis that developed last week, was an abscess that had formed, and it became necessary to summon the consulting surgeons in New York. An incision was made to allow the collected matter to force itself out, and in consequence the strength of the patient and the skill of the physicians is now demanded by two wounds instead of one.

That President Garfield may live and be able to discharge the duties of his office, is the earnest prayer of every good citizen. But it is useless to ignore the fact that he holds his life by a frail tenure, and while hoping for the best it is wise to be prepared for the worst.

GENERAL NEWS.

Harper's Weekly gently suggests that the Field subscription may be "embarrassing" to the public.

A decided sensation was produced at a public prayer meeting at Chicago, Friday, by the announcement that Minnie Brooks, the keeper of a disorderly house, had been converted and desired to turn her place into a house of prayer.

William Gavin, while suffering from delirium tremens, at Troy, N. Y., leaped head foremost over a precipice 125 feet high to the rocky bed of the Poestinkill creek. He was terribly cut and bruised, but will probably recover. His escape is miraculous.

For two months past the administration journals have denounced Conkling with every epithet in the vocabulary. They have called him "unscrupulous," "arrogant," etc., etc. On Friday, in return for the votes of the Stalwarts, the administrationists gave "three cheers for Conkling!"

The feat of telephoning 350 miles has been accomplished. The series of experiments made were conducted by Mr. J. F. Noonan, Paterson Manager Metropolitan Telephone and Telegraph Company. Communication was held between the cities of Buffalo and Paterson, N. J., which are 350 miles apart.

A day or two ago the citizens of Linklaen, Wayne county, Pa., were treated to an unusual sight. A large eagle swooped down upon a flock of sheep belonging to Myron W. Coon, and carried to the woods a lamb three months old, into which the bird firmly set its talons. Several who saw the eagle say that the bird was very large and "looked like a buffalo skin falling from the sky."

The Schuylkill region last week produced 165,182 tons of anthracite, an increase of 84,973 tons over the previous week and an increase of 66,680 tons as compared with the corresponding week of last year. The production of all the regions for the week amounted to 700,000 tons, an increase of 290,000 tons over last year. The production of all the regions for the year foots up 13,470,779 tons, an increase of 947,018.

Mayor King, of Philadelphia, issued a proclamation Friday morning calling attention to the violation of law relative to the carrying of concealed weapons. "The recent attempt," he says, "to assassinate the President of the United States, suddenly crushing down a whole Nation in sorrow and uncertainty demands of me, as Chief Magistrate of a city of nearly a million inhabitants, the immediate and continuous enforcement of the law."

A special dispatch from Yazoo City to the Democrat of New Orleans, says that information was received there July 25th of a horrible affair that occurred near Satartia. A white girl was outraged and murdered by a colored blacksmith named Isaac Fisher. Thinking that he had killed the girl by choking her, Fisher threw her into a well and then went to a shop near by. Returning after a little while, he found the girl standing in the water, which was two and a half feet deep. Going down on the rope, he drowned her. He was then unable to get out, and was found in the well with the body of his victim. The citizens, who had assembled, voted on the question of hanging him, but some circumstances in the case caused a majority to favor holding him until after an inquest had been held.

The first ball fired at the President by Guiteau, and which grazed his arm, has at last been discovered. It seems that a travelling glazier, who goes about with a box strapped on his back, containing window glass and tools used in his business of mending broken windows, happened to go into the Baltimore and Potomac depot on the morning of the shooting to get a ten dollar bill changed, and while in the act of unstrapping the box from his shoulders he heard the pistol shots, and almost at the same instant realized, by the shattering of his glass, that one of the balls had come in dangerous proximity to his person. Thoroughly alarmed, the glazier quickly left the building. He said nothing about the incident until Sunday last, when, in cleaning out the bottom of his box, he found a bullet. It then occurred to him that this was the missing bullet fired by Guiteau, and he repaired with it the following day to District Attorney Corkhill, to whom he surrendered it and related the above facts. The ball is identical with those used in the weapon used by Guiteau.

The New Jersey Law Journal for July contains news which will be welcome to the Justices of the Peace. When the District Court Act was passed it was thought that it took away all civil jurisdiction from the Justices of the Peace in the cities affected by the act. The Courts of the State, however, decided that point in favor of the Justices. The jurisdiction of the District Courts had been fixed at two hundred dollars by a subsequent Legislature, and the recent Legislature increased the jurisdiction of Justices of the Peace to a similar figure. This brought Justices' Courts on a level with the District Courts so far as civil business was concerned. Some lawyers were, however, inclined to doubt the constitutionality of this act, and a case in which the validity of the act was involved was accordingly appealed to the Supreme Court. Judge Knapp recently filed the decision of the court in this matter, declaring in favor of the Justices. The latter now have the same jurisdiction as the District Courts, with the additional power of taking complaints in criminal matters, a privilege not accorded to the District Courts.

A little negro in the neighborhood of Three Mile, Barnwell county, S. C., died last week from the effects of a bite of a lamprey eel.

A dilapidated box from Germany reached the Boston Post Office recently for a local jewelry firm. It was marked "no value," but was opened and contained $2,000 worth of precious stones.

A cat near Lackawaxen had three kittens which died, and a boy who had found three young rabbits put them in the place of the kittens. The cat has adopted them, suckles them and apparently is as fond of them as if they were kittens, while the little rabbits take to their adopted mother and thrive.

A little girl in Brown's Valley, Yuba county, California, lately found a bluejay's nest with four young ones in it. Three of the young ones were in orthodox blue feathers, but the fourth was pure white in plumage. She carried the wonder home and brought it up by hand. It is now full grown and is still as white as snow.

The sudden death of Dean Stanley in London, last week, was probably as great a loss to the religious world as it has been called upon to bear in some time. He was the most distinguished representative of the progressive theological thinkers of the Christian Church. The London journals speak of him as one of the tolerant men of the age, and unite in the highest encomiums regarding his life and character.

It may be death to the railroad companies, but it is a splendid thing for travelers when the companies get fighting. There is a reduction in the rates of fare to Chicago every day, and no one can tell what the next day will bring forth. If the traveling public will only be patient, there is every probability that travelers will be paid for going to Chicago and receive a chromo in addition. When the railroad companies enter into this sort of thing they generally carry it out royally.

The Pennsylvania, and Delaware and Lackawanna Railroad Companies are contemplating great improvements in Jersey City and Hoboken. The Pennsylvania road is about to extend its capacity to carry freight by building two new through tracks to Philadelphia, making the road a four-track bed. The Lackawanna Company have accepted plans for a new freight house to be erected at Hoboken to accommodate through Western freight. Both roads say their traffic has increased beyond their capacity to take care of the business.

During the first six months of the present year there were 2,862 business failures in the United States, with liabilities footing up to $40,000,000. During the same period last year the failures were 2,497, and the liabilities $33,000,000. This shows an increase of 365 in the number of failures, and of $7,000,000 in the amount of liabilities. How about the "business scare" which carried the election against Hancock? The new Republican administration shows up badly from a business point of view. If it don't do better the Republican party will need a platform as broad as Whittaker's ears to float it till 1884.

POLL-PARROT EDITORS.

If anything is amusing that relates to the distressing circumstances surrounding the President's condition, it is the avidity with which the one-horse dailies follow the lead of the administration papers. Any fears expressed or news recorded to the effect that there is danger in the President's condition, are said by the New York Times and other papers of like relation, to be unfounded and spread for their effect on the stock market—and youthful journalists fall into the trap. Brains, that are lacking in editors who form their opinions at the point of the scissors, would (if possessed) appreciate the fact that favorable news would also have its effect for somebody's benefit, in the same direction.

Smoking in the open air is confined to certain streets at Ocean Grove.

At Ocean Grove hotel cooks are not allowed to serve brandy sauce for pastry.

The testimony in the Cory trial will make a book of 600 pages. It is to be issued from the Somerville Messenger office in November.

There is reason to believe that in a few years carp will be abundant in this State. The fish that were in the ponds in Morris county, last December, all lived through the winter and are thriving finely. They have increased from two inches in length to six inches. They find their own food and bid fair to multiply rapidly.

The Republicans have given the country a Vice President to whom all eyes are now turned. Unfortunately, the men who nominated and elected him now feel the deepest chagrin, and are alarmed lest he may be called to the Presidency. Possibly he may prove to be an abler and better man than his former Republican supporters represent him. He could not well be a worse one. But with the parties so evenly divided, and the public sentiment so thoroughly active and wholesome, there is no great damage save to a squad of Republican office-holders and expectants.

ANDREWS' AMERICAN QUEEN

appears with a new heading, which is very artistic and striking. This journal—the recognized society newspaper of America—has pursued its steady march to high excellence ever since its initial number. As a striking picture of the fashionable life on this continent, its columns are marvelous in their exactitude. With correspondents at almost every watering place, it keeps its readers posted on the gaieties that take place all over the land. "Andrews' American Queen" has come to be an indispensable adjunct of American society, the ladies searching its columns as eagerly for society news as the most inveterate "bull" or "bear" does the reports of the Stock Exchange. Aside from its specialty, the literary features of the "The Queen" and its illustrations are of the rarest merit.

THE CENTURY CO'S NEW QUARTERS.

The Century Company—formerly Scribner & Co.,—will vacate its old quarters in Broadway over Charles Scribner's Sons, early in September. It has taken a ten years' lease of the fifth floor of the handsome new building on the north side of Union Square. The space at its command is in the form of an L, with the base on Eighteenth St., and is equal, altogether, to a space nearly one hundred feet wide, by two hundred feet long. Three steam elevators, front and rear, bring these high quarters in easy communication with the pavement. The publication offices will overlook Union Square. Adjoining them will be the reception rooms. The editorial rooms of SCRIBNER'S MONTHLY and ST. NICHOLAS will be in the angle of the L. The art rooms will overlook Eighteenth street, and a long, wide corridor running the entire length of the floor will give wall-space on which can be shown the pick of the company's accumulating art treasures. Mr. John La Farge and his corps of artists and assistants in his new business of colored glass decoration, occupy the top floor of the building.—N. Y. Tribune.

FIRE MATTERS.

Since the thorough overhauling and refitting of Warren's Steamer, it has been tried and found perfect. No. 2's Engine has also been put in first class order, and the same attention is to be given the apparatus of Gazelle Co. We are proud to assert that no city of like size is so completely protected from fire, as Plainfield, nor so satisfactorily cared for by willing firemen.

Twenty-two members of Warren Hose Co., and eleven of their friends, will go on a midnight picnic to Amboy, during the coming month.

Warren Engine Co., talks of holding one of its "always enjoyable" picnics, some time about the 25th of August.

NORTH PLAINFIELD PARAGRAPHS.

Mr. L. E. Barcalow undoubtedly deserves the thanks of all pedestrians passing his residence at the corner of Grove and Emily streets, for the handsome and desirable board walk he has recently laid along his property.

The very convenient bowling alley (the only one in the vicinity) at Blatz's Hotel on Somerset street, attracts many private parties of votaries of that health giving game. Everything connected with the amusement is of the best quality, and a large patronage results.

The apportionment of the appropriations for the public schools of Somerset county for the year commencing Sept. 1st, 1881, has been published by County Superintendent J. S. Haynes. From it we glean the following relative to School District No. 38, North Plainfield. Number of children, 892; surplus revenue, $324.04; State appropriation, $269.25; State tax, $4,152.25; Total, $4,745.24. These figures may be compared with those of last year by reference to our issue of the 8th inst.

SPORTSMEN'S CORNER.

Black Bass fishing is poor. The fishes do not seem to bite well.

The New Jersey Game & Fish Protective Society, whose headquarters are at Plainfield, propose purchasing a number of quail this Fall to be turned loose in the Spring in certain localities where they will receive required protection by members of the Society.

The Hunterdon Democrat, of Flemington, N. J., complains of illegal drawing of seines and nets in the Branch stream of that vicinity, and regrets that such violations of the law should occur. The proper way to put a stop to such illegal proceedings is to have the offending parties arrested and give them the full benefit of the law, which is severe on such a subject. Where is the fish warden of Hunterdon, brother Killgore? The law is stringent enough if it is enforced.

We learn that one of our well-known amateur shotists, (a dentist by occupation) has been challenged by Thomas Collins, Esq., to shoot him a match at pigeons or glass balls—time, place and conditions to be left to the challenger. Singular to relate, although Charley has put in an appearance at certain stated times and places to "put up or shut up," Thomas has failed to meet him. We begin to think that Tom is afraid and that Charley can discount him—by giving him 11 out of 10 birds.

The Local Press.

The columns of a paper are the publisher's stock in trade, and the parties who ask to use them for their special benefit must expect to pay for the same. Every public-spirited citizen of a place should have a pride in seeing his town and surroundings improve; every new house, every road, every new manufacturing establishment erected, every new business opened, enhances the value of property in our midst. Every reflecting mind knows this to be true, and it should not be forgotten that the local newspaper adds much to the general wealth and prosperity of the place, as well as increases the reputation of the town abroad. It benefits all who have business in the place; enhances the value of property, besides being a desirable public convenience, even if not conducted in the interests of the ruling political power. It increases trade, it cautions against imposition, it saves you from loss, it warns you of danger, it points out different advantages, and increases your profits.—The local press is the power that moves the people; therefore support it by advertising in it liberally, subscribing for it, and paying for it.—Printers' Circular.

State Prison Management.

The records of the New Jersey State Prison show that during the time the prison was under the management of General Mott, every twenty-four hours one or more prisoners (and generally more) were punished. Patrick Laverty has been Keeper of the State Prison since March 28, and since that time only twelve prisoners have been punished, and for fifty-two consecutive days not one convict even gave cause for punishment. An increase (other things being equal) should have been expected for the reasons: 1st, that the prisoners knew they had a new keeper, and might be expected to presume upon him. 2d, because only thirty prisoners are now employed, owing to the throwing up of contracts and other causes, and idleness begets insubordination. A representative of the State Gazette made a hurried tour of inspection of the State Prison, and was gratified with all he saw and heard. In conversation with Keeper Laverty on the subject of prison punishment, he said, "the severest punishment inflicted is incarceration in a dark cell with only bread and water, and only two or three convicts have had to remain in a dark cell over night. The stretcher or the boot-heel gag have not been used, and while I am Keeper of the prison they shall not be used." There are now 815 convicts in the prison, 26 of whom are females. Thirty only are employed, but on August 1st there will be employment for about 250. There are 14 in the hospital, 11 only of whom are actually patients. The sick call generally numbers about 50, but few being serious cases. The hospital is kept in perfect condition, with an excellent kitchen attached. The sanitary condition of the prison is as nearly perfect as can be. A number of improvements have been made recently, and the cleanliness of the institution is simply marvelous. The lesson easily learned by the visitor is that discipline and cleanliness can be maintained without tyranny or brutality.—Trenton State Gazette.

Daily "Country" Newspapers.

In its issue of Monday last, the Plainfield Daily News announced its suspension (?)—since which date the place from whence it was published knows it no more, and sombre crape looped across the doorway to its former editorial rooms, evidences the decease of another impossible attempt to run a daily paper in an infantile city. Knowledge achieved by an experience of thirteen years, regarding the needs of the city of Plainfield in the way of local journalism, has shown us that a paper published daily is sure to die sooner or later, unless bolstered by outside financial support from those who have an end in view, which they absurdly suppose can be carried out by a system of brainless abuse. In its beginning the scheme partakes of the characteristics which afford the same amusement as a toy does to any other child. Even if in the hurry of recording items of interest the facts are sure to be incorrect, yet a hundred or so copies of each issue are sold because the "enterprise" is a novelty. Then if unsparing abuse is scattered right and left—reckless of whom it may affect, or what family skeleton it may disclose—the sale continues, that gossip-lovers and scandal-mongers may feed on the choice morsels set forth regarding the character of public officials and private citizens. But, eventually, the readers of the daily lose the interest inspired by the former freshness which at first attracted attention, and the growing staleness of the enterprise (?) and the paucity of intellect displayed averts to the financial ruin of the publisher who so foolishly imagined that ability, good taste and sound judgment were unnecessary adjuncts in managing the columns of a newspaper and catering to the desires of its readers. Those who are relied upon to support the project, find that the weekly only can be depended upon for accuracy, and the daily issues are passed by. Experience in collecting news; a reputation among the public for stating circumstances instead of guesses, and giving a just expression of facts rather than surmises; a knowledge of what to say and what to leave unsaid, combined with judgment as to the way to present it in type—all these requisites with many others, are indispensable in part or whole, when publishing successfully and supporting by itself alone, a suburban journal in a city adjacent to a great metropolis.

We do not wish to intimate that the daily whose demise we record at the beginning of this article, was lacking in any of the requirements spoken of or had started out in pursuance of the line of "policy" portrayed; it existed hardly long enough to pass through the incipient and undeveloped stage of conception; but in a general way our remarks will be found most fittingly descriptive of the inner workings of a daily newspaper in cities of Plainfield's character, and a true index of the qualities lacking in such "enterprises."

VENNOR promises for August 15th, "Cooler to cold and cloudy and pleasant" weather.

Union County Property.

The table of the Assessors' valuation of the lands and real estate, personal property, liabilities, etc., of the whole taxable property in Union county, with the tax rate, is herewith given, from the Elizabeth Journal, and it is a table of figures that are very interesting.

The fluctuation in the value of the properties in different parts of the county is shown by a comparison with the list published last year. From this it appears that six out of the ten townships turn in less property than last year, while the cities and the wards of the cities with the exception of the Second, Third and Fourth wards of Rahway, turn in more property than last year. The following shows, in round numbers, how much more or less than last year are the valuations of the several wards and townships of this county for this year: Clark township, $7,250 less, (about 2 per cent.); Cranford, $25,000 less, (about 6 per cent.); Fanwood, $34,000 less, (about 4 per cent.); Linden, $23,500 less, (2 per cent.); New Providence, $22,100 less, (nearly 9 per cent.); Westfield, $1,600 less, (about 2 per cent.); Springfield, $19,000 more, (over 7 per cent.); Summit $36,000 more, (nearly 4 per cent.); Union, $3,400 more, (about 2¼ per cent.); Plainfield, $97,500 more, (about 2¼ per cent.); Rahway, First ward, $2,500 more, (over 5 per cent.); Second ward, $9,000 less, (about 2 per cent.); Third ward, $18,000 less, (not quite 2 per cent.); Fourth ward, $6,000 less, (about 1 per cent.); Elizabeth, First ward, $50,000 more, (4½ per cent.); Second ward, $445,000 more, (about 32 per cent.); Third ward, $14,000 more, (less than 1 per cent.); Fourth ward, $35,000 more, (over 3 per cent.); Fifth ward, $7,000 more, (about ½ per cent.); Sixth ward, $16,000 more, (about 1 per cent.); Seventh ward, $20,000 more, (nearly 2 per cent.); Eighth ward, $3,500 more, (over ½ per cent.)

By way of further comparison, it may be stated that the totals of last year were as follows: Real estate, $20,781,225; personal property, $3,422,690; liabilities, $728,645; total, $23,475,450. There were last year 9,773 polls. Notwithstanding the large increase in the cities, the decrease in the township returns leaves only a total increase of $540,650.

Somerset Street Assessment.

Somerset street in the Township of North Plainfield is one of the arteries or public highways connecting Plainfield with a large area of country west and northwest of Plainfield. Its importance to travel, and commerce through it will be best appreciated by reference to the county maps of Somerset and Union counties, and by traveling over its extent westerly to where it pierces the mountain. From its importance to the general public, it would seem unreasonable to assess the property adjoining Somerset street for any considerable portion of the expense of improving and maintaining the street. This street has been improved under the provisions of an act passed in 1873, and the Township Committee levied an assessment on the property fronting the street. This assessment could not be enforced, because illegal; and in 1877 an act was passed to enable the Township of North Plainfield to make an assessment for so much of the costs of Somerset street improvement as is found to be a sufficient appreciable benefit to any particular land, to make it practically assessable. Commissioners under the act of 1877 were appointed who made a new assessment, which was set aside by the Circuit Court in 1878 as illegal. This assessment placed all the expense of the improvement, except $5,600, on the land in the immediate neighborhood of the street. The assessment was assailed and resisted as illegal, unjust and oppressive. The Circuit Court appointed new commissioners to make a new assessment in 1879, the last commissioners being John Veghte, John Lindsley and La Rue Vredenburgh. Instead of making a new assessment, it is alleged that a copy of the former assessment was made and returned to the Circuit Court with an elaborate report. This assessment was confirmed by the Somerset Circuit Court, Justice Dalrymple presiding. David W. Stone and others, through their counsel, applied to the Supreme Court for allowance of certiorari, obtained writ of certiorari, restrained collection of assessment and removed all the proceedings into the Supreme Court. The Supreme Court at the last June term rendered decision against the township and in favor of the Prosecutors, ordering the judgment and order of the Circuit Court confirming the assessment set aside, and remitting the matter to the Circuit in a manner to secure the ends of justice.

The order of the Supreme Court is, "That the confirmation of the assessment in this cause be and the same is hereby set aside as illegal and for nothing holden." This is a sweeping rebuke to the whole proceeding below! The Supreme Court also allows the Prosecutors their costs of certiorari, including costs of printing; and orders the Township of North Plainfield to pay these costs, which are taxed by the Clerk of the Court at the sum of three hundred and three dollars and sixty-seven cents, ($303.67.) Judgment for these costs have also been entered against the Township. In addition to these costs, there have also been adjudged and allowed costs against the same Township in matter of Johnston Drive.

Another Victim.

On Tuesday afternoon occurred in Somerville the funeral of James Quigley, who died on Sunday morning from lock-jaw. He was one of the boys who was wounded in the hand on the "Fourth" by a toy pistol—a piece of an exploded cap entering his finger. He attended Sunday School on the 17th inst., and was then thought to be doing well; but on the following day he was taken ill and continued to grow worse, suffering agonizing pain until death came to his relief.

LOCAL DEPARTMENT.

Official Paper of the State, the County and the City, and has the Largest Circulation of any Weekly in Union County.

IF it is true that "it rains alike upon the just and the unjust," where do we Plainfielders come in?

THE First Presbyterian Church has been refitted and completely freshened inside, during the past few weeks.

THE members of the 7th Day church of this city were off on a picnic, in the vicinity of "Pope's Spring," on Sunday last. It is needless to remark that a fine time was experienced.

HEAVEN help us, now that after having been afflicted with Vennor's weather predictions, the rumors are that hoop-skirts are again coming into fashion. Girls, what are you thinking of!

THE last, and possibly the only chance to go to Ocean Grove with Plainfield excursionists, is upon the 30th of next month, when the Crescent avenue Presbyterians wind up the season.

THE case of Boone vs McNabb, decided in favor of the plaintiff by Justice McLoughlin recently, will, we understand, be taken to a higher court, with hopes of a reversal of judgment.

ABOUT fifty members of the Plainfield Saengerbund grouped themselves together in the woods, one day recently, and enabled photographer Langhorne to take a very satisfactory picture of the company.

THE Common Council will undoubtedly continue to audit and pay the bills of the N. Y. & N. J. Globe Gaslight Co., in spite of the fact that its lamps under the bridges are not universally or satisfactorily lighted.

THE C. C. C. C. or Trenton Business College Annual is on our table. It is a neat book, and contains full particulars of this most excellent institution. It will be sent post paid by addressing A. J. Rider, Principal, Trenton, N. J.

THE Revised Testament is to be used as an advertising medium. A Philadelphia man will distribute one million copies gratuitously. The Bible Society refused to sell him copies for less than twenty-five cents apiece. He got them for twelve.

SPARKS from a passing locomotive, it is supposed, set fire to a large pile of railroad ties and cord wood, lying along side of the Central Railroad, near the "tanks" below Dunellen, on Tuesday evening last, causing the destruction of many dollar's worth of material.

THE question as to whether the city can collect back taxes by action in the courts will be tried before Justice McLoughlin, on Monday, the 8th prox., Corporation Counsel Kimball representing the city, and Craig A. Marsh, Esq., the delinquent taxpayers.

THE Summit Weekly Herald, a new journal issued at Summit, N. J., by editor Lorenzo H. Abbey, comes to us this week, a new offering for public favor. The Herald is neatly printed, newsy, and presents a very fair typographical appearance. Success to its publisher.

THE types should have spelled "City National Bank," instead of 1st National Bank, in our last issue, where an item referred to the payment of monies to the Firemen's Relief Fund, the former named institution having paid a sum to Treasurer Mattison of the Relief Association.

A STAGE load of blooming and blushing damsels of Plainfield, in charge of a "jolly two," left this city during the early hours of Wednesday morning, for the shores of Boynton Beach. Lunch and bathing suits constituted the baggage taken and a day of fun and flirtation was enjoyed. "Oh! Scat me, Frank!"

THE fresh winds of the past few days have caused clouds of dust to be raised on our streets, which have demoralized the merchant as well as housekeeper. From some unexplained cause the street sprinklers have failed to keep the dust down, as they should have done. "More water" is the cry of the oppressed.

AMONG our new advertisements of to-day will be noticed that of Wm. G. Hay of 448 Hudson street, N. Y. city, a house decorator, paper hanger and sign painter of skill and reputation, who is prepared to furnish estimates for work in his line at satisfactory figures. A postal card to his address will receive prompt attention.

A WELL-KNOWN artist and a prominent tobacco merchant—both residents of this city—recently indulged in a fishing trip among the inland waters of the vicinity. It is apparent from the result of the expedition, that the wily trout escaped "Scott free"—the game brought home consisting of a string of cat-fish and a Bass.

ON Thursday evening of next week, the young people of St. Mary's parish will hold a moonlight picnic on the grounds surrounding the Hall in Fourth street. Fine music and other entertaining features will be presented, and the proceeds will be laudably appropriated towards furnishing the pastor's new residence.

ON Wednesday was buried from his late residence on Terrill Road, Mr. Bertrand Lataple, who died recently at the age of 75 years and 6 months. The deceased was a member of St. Mary's Church, and had lived in this city for the past thirty years. He leaves behind a widow and a large circle of those who hold him in high esteem.

THE scarcity of woodcock, recently impelled a "mighty nimrod" of this city to vent his hunting proclivities towards the extermination of Plainfields cat colony. He was an old hand at the business and would have succeeded in sweeping the feline race off the face of the earth, had he not been stopped by one of pussey's admirers.

The miscreants who have, with such consummate maliciousness, smashed a number of stained glass windows in the south side of the Trinity Reformed church, should be made an example of. The expense of replacing the lights will be great, as they must be made to order of the particular design carried out by the pattern of the window.

WE would call the attention of our farmers to the rich soil, most desirable for fertilizing purposes, that lies an inch thick on Park avenue between Front St. and the railroad crossing. If they would devote a few hours to carting the accumulation to their fields, crops increased therewith would amply repay them for their trouble and the time spent.

AN exchange has an article upon "Girls as Barometers." We have never thought of girls in this connection, but the idea is not such a very bad one. Girls are mercurial. They show when it is cold weather in an unmistakable way, and when they desire to make it hot for a fellow they go up accordingly. Besides girls are nice kind of barometers to have around.

A LARGE attendance gathered at the residence of Mr. Paul Loizeaux at Chatham and Water streets, on Sunday afternoon last, where very enjoyable and impressive religious services were carried on in the open air. Convenient and comfortable seats were provided for all, and the occasion will be repeated next Sunday at 4:30 p. m., at the same place.

THE grand excursion up the Hudson to Excelsior Park, under the auspices of the St. Mary's T. A. B. Society, will take place on Thursday, August 18th, leaving Plainfield at 7:30 a. m. A pleasant ride to the 'Port and a beautiful sail past the busy scenes of New York harbor and the magnificent shore of the State, will be great attractions in connection with a number of other enjoyable features.

THE Rahway Times replies to the criticism of the Central Times on the publication by the former of the fabrication regarding the circulation of a paper requesting Mayor Randolph to resign, by stating that it credited the item to its source. But we as yet have failed to see any excuse offered by our Rahway contemporary for the publication of the statement without any responsible endorsement.

THE town of Summit was greatly excited over a jury trial in a "horse case" on Tuesday last. A prominent citizen of that place felt aggrieved in respect to his purchase of a costly animal, and securing the services of John Wood, Esq., sued the vendor for fraud and deceit. Craig A. Marsh, Esq., of this city, was called in for the defence, and after an exciting contest succeeded in obtaining a verdict in favor of his client.

THE Saengerbund, in their coming moonlight picnic and summer night's festival of August 11th, do not propose to be outdone by any other organization in the same direction. The members of the entertainment committee, whose names we published last week, are all gentlemen of experience sufficient to know exactly what is wanted to afford pleasure to all, and possessed of the requisite ability to perfect every necessary arrangement.

BOYNTON Beach seems each year to increase its popularity, and numbers of large excursions and private parties visit its attractions and enjoy its pleasures daily. On Tuesday next the Springfield M. E. church intend spending the day there, accompanied by a full brass band, and subsequent dates have been secured as follows: August 2d, First Presbyterian church of Woodbridge; 4th and 5th, large excursions from New York; 9th, Cranford Presbyterian church; 9th, St. Michael's Temperance Association of New York; 11th, Roselle Methodist church.

ARRANGEMENTS are being made that will result in wiping out the entire indebtedness of the U. & M. C. M. A. Association.

IN accordance with what precedent or parliamentary usage, does the Common Council amend an Ordinance upon its third reading.

IN another column will be found an interesting communication from a correspondent sojourning at the Hot Springs of Virginia.

NOW begin to commence to get ready to make your entries in the coming Third Annual Exhibition of the U. & M. C. M. A. Association.

HAVING completed the interior of the depot in so handsome a manner, the C. R. R. painters are now engaged in retouching the outside.

ANOTHER "dog case" is set down for trial before Justice Nodyne on the 2d prox. Messrs. Suydam & Jackson for the plaintiffs and Craig A. Marsh, Esq., for the defendant.

LADIES will find a full assortment of Berlin Zephyrs, Embroideries and everything in the line of fancy work or materials for the latter, at the establishment of Mrs. W. L. Force, No. 8, Park avenue.

THE late efficient expressman of the Hotel Netherwood, Mr. Michael Undal, has charge of the grading of the grounds about the new residence of Mr. H. P. Tallmadge. The ability of Mr. Undal and his industry, will be sure to carry out the contract in a satisfactory manner.

THROUGH the courtesy of Mr. Chris. Van Arsdale of the Somerville Engine Co., we were very pleasantly entertained, one day recently, by a visit to the rooms of the Hook & Ladder Co., of that town. The quarters of the boys are situated in the Messenger building, where, besides tastefully furnished reading and meeting rooms, is also a billiard parlor containing two handsome tables, to the attractions of which the members are admitted and their friends are welcomed. The service of a gentlemanly attendant is always present, and we know of no similar arrangement for comfort and sociability in the State, that is more perfect in every particular.

A CONTINUED hearing on the subject of the Judiciary, or Courts of the State, is to be given by the Constitutional Commission, at a meeting to be held in the Board of Trade room, at Newark, at 11 a. m., on Friday, the 5th of August. The object of this meeting is to give to the members of the bar and others, residing in the upper part of the State, an opportunity to be heard on this important subject. It is to be hoped that it will be generally availed of, as the commission is desirous of learning the views of the bar and people of the State on this subject. It is the most important and interesting matter that will engage the attention of the commission.

The North Plainfield Public School.

At a recent meeting of the Board of Trustees of the North Plainfield Public School, Mr. Wm. E. Jones was re-elected Chairman and Mr. Jas. K. Arnold District Clerk. The following corps of instructors for the coming term was appointed and have all subsequently accepted: Principal, Mr. Sydney H. Moore, of Morristown; Teachers, Misses Dora Skillman, A. M. Smith, Rachael Mair, E. J. Bainbridge, S. Y. Randolph, Louisa Trembly and Lizzie Kiernan.

Mr. Moore, the new head, is a gentleman of experience and reputation as an instructor, having in former years been extensively connected with the schools of Morris County. There is every reason to feel satisfied that the Trustees have been very fortunate in their selection.

Plainfield vs. Bound Brook.

We felt assured that any right-thinking and just-minded reader of our criticism regarding the action of the citizens of Bound Brook, in allowing this city to bear the expenses incurred by our firemen in saving the property of the merchants of Bound Brook at the recent conflagration in that place, would agree with us as to the duty owed the Plainfield Department. The Chronicle of Bound Brook says, with much truth: "It is a mystery to us, as well as to many others, why the Somerville firemen received a donation of $25, and the Plainfield firemen not one cent. Certainly one company did as good service as the other, and if we mistake not, the Plainfield boys got to work first. If their services are not recognized in a suitable manner this time, we may ask in vain when we need them again."

New Jersey's Courts.

The commission appointed last winter to recommend amendments to the New Jersey Constitution met on Friday evening in Atlantic City. The meeting was, by appointment, set apart for the consideration of amendments to the judicial system. All the lawyers of the State, as well as the judiciary, had been invited to contribute suggestions, and a number were present. Ex-Judge Buchanan, formerly presiding in the Common Pleas Court at Trenton, criticised the present judicial system of the State very severely and aptly styled it an enigma. He proposed an amendment, as did also Judge Pancoast of the Camden Bar Association. The commission includes some able lawyers, and they joined earnestly in the discussion of these propositions, especially Messrs. Abbett and Bird and President of the Senate Hobart. The commission further consider the subject in Newark on August 5.

A Very Attractive Excursion.

The members of the No. 2 Engine and Hose companies have taken a new and most agreeable departure from the usual style of summer excursions that our city is favored with. On Tuesday morning next leaving Plainfield at 8 o'clock, they propose to take their friends and patrons to entirely original picnic grounds amidst the beautiful scenery of Pennsylvania. Neshaminy Falls and Rocky Glen, on the P. & R. railroad between Trenton Junction and Philadelphia, are very highly spoken of as affording every desired attraction sought by excursionists. To these places no doubt a large company of pleasure seekers will journey, and a long day of continued enjoyment will be experienced. The ride to and from will be less than two hours in duration each way; and without change of cars, through some of the most enchanting scenery of the country. Refreshments will be obtainable on the grounds; and a large dancing platform with music by Bannan's Orchestra, will be provided for the votaries of terpsichore. Stops both ways will be made at Bound Brook and Dunellen. Tickets $1, children 50 cents; to be procured at the shoe store of Sherwin & Mason, No. 23 W. Front street, or of members of the company.

The Baptist Excursion.

Fifteen car loads—supplemented at Roselle by two more—filled with young folks, old folks and lunch, made the journey from Plainfield to Asbury Park in short-metre on Friday last and landed at that delectable bathing resort a spilling crowd of Baptist Sunday School scholars, their teachers, parents, friends, other fellow's sisters and the rest. The managers of the affair had arranged it principally to afford the young people of the church a day's recreation without money and without price, and, in consequence, the influx of others was an agreeable surprise and a most satisfactory assistance towards meeting the expenses of the occasion. Before the time of starting from this city arrived, it had become necessary to refuse to sell any more tickets, as the quota of cars that is apportioned one engine at a time, was already filled. However, as all desiring to go got aboard, no one was compelled to stay at home; and the slight overcrowding experienced between Plainfield and Roselle, was relieved at the latter place by the addition of two coaches.

To describe in what way the day was passed by the excursionists, in pursuit of what varied attractions the time sped away and what scenes and incidents met the eye, would be merely to rehearse the experiences and observations of our readers at a similar place and time. Everybody must know the routine of an Ocean Grove visit, for we feel sure there is not a Plainfielder with soul so dead that he or she has neglected to patronize at least one of the divers excursions from this city to that spot. One unusual feature of the occasion, however, was noticeable, and that probably by its prominence as a sin of omission. The predilection of the sect for the liquid element was not appertained upon the day in question. Probably they were accustomed to having the element tempered to the shorn follower of St. John—be that as it may, their absence from the embrace of the sad sea waves was a subject of occasional and reprehensible facetiousness.

The return trip was probably the quickest, so far as Elizabethport, ever made. The run of the previous week was considered unusually fast, but that of Friday, although burdened with three times the load, reached the 'Port seven minutes sooner and reduced the running time of the daily express trains about a quarter of an hour. So fast was the run, in fact, that on account of a consequent hot-box, one of the cars had to be left at Elizabeth and a delay at that point occasioned, which afforded an opportunity for the mosquito colony to treat itself to a change of diet—substituting for the usual Elizabethan ration of malaria, a souvenir of Plainfield blood. Home was reached at about 8.30, and thousands of excursionists that had started out in search of enjoyment, [illegible] with happiness and enriched with enjoyment.

Netherwood Union Chapel.

Rev. Dr. Wm. Hayes Ward, Editor of the New York Independent, will occupy the pulpit of the Union Chapel, in Netherwood, next Sunday morning, the 31st inst., at 11 o'clock.

For Contempt.

The State Supreme Court has delivered an opinion that a Justice of the Peace has no authority to commit for contempt of Court. Abusive words spoken to a Justice while holding Court are, however, indictable, and a Justice may require a party offending to give bail for his appearance at the Quarter Sessions, and in default commit him, and persons so offending may be removed from the room.

The Hotel Netherwood.

The Hotel Netherwood under the usual commendable management of Mr. Chas. King, assisted by the courteous attention in the office of Messrs. Raynor and Schenck, has this year added most favorably to its achieved reputation as a summer house of perfect completion in every particular. The attendance has been most generous in each department, the cuisine unsurpassed in all its details and not an omission of a comfort or benefit that might be desired by the most critical guest, has occurred. Each week some evening entertainment has been provided to relieve the routine of hotel life, and the enjoyable drives, healthy air and beautiful scenery unite in making this resort one of the most attractive in the State.

Thrown from a Carriage.

On turning the corner of Front and Somerset streets on Saturday evening, the wheels of a carriage in which were Mr. David Conover, his wife and a friend, became in some unexplained manner tangled together and succeeded in upsetting the vehicle. The occupants, with the exception of Mrs. Conover, escaped unhurt, but that lady was so stunned as to lose unconsciousness and had to be carried into a neighboring pharmacy where the attendance of Dr. M. B. Long was summoned. The treatment requisite was administered, and later it was possible to transfer the patient to her mother, Mrs. Philpit, on Manning ave., where she has since recovered from all dangerous symptoms, and is at present only suffering the accompanying pains that attend severe bruises.

Camp Meeting.

There will be a Union Gospel Camp Meeting in Compton's Grove, Union Co., within three miles of Rahway and one mile from Uniondown Station, P. R. R., commencing on Saturday, July 23, and continuing until the 2d of August, 1881, under the direction of Rev. Jos. Pollard, pastor of A. M. E. Church of Rahway, and Rev. S. B. Williams of A. M. E. Church of Elizabeth. Clergymen and lay evangelists of various denominations will assist. The Gospel Singers will sing at each service. Preaching at 11 o'clock a. m., 3 and 7 o'clock p. m., and intermediate services, consisting of prayer, praise, temperance and childrens'-meetings.—There will be accommodations for ten thousand people.

Mr. Lewis Compton and sister, Mrs. Clark, are registered at the Romain House, Asbury Park, where they will remain a month.

Mr. Theodore Heinemann of the Plainfield Saengerbund, and now engaged by a large clothing house of New York, was in this city on Sunday last.

Joquin Miller—the "Poet of the Sierras"—and daughter, are visiting in Somerville, the guests of A. V. D. Honeyman, Esq., editor of the Gazette.

Ex-Councilman John Cameron, who is engaged in the construction of a new railroad in Warren County, visited his home in this city last Saturday.

The Rev. J. Judson Pierson of Jordanville N. Y., son of the late Dan'l. Pierson of North Plainfield, has been presented with a little baby girl to love and cherish.

Mr. Gershom Frazee intends re-visiting the silver mining districts of Arizona, near Tombstone, in a few weeks hence, he having interest in valuable mines there.

The Rev. Robert B. Clark of State Centre, Iowa, son-in-law of our City Collector, will occupy the pulpit of the Crescent avenue church, Sunday morning, August 21st.

Our sanctum received a call, on Saturday last, from Mr. Geo. Stevens, correspondent of the Yonkers, N. Y. Gazette, —"Wade Whipple." Mr. S. is visiting relatives at Dunellen.

Halsey DeCamp, Esq., (brother to "High") and wife, residents of Little Falls, New York State, visited friends and relatives in this section, since our last issue. Their friends here are legion.

Mr. J. P. Johnson, of Messrs. Shepherd, Johnson & Godown, lost by death, on Wednesday, his daughter Emma, aged 16 years. The sympathy of all is with the bereaved family in its grief.

Mr. George VanEmburgh, the capable manager of the establishment of Messrs. Edsall & Price in this city, left with his family on Friday of last week for ten day's recreation in Monmouth County.

Mr. A. T. Shotwell of this city and Miss Josie Moore of North Plainfield, were united in marriage on Wednesday. The couple left the same afternoon for a honeymoon in Saratoga, Niagara and elsewhere.

Postmistress Vail, having returned from a short term of vacation and rest, continues to manage the conveniences of her office with the same courtesy and ability that have always characterized that branch of the government's service.

Mrs. Charles Chamberlain, whose husband (formerly of Laing's Hotel, this city) is proprietor of the Fair Haven Hotel, on the Shrewsbury River, Monmouth County, made a flying visit to friends in Plainfield one day last week.

The many friends of Charles Laing, nephew of John W. Laing, Esq., will be pained to hear of his decease, on Thursday, after a short illness of hasty consumption at the early age of 26 years. "Charley" was universally esteemed by a large circle of friends and acquaintances.

Mr. Geo. A. Babcock, of Eighth Street, has given $30,000 to the University at Alfred Centre, N. Y., where a Professorship will be named in honor of him. He has also given $10,000 to the College at Milton, Wis., and promises to duplicate the bequest when the Alumni shall have raised a like sum.

Prof. James Lyon and wife have been again terribly unfortunate in losing a member of their family by death, while seeking recreation amid a change of air and scene. At Greenwich, Conn., on Saturday last, occurred the death of their youngest child, Charles Jefferson, aged 8 months and 19 days.

Mr. Alfonso Wilson, a former resident of Plainfield, engaged in the business of sinking drive wells, was in our city on Tuesday last, on business matters. The "Judge" looks remarkably well for a person of his advanced years, and states that he is engaged in the lucrative business of disposing of his patent drive well points, his office being located in Courtlandt street, N. Y. City.

Mr. Otis G. Webb, a gentleman prominently known among the athletic, political and social circles of this city and Westfield, was called upon on Saturday last to bear the severe affliction consequent upon the loss of his wife. This death follows closely upon others that have entirely eliminated Mr. Webb's immediate family, and the sympathy and consideration of a large number of friends and acquaintances will be with him in his unmeasurable sorrow.

Wm. H. Brower, Esq., of this city, Mr. C. S. Heeney, of North Plainfield, and Dr. Churchill, of Stamford, N. Y., were the guests of Jacob Kirkner, Esq., on a fishing excursion at Bay Shore, Long Island, last week, the party stopping at the club house of the "Olympic Club," of which Mr. K. is a member. The fishing was good and the yachting delightful. The number of large fish reported as captured exceeds that of any fishing party so far making returns. Considerable "chumming" was necessary to capture the specimens of the finny tribe. At all events, those interested returned home in a healthier and more bronzed condition than when they departed.

North Plainfield Courts.

State vs. John B. Holmes, Assault and Battery, Mary E. Sullivan, Complainant. State vs. Mary E. Sullivan, Larceny, John B. Holmes, Complainant.

The parties named above appeared before Justice McLoughlin at his office at Blair's Hotel, North Plainfield, on Monday last, at 2 30 o'clock p. m., to answer the charges preferred against them.

Craig A. Marsh, Esq., watched over the interests of the fair Mary, while Corporation Counsel Kimball saw that John B. received no detriment.

The complaint against Holmes was first called. The defendant waived examination, and was allowed by the Justice until the next morning to procure bail in the sum of $300 to await the action of the next Grand Jury of Somerset County.

The complaint against Miss Mary, Mr. Kimball asked leave to withdraw, and Mr. Holmes at once rose high in the estimation of the assemblage for his gallantry. Leave was granted by the Court, whereupon Mr. Marsh moved that his client be honorably discharged, which was at once done by the Court.

Miss Mary left the Court room. Mr. Holmes with another person followed. Immediately shrieks were heard from the hall. Great excitement and commotion followed, when she returned into the Court room in "durance vile" upon a warrant issued by a Justice of the Peace of Raritan township, upon the complaint of Holmes for larceny and atrocious assault and battery. Holmes' seeming kindness was explained. He hoped to have her taken to an extreme end of the County where her friends would be "few and far between."

The Justice thought that as she was in attendance at Court the warrant was illegally served. Mr. Marsh saw that this would give his client but brief protection and waived the illegality (if such it was) and requested the Justice, as Mary had been honorably discharged on a complaint nearly embracing the same subject matter, that she be held upon her own recognizance. The Justice denied the motion, holding her in the sum of $200. A gentleman of North Plainfield, believing that the woman was wrongfully accused, at once volunteered his bail which was accepted.

Mr. Holmes visited the bar-room, and after audibly expressing his opinion of certain well known Plainfield lawyers and other gentlemen of that city in which the word "Cat" was frequently used, drove to the retirement of his home. Whether he meant to infer that the parties against whom he spoke were all "Mighty Nimrods" or "Doubting Thomases," must be left to the consciences of the gentlemen.

On Wednesday evening—for some unexplained reason—the bondsman of Miss Mary delivered her up, and she was held in charge over night. During the next day, her counsel and Justice McLoughlin appeared before the Court at Somerville, where, after able argument by Mr. Marsh, she was allowed to go on her own recognizance until Monday, August 15th, for which date the trial is set down. This action is considered as the end of the matter—the charge will, probably, never be pressed.

The Tappen Family.

Our fellow citizen and former Judge, P. P. Good Esq., is—as will be seen by the notice below—one of the committee of arrangements that is engaged in an effort to bring together its "respected relatives" of the Tappen family at a contemplated reunion. As the family was originally from this State, to some extent, the communication may be of interest to our readers.

LIBERTY, Ind., July, 1881.

RESPECTED RELATIVE:

There is to be a reunion of the Tappen family to be held at Liberty, Union Co., Indiana, on the homestead of Samuel Tappen, deceased, 25th of August, 1881. You are invited to be present and bring with you your wife, sons and daughters and their families. We wish to make this an interesting occasion for all and the collateral branches of the families, viz: The Cranes, of Fountain county, Indiana, Smiths, of Missouri, Rogers and Huttons, of Cincinnati, Ohio, and all others who are related by ties of consanguinity. It is also desirable that you send or bring with you your family record written out plainly in full, by observing the rules here laid down: 1st. Be particular in giving dates of Births, Marriages and Deaths; give the day of the month, and year, in all cases. 2d. Give the names of the husband's and wife's parents in full, maiden name of mother, also the date of marriage and also the officiating officer who performed the marriage ceremony. 3d. Send your P. O. address, town, county and State. By complying with the foregoing rules the record will be completed to the present year, which is intended for publication for the immediate and collateral descendants of the Tappen family.

If you cannot come personally send a letter with reasons, together with your family record to the Committee of Arrangements.

SAMUEL C. TAPPEN,
FRED. DYKE TAPPEN,
WM. W. TAPPEN,

WARM SPRINGS, BATH COUNTY, VA.,
FRIDAY, JULY 22D, 1881.

MESSRS. EDITORS:

A few lines from this region may interest your readers. These Springs are situated among the mountains; we are 2300 feet above the sea level. The waters are famous for the cure of rheumatism and other maladies. Marvelous tales are told of invalids brought to these baths on litters, and a fortnight later clambering over the mountains in rugged health. The water strongly impregnated with sulphur comes up from the earth in a volume of 1100 gallons a minute, and after passing through the baths, turns several mills just below us. Over the springs are built swimming baths for the ladies and gentlemen; the water is beautifully clear, and comes bubbling from the small flat stones which constitute the bath floor, at a temperature of 92 degrees. Our company is made up chiefly of Southerners, though there are Notherners as well, and all mingle pleasantly in apparent forgetfulness of the late unpleasantness. Here we have General Joseph E. Johnston the famous fighting General of the confederates, held in high esteem by all; he has changed the calling of the soldier with its scenes of charging squadrons and its fearful sounds of thundering cannon and shouts of battle and cries of the wounded, for the peaceful avocations of life, being engaged in the business of insuring men's lives; his

"Bruised arms hung up for monuments."

Here, too, are men of peace; among whom your esteemed citizens, James Barker and wife of the Society of Friends. Mr. Gross also is here the principal of your famous school; God grant to him and his corps of teachers, a renewal of health and strength so needful to the faithful teacher. Here then the lion and the lamb lie down in peace toward one another under the hospitable roof of Col. Eubank, our host. Col. E. was also of the confederate army, and Secretary of the famous Virginia convention which in April, 1861 carried the State out of the Union. I am indebted to his brother and assistant Major Eubank for the loan of a pair of eye glasses, having broken my own, so that I am now viewing matters as seen through Southern spectacles. If any of your readers are in pursuit of health, after the past winter so fruitful of rheumatic ills, let them try these new and beautiful scenes, this bracing mountain air, and these healing waters. Here the whistle of the locomotive is never heard; naught but the singing of the birds, the whispering of the wind among the leaves, and the gurgling of the brook.

The expense here is moderate; $17.50 per week or $60 for four weeks. A pleasant way to come is by the fine ocean steamers of the old dominion line from New York to Richmond, which leaves only 173 miles of rail to Millboro, and 15 miles of stage ride through grand mountain scenery. Richmond is a beautiful city seated upon its seven hills and is full of objects of interest.

We all rejoice, North and South, at the good news from the President; we need his daily joke as much as our breakfast. Yesterday we were jolly at the smartness with which he proposed to part with his oatmeal to relieve Sitting Bull and his warriors; to day we are smiling over his proposal to try the quinine experiment on General Swaim! Looking through these Southern spectacles with the eye, to speak metaphorically, which sees things beyond the reach of the eye of sense, I think I can see no difference between the Northern and Southern men in their earnest desire for the President's recovery, nor in their interest in the welfare of the country.

We all discern the hand of God in leading our nation as he leads individuals, by a way they know not of. He maketh even the wrath of man to praise him. With the pillar of cloud and fire, and through the Red Sea he is bringing us to the promised land. He will be our King if we will have Him to rule over us and if we will keep His statutes.

E.

THE thanks of this community would gladly be tendered Providence in the event of a natural street sprinkling.

WESTFIELD WISPS.

The Town Committee met last night—particulars in our next.

Rev. Dr. Drum is absent upon a short vacation.

Prof. A. Edgar Wilcox is visiting Mr. Foster E. Conner, at Middletown, N. Y.

Mr. Chas. B. Peddie is sojourning at Belmont Hall, Schooley's mountains.

Mr. Wm. Alpers is enjoying a short vacation at Kittatinny House at Delaware Water Gap.

We regret to announce the serious illness of the eldest child of our popular baggage master, Gus Koester.

Hurrah! Road Overseer, District No. 11, has at last commenced work. Follow suit, Messrs Overseers!

Our absent Postmaster has arrived safe and sound at Jerseyville, Illinois, and reports a pleasant journey.

The case of Campbell vs. McGowan, was settled on Wednesday last between the parties to the action without trial.

Messrs. Henry Sandford and Harry Livingston, representatives of Mr. H. R. Taylor, owner of the Lyceum property, were in town this week.

Those in search of that great and justly celebrated specific "Hunki-ori" water (not wire about name) can procure it at "Bayard's."

Our sympathies are extended to Mr. John Sanford and family in the great loss sustained by the death of their child which sad event occurred on Sunday last.

The Congregationalists have not as yet decided upon a location for their proposed church, although it will undoubtedly be a completed edifice by January 1st, 1882.

Insurance surveyors visited our village this week relative to the re-insurance of the Lyceum Hall. With our efficient Fire Department, it is high time that insurance rates were reduced here.

Our dispenser of ice has not as yet raised the price, although the same bug that has attacked the New York city supply is liable to appear at any time. Humbug, we refer to.

Our irrepressible Natural-ist, Augustus K. Gale, has at last, after diligent search, secured two capital specimens of the musculus and exhibited them to admiring crowds during the past week.

The popular assistant at "Bayard's," Mr. John Dorvall, left us to-day for a trip to Montreal, Canada, his former home. During his short residence here he has made many friends, who join together in wishing him a pleasant trip and safe return.

The presence of a dead feline under the office of Squire Jacques on Tuesday morning last, fairly drove that official from his desk. After a long search the owner of the property was found, and Health Inspector Lewis Carll removed the nuisance.

Those desiring to consult our local representative relative to business connected with this paper—advertising, job printing, subscriptions, items, &c.—can find him after this date at reasonable business hours at his office, cor. Broad and Elm streets, over Pierson's store.

Great pleasure is given our residents by the knowledge that the celebrated Revolutionary relic, John McCarthy's hat, has been secured for our Historical Society. The credit of its possession is due to Prof. Edw. Edgar, who swapped a more modern head covering for it.

We feel obliged to contradict previous rumors that the frequent runaways of Darsh's horses were intended for advertising purposes, as the latest, which occured last Friday, resulted in damage far in excess of usual advertising rates. Advertise in the Westfield column, John, and refute this base slander.

Mr. I. A. Sills, who has been supplying the residents of this and adjacent townships with "Beer Grains" during the past year, seems to find his particular grains in extra demand. Wagons from Plainfield, Summit, New Providence and other townships surround his cars upon their arrival. This demand from outside would indicate the superior quality of the material delivered.

Mr. J. [illegible] Emmons, Jr., Station Agent, at [illegible] 104th street Station of the Ninth avenue elevated R. R. was brought to his home at Westfield on Wednesday last. While endeavoring to board a down train at that station on Monday night, his foot slipped and the railing across the track caught him and threw him to the street below, a distance of 30 feet, breaking both wrists and inflicting other serious injuries.

Owing to the absence of any arrangements in our village for properly watering the streets, the present season of dust has proved decidedly unpleasant to our citizens. We would suggest to the occupants of property upon Broad street that the addition of a few more force pumps with necessary hose, such as already provided by Messrs. E. Miller & Sons, and Mr. Wm. Gale, would prove a wise purchase. The amount of goods annually damaged in our stores by the dust would more than pay for them.

The following, published in Tuesday's N. Y. Tribune, will be of interest to our readers, as it is from the pen of one of Westfield's Physicians, and relates to a question of National importance. We also append the editorial note with reference to it.

MALARIA IN THE WHITE HOUSE.

To the Editor of The Tribune:

SIR:—In your paper of to-day much is said about the malaria of the Capitol, and the fears lest our much-loved President may be attacked with malarial fever. As a physician of thirty years practice in a malarial district, I may be allowed to suggest that the secret cause, and that which predominates at the White House, is the large quantity of ice used for cooling the air. It is one of the prolific causes of typhoid fever, following in the train of intermittent in all its various types. Nothing is more conducive to fever than living in an atmosphere of ice, and then leaving the chilled atmosphere to expose one's self to a heated one. If you will remove the refrigerators of ice you will get clear of the malaria.

DR. KING.

Westfield, N. J., July 25, 1881.

[The suggestion does not seem at all relevant. The President has not contracted any malarial disease since the refrigerating machine was put in, whereas the President's wife did so before anything of the kind was introduced. That the Executive Mansion is in an unhealthy district and is not in good sanitary condition itself, is only too plain.—ED.]

The long disputed and generally discussed subject that has almost resulted in the disbandment of the Westfield Geographical Society, "The shortest route to Rahway?" has at last been decided to the entire satisfaction of the community, and the leather medal of award has undoubtedly found its just owner. When we consider fully the difficulties and dangers of an exploration of this nature, we cannot help but feel that Stanley, Livingston and other great explorers have fairly been out done. The one great regret that we have in describing this wonderful discovery is the fact, the young explorer, as well as his immediate assistant, decline positively to allow their names to go down in history, or to accept the natural ovation that would be tendered by our citizens. The night was dark and drear, upon which this expedition started, and but few aside from your local realized that such an expedition—actuated by motives as high as others in their attempts to locate the source of the Nile or the passage to the Pole—was about to start from our little village. Once started, dangers beset them upon every side, improperly graded roads, ditches, corners to turn—in fact dangerous without number. Scarcely a mile had been covered before an accident befel the jigger that necessitated a halt for repairs, and a number of this intrepid band returned to the starting point to secure means of travel. Reassured by their undaunted commander, the route again taken up, and after many difficulties had been encountered and successfully overcome, the wild tribe of Connetts was encountered. After a parley and distribution of glass (not beads) the permission to proceed was required, and no opposition to the favorable ending of the journey was encountered until the monarch of Avenel approached and called a halt. Several of the followers of our daring explorer revolted at this point and exhibited their indignation by a war dance upon the prairie (otherwise backyard) and fearful of the desertion of his entire party he found himself obliged to return over a portion of the ground already covered. Arriving at that portion of the country, known to the natives as the middle of the world, he received a further shock by the desertion of one of his favorite lieutenants, who made tracks for home. Not discouraged, however, the little band pushed on and were finally rewarded for all their troubles and trials by their safe arrival at Mellick's. After a day of rest visiting [illegible], Tanners, Widow Brophey's and other places, a return was ordered; and after encountering many dangers the starting point was reached after an absence of only 24 hours. The distance as given by the sign boards on the route hitherto explored, is 5 miles.

Our entire community during the last week seems to have had what might be termed the Woodbridge craze. In fact many desiring to visit Boynton's, Ackar's and other places there, have found it almost impossible to secure conveyances, and we hear of several parties made up for future dates. Among those who have visited one or the other of these resorts, during the past week, we noticed Messrs. J. and O. W. Dennis, Robert Fairburn and family, Mrs. Wm. H. Pierson and family, Anson F. Grant and family, Chas. H. Daniels and Mrs. Austin Brown, on Tuesday last. Mr. and Mrs. A. H. Shopland, Miss Essie Jacques, Miss Emma Starr, Mr. and Mrs. Shrope, Misses Corys, Mrs. M. Cory, Messrs. Traske, Hedges, Rev. and Mrs. W. H. Gill, Mr. and Mrs. Chas. Peddie, Mrs. George W. Tice and Miss Nellie Lansing, on Wednesday, comprising one party, and Messrs. J. Allen Worth, A. L. Alpers, Charles Macquoid, L. V. Clark, Jr., Misses Helen B. Baker, Lottie Conney, Louisa Evans, Lulu C. Worth, Tillie Alpers, Belle Pierson, Emma L. Bridges, Mrs. W. W. Baker, Mrs. John H. Worth and Mrs. Knight, on the same day. As customary their outgoing and incoming was heralded by singing, horn blowing &c. After careful consideration of the varied abilities of the different horn ists, we award the medal to Mr Dennis, one of Tuesday's party, for his unrivalled execution on a fog horn. When one considers the amount of wind necessary to perform upon this delicate instrument it certainly indicates that but little practice would be necessary to enable this gentleman to play at one time upon all the instruments in a brass band.

The following tables prepared and kindly furnished by Assessor J. M. C. Marsh, will prove of interest to our citizens generally. Tax rate 1881 compared with 1880.

	1881.	1880.
County,	.48	.51
State School,	.25	.21
Road,	.19¼	.19¼
Fire,	.04	.04
Special School,	.55	.61
Township,	.25	.25
Total,	1.76¼ per$100	1.81¼ per$100

The increase in State School tax is due to the change in the law relative to this tax, replacing the 2 mill tax by a provision making a State tax of $4 per scholar. Notwithstanding this and the fact that $7,000 more was raised for county purposes this year, our citizens ought to feel satisfied with the reduction on total rate of 5 cents per $100.

The special road taxes are as follows:

Road Dist.	Valuation.	Special Tax	Rate per 100.
No. 2	$37,520	$30	.08
" 3	29,025	110	.40
" 4	90,600	125	.14
" 5	29,380	9	.03¼
" 6	23,750	100	.42
" 7	30,875	50	.17

" 9	42,975	100	.23¼
" 11	67,465	150	.22¼
" 12	69,375	150	.22
" 14	54,200	100	.19

MESSRS. WHITE & BRADDOCK, Druggists, Ithaca, N. Y.—I recommend to those suffering (as I have been) with Hay Fever, Ely's Cream Balm. WHAT IS BEHIND IT?

Dr. David Kennedy, of Rondout, N. Y., proprietor of the great medicine called "Favorite Remedy," would have but little confidence to recommend the public to buy and use it if his own name were not behind it. But the fact that he has staked his reputation upon it ought to be, and is, better than a thousand cheap certificates—in the opinion of the people. If you are sick with any complaint of the Blood, Kidneys or Liver, invest one Dollar in the Favorite Remedy, and it will speak for itself.

of all descriptions are relieved at once and speedily cured by Kidney-Wort. It seems intended by nature for the cure of all diseases of the kidneys caused by weakness and debility. Its great tonic powers are especially directed to the removal of this class of diseases. We know of persons that have suffered for thirty years that have been permanently cured by taking Kidney-Wort a short time. Try it, either liquid or dry.—Sun.

IDLE EXPERIMENTS.

When a man is well and sound he can afford to be indifferent to the character of all the medicine in the world. But when disease is fairly eating him up, he must do something at once and do it intelligently. Therefore, do not dose yourself with a hundred things in the hope that some of them may hit the mark, but try Dr. David Kennedy's "Favorite Remedy" which hits it every time. For kidney and liver troubles, piles and constipation, it is just what you want. Druggists have it, or send one dollar to the doctor at Rondout, N. Y.

Is it cowardly to keep silent during a competitor's existence, and then after the power to publicly reply is past, to abuse with false statements, which are known to be false? Or is it brave to kick a man after he is down?

RESCUED FROM DEATH.

The following statement of William J. Coughlin, of Somerville, Mass., is so remarkable that we beg to ask for it the attention of our readers. He says: "In the fall of 1876 I was taken with a VIOLENT BLEEDING OF THE LUNGS followed by a severe cough. I soon began to loose my appetite and flesh. I was so weak at one time that I could not leave my bed. In the summer of 1877 I was admitted to the City Hospital. While there the doctors said I had a hole in my left lung as big as a half dollar. I expended over a hundred dollars in doctors and medicines. I was so far gone at one time a report went around that I was dead. I gave up hope, but a friend told me of DR. WM. HALL'S BALSAM FOR THE LUNGS. I laughed at my friends, thinking that my case was incurable, but I got a bottle to satisfy them, when to my surprise and gratification, I commenced to feel better. My hope, once dead, began to revive, and to-day I feel in better spirits than I have the past three years.

"I write this hoping you will publish it, so that every one afflicted with Diseased Lungs will be induced to take DR. WM. HALL'S BALSAM FOR THE LUNGS, and be convinced that CONSUMPTION CAN BE CURED. I have taken two bottles and can positively say that it has done more good than all the others medicines I have taken since my sickness. My cough has almost entirely disappeared and I shall soon be able to go to work." Sold by druggists. 1 2

On the waiter, which alone cost $60, was engraved the following: "Presented to Col. John C. Rose by the Board of Officers and Friends of the Third Regiment. July, 1881."

Statistics often prove unwelcome facts and none more so than that twenty per cent. of the people of this State die from consumption and kindred diseases. The great question how to reduce this terrible mortality has engaged the minds of our most eminent scholars and physicians. From the testimonials of thousands who have seen ASHMUN'S ELIXIR OF SCIPHUR, nothing in the way of medicine has ever done so much toward this end. In all afflictions of the throat and lungs its remedial effect is simply wonderful. Once introduced into every household it would banish the terror of this disease from the land. Sold by A. MISCELLANEOUS READING.

MRS. SPOOPENDYKE AGAIN.

"Is there any truth in this story that Mr. Garfield has killed Senator Conkling?" inquired Mrs. Spoopendyke, fitting the sleeve into the arm hole and running in the basting.

"No," ejaculated Mr. Spoopendyke. "Where did you get that? Mr. Conkling has resigned, but he ain't dead."

"I read that he got into some difficulty with Mr. Garfield, and Mr. Garfield had dragged him around by the ear, and finally they had to take Mr. Conkling away to save his life though he died afterward."

"Who said so?" demanded Mr. Spoopendyke. "Where'd you read anything like that?"

"I read it in a pattern that Mrs. Winterbotham loaned me for an overskirt. I'm sure it's so," replied Mrs. Spoopendyke.

"Get the pattern," said Mr. Spoopendyke. "Show it to me."

Mrs. Spoopendyke unrolled the pattern and commenced to read:

"The complications at Washington have assumed the most exciting shape. To-day the trouble between Garfiled and Conkling culminated by Conkling seizing him by the throat while the crowd yelled with delight. Twenty to one was offered but Ganfield remained firm and declared that the administration will not yield. This position aroused the crowd to frenzy. It is said that Conkling really desires to retire to private life, but Garfield at that moment planted his teeth in his game adversary's ear and dragged him around until the friends of Conkling interfered to save the poor thing's life. He was taken home but died in a few minutes."

"There!" said Mrs. Spoopendyke, triumphantly, "I told you so."

"Show me!" said Mr. S., jumping up and seizing the pattern. "Where d'ye find such dod gasted nonsense as that? Where is it?"

"There it begins under the ruffle, then it runs over on the band and down the gore and ends here on the plaiting. I know I'd seen it," and Mrs. S. smilled pleasantly.

"What's the matter with you, you measly idiot?" howled Mr. Spoopendyke. "There is where you got your political information, is it? This is the source of your intelligence on national affairs? All you want is two more patterns and a bald head to be a constitutional lawyer! Three over-skirts and a pair of spectacles would make you a supreme court judge! What d'ye think this is?"

"Isn't it right?" faltered Mrs. Spoopendyke. "Did you read from the ruffle over to the band and down to the gore—"

"Yes, I did, didn't I?" squeaked Mr. S., and so did you, didn't you? Do you know what you've got here?"

"Isn't it a pat—"

"Dob dash the pattern—I mean the print! Part of it is about Garfield, part about Conkling, and the rest is about a dog fight out on Long Island. Know what it is now? Think you can understand it, now I've explained it to you? Oh! you can! You've got brains! Some day I'm going to run a pipe into your ear and start a phosphorus factory!" and Mr. S. danced out of the room leaving it strewn with pattern dust.

"I don't care," sobbed Mrs. S., "it read all right, and the skirt fitted so nicely that I supposed the articles were put together straight. And it was perfectly natural anybody might make the same mistake. It's so like some of the news from Washington that I've been expecting it every day, and Mrs. S. overcast the sleeve in serene conviction that after all you've got to patch a newspaper into a pattern to get at the actual facts, some times.—Brooklyn Eagle.

MAKING THINGS OVER.

"Maria," said Mr. Jones upon one of his worrying days, "it seems to me you might be more economical; now, there's my old clothes, why can't you make them over for the children instead of giving them away?"

"Because they're worn out when you're done with them," answered Mrs. Jones. "It's no use making over things for the children that won't hold together; you couldn't do it yourself, smart as you are."

"Well," grunted Jones, "I wouldn't have closets full of things mildewing for want of wear if I was a woman, that's all. A penny saved is a penny earned."

This was in April. One warm day in May Mr. Jones went prancing through the closets looking for something he couldn't find and turning things generally upside down.

"Maria," he screamed, "where's my gray alpaca duster?"

"Made it over for Johnny."

"Ahem! Well where's the brown linen one I bought last summer?"

"Clothes-bag!" mumbled Mrs. Jones, seeming to have a difficulty in her speech at that moment. "Just made it into a nice one!"

"Where are my lavender pants?" yelled Jones.

"Cut them over for Willie."

"Heavens!" groaned her husband; then in a voice of thunder, "where have my blue suspenders got to?"

"Hung the baby-jumper with them."

"Maria!" asked the astonished man in a subdued voice, "would you mind telling me what you have done with my silk hat; you haven't made that over for the baby, have you?"

"Oh! no, dear," answered his wife cheerfully. "I've used that for a hanging basket. It is full of plants and looks lovely."

Mr. Jones never mentions the word economy or suggests making over—he has had enough of it.

An Ohio girl "takes the cake" on big feet. A shoe factory in Albany has received a diagram of the foot of Miss Mary Wells, of Sandusky, who placed her bare foot on a sheet of paper for the purpose. This foot, as shown by the diagram, is exactly 17 inches long, 7½ inches wide at the widest part, and would take a No. 26 boot, though a No. 30 would be just the thing. The ball of the foot is 19 inches round, instep 18½ and the heel measures 22 inches. The ankle measures 16½ inches. Miss Wells weighs 160 pounds, and she is but 17 years old.

It may not be generally known that the postal regulations forbid all persons employed in the postal service reading the contents of postal cards transmitted through the mails, under penalty of not less than $100 or more than $1,000 for each case of disobedience.

The movement on foot for the Governors of the various States to issue proclamations calling for a day of general thanksgiving throughout the United States as soon as President Garfield is announced convalescent, meets with general approval by the Governors of States. Gov. Ludlow has written that he will join in the movement.

"SEND FOR MOTHER."

Dear me! It wasn't enough for me to nurse and raise a family of my own, but now, when I am old and expect to take a little comfort here, it is all the time 'send for mother.'" And the dear old soul growls and grumbles, but dresses herself as fast as she can, notwithstanding. After you have trotted her off, and got her safely in your home and she flies around administering her remedies and rebukes by turns, you feel easier. It is right now, or soon will be—mother's come!

In sickness, no matter who is there or how many doctors quarrel over your case, everything goes wrong, somehow, until you send for mother.

In trouble, the first thing you think of is send for mother.

But this has its ludicrous as well as its touching aspect. The verdant young couple, to whom the baby's extraordinary grimaces and alarming yawns, which threaten the dislocation of its chin, its sleeps, which it accomplishes with its eyes half open, and no perceptible flutter of breath on its lips, causing the young mother to imagine it's dead this time, and to shriek out, "Send for mother!" in tones of anguish—this young couple, in the light of the experience with which three or four babies bring, find that they have been ridiculous and given mother a good many trots for nothing.

Did any one ever send for mother and she fail to come? Never, unless sickness or the infirmities of age prevented her. As when, in your childhood, those willing feet responded to your call, so they still do; and will continue to do as long as they are able. And when the summons comes which none yet disregarded, though it will be a happy day for her, it will be a dark and sad one for you, when God, too, will send for your mother.

Great Heat in the West.

The United States Signal Service thermometer at Cincinnati, registered 103 5 10 at 3:15 on Tuesday afternoon July 12th. An ordinary thermometer registered from 7 to 8 degrees higher in the shade. The heat was the greatest on record in Cincinnati. The Coroner was called to attend thirteen deaths, all from congestion of the brain, supposed to have been superinduced by the excessive heat. There were twelve sunstrokes, though no fatal cases were reported up to midnight.

In Covington, Ky., there were six cases of sunstroke on Tuesday, four of them fatal.

At Indianapolis, Ind., Tuesday was the *hottest day of the season. The thermom*eter registered 101 degrees in the shade. There were three fatal sunstrokes, and a number of other cases are reported.

According to reports made by the Signal Service observer, Tuesday was the hottest day in St. Louis, of which any record exists. At 8 a. m. the mercury marked 80 1 degrees; at 8 o'clock 94 9; at 2 o'clock p. m., 202 2; and at 6 o'clock p. m. 97 9; minimum, 97; maximum, 104 1; the latter between 3 and 4 o'clock. Prof. Kribber, of Washington University gives the readings of a thermometer absolutely shielded from the reflected and radiated heat at 102 3 degrees, and says, with the exception of July 21, 1860—when the mercury arose 103 5 at 2:30 p. m., that Tuesday was the hottest day in 26 years.

Business has been considerably interfered with. On Friday and Saturday it was difficult to get laborers to work on the levee, and the loading and discharging of steamers was much delayed. Teamsters were obliged to suspend work during most of the afternoons of Friday and Saturday, and a great part of the hauling in the business part of the city was done after sundown. A score of horses died from the heat. Thirty-eight cases of prostration by the heat have been reported since Friday, twenty-three of which were fatal. Eight of these deaths occurred Tuesday. The mortality of the week was two hundred and fifty, an increase of twelve over the previous week, and eighty-one more than the corresponding week last year.

Still Another Comet.

Prof. Swift, Director of the Warner Observatory, Rochester, N. Y., has just verified the discovery of another comet, in the Constellation of Auriga, made July 14th, by Prof. J. M. Schaeberle, of Ann Arbor, Mich. This new comet is apparently coming directly toward the earth, and, for a telescopic comet, is very bright; indeed, it can readily be seen with a good opera glass. It is quite remarkable that it should be in just the spot where the present large comet was first seen by the naked eye in this latitude, and it shows that the two bodies must have crossed each other's paths. This makes the fourth comet discovered within ten weeks, a circumstance heretofore unknown in history. Prof. Schaeberle has duly filed his application for the Warner prize of $200, and as yet he is the only claimant.

STATE ITEMS.

The oat crop in the northern part of the State will be large.

The Mayor of Hackettstown has issued a proclamation against corner loafing, congregating in front of churches, swearing and fast driving.

A. Z. Rutan, an old resident of Saddle River, has in his possession a claim of $38 against the U. S. Government. It is dated March 31, 1780, and was given by Gen. Washington's quartermaster, Peter Hinman, to Albert Zabriskie of Pompton for four bushels and three pecks of oats.

Barnegat bridge is one mile and three-eighths and three feet long. It contains in all 2,024 piles, driven in bents of four piles to a bent, the bents being sixteen feet apart. The bridge crosses the bay at Sheepshead point, one and one-quarter miles south of the mouth of Toms River.

The experiment of running a locomotive without brakes has just been successfully tried by the Delaware, Lackawanna and Western Railroad Company. The locomotive is one of ordinary pattern, but has an extra pipe leading from the boiler to the steam chest by which power can be applied against the piston, checking the engine and enabling the engineer to reverse it without "hauling over."

The Central Railroad has fitted up fine quarters at Bound Brook for the men who pilot the P. R. R. trains over the road. Elegant velvet carpets, oil paintings and the Improved Cabinet Bedsteads, with hair mattresses, are a few of the many adornments which will the rooms attractive. Each pilot has a bed to himself, with a place under it to keep a lantern.—Exchange.

The quoit pitchers still assemble at Brittin's Hotel to indulge in the fascinating game on the fine grounds adjoining the hostelry. It requires a man of nerve and knowledge of the game to vanquish some of the dabsters of the Plains.

A correspondent of the Dansville Advertiser says George Washington "never would have made an editor, because he couldn't tell a lie."

A Western editor called Alexis the noble "Russ." The printer made it "Kuss."

Has any one heretofore remarked that a poster is a stuck-up thing?

MR. Wm. WESTFALL,

Of Dutchess Co., N. Y., 80 YEARS of AGE, Suffered Continually for Many Years from STONE in the BLADDER.

Great age and painful disease are a sad combination. Yet Mr. William Westfall, formerly of Rock City, Dutchess Co., N. Y., now of Washington Hollow, in the same county, came to the office of Dr. David Kennedy, the eminent Physician and Surgeon, of Rondout, N. Y., some time since, in a condition to excite the sympathy of the most cold-blooded and hard-hearted person in the world. We say he came—he was, rather, carried to the Doctor's office, for he was totally helpless, and bore the weight of 80 years beside. [illegible]

The Reason Why

Dr. Kennedy's "Favorite Remedy" is being extensively used by our people are as follows: It is a combination of vegetable alteratives. It is pleasant to the taste, adapted to both sexes and all ages, is effective in affording immediate relief in all cases of Kidney troubles, Liver Complaints, Constipation of the Bowels, and derangements peculiar to women. [illegible] by all druggists.

TUBULAR HOT-BLAST NON-EXPLOSIVE

Oil or Gas Stoves!

THE REASONS WHY THE TUBULAR HOT-BLAST OIL OR GAS STOVE IS SUPERIOR TO ALL OTHERS:

Its appearance is more like a stove than anything that has yet been offered.

It requires no wire gauze or water tank to make it safe.

A continual current of air passes to the burners over the Oil Pot, preventing the oil from getting warmer than the atmosphere in which it is burning. The bake oven is not in the way of the kettle or boiler.

Baking, roasting, and boiling can all be done at once, and in less time than with any other oil stove.

THE NEW BUSINESS

OF THE

EQUITABLE

Life Assurance Society of the U. S.

FOR THE YEAR 1880, WAS OVER

Thirty-Five Millions of Dollars,

The Largest Business Done by any Company in the World.

REASONS FOR THIS RESULT.

The Equitable is the strongest Company in the United States.

Its policies are, by their own express terms, made incontestable after three years. [For precise terms see form of policy contract.]

ALL such incontestable policies are paid immediately after receipt of satisfactory proof of the death of the insured, and without even the customary delay of sixty or ninety days.

EACH ordinary policy provides for a definite surrender-value in paid-up assurance, in case the policy is forfeited after three years from its date and is surrendered within a reasonable time thereafter.

BY THE TONTINE SAVINGS FUND plan of assurance, returns to policy-holders, after the expiration of what is called the Tontine period, are greater than are obtainable on any other system. Actual settlements of Tontine policies have been made in which policy-holders have withdrawn amounts varying from eighty to one hundred and twenty per cent. of premiums paid, besides enjoying a life insurance indemnity during the period. No other company can show such results.

THE TONTINE plan is the only one under by which a person may withdraw from his insurance contract at specified periods, receiving the entire reserve and surplus accumulation in cash.

ALL the ordinary forms of insurance with annual dividends of profits, both cash and reversionary, are issued by this Society.

ASSETS,	-	$41,108,602.
SURPLUS,	-	$9,228,294.

Its business for the last ten years (represented by the new policies issued) has been larger than that of any other Company.

POETRY.

OUR LITTLE GIRL.

"Oh, mamma, mamma, it's half past eight;
Where are my rubbers? I shall be late;
And where is my pencil? I know just where
I laid it down, but it is not there.
Oh, here is my bag, with my books all right—
I'm glad that my lessons were learned last night
And now I'm off—here's a kiss—good-by,"
And out at the door I see her fly.

I stand at the window and watch her go,
Swinging her school bag to and fro,
And I think of a little girl I knew
A long way back, when my years were few;
And the old red house beneath the hill,
Where she went to school—I see it still,
And I make for the child a little moan,
For her face, through the mist, is like my own.

The hours go by—it is half past two,
And here comes Nell with her schoolmate, Sue;
They had their lessons; they both were "five,"
There are no happier girls alive.
They laugh and shout, and to and fro
Through every room in the house they go.
The music teacher will come at four,
But they can play for an hour or more.

It is evening now, and, with look sedate,
Our little maid, with her book and slate,
Comes into the room. We chatter and read,
But she to be perfect must work indeed.
No need to be talking in days like these
Of the early birds and busy bees,
There's work enough, and don't you tell!)
There's quite too much for girls like Nell.

MISCELLANEOUS READING.

THE TEMPTER.

A full moon gleamed fitfully through dark rifts of cloud, lighting up a long stretch of beach upon which the foam-capped billows broke with that deep, moaning sound which presages a coming storm. This sound had awakened Lucy Mott, the fishermen's daughter, who now stood leaning upon the sill of her window, looking out half anxiously, half dreamily on the wild and desolate scene. She was a slight, fair girl of eighteen, with delicate features, and an air of native grace and refinement which seemed scarcely in accordance with her homely surroundings. And yet her father—"old Phil Mott," as he was called—had come of a respectable, well-to-do family, who had long since discarded him on account of his wild and lawless ways, and his marriage with a tailor's pretty daughter, who had made him a better wife than he deserved.

She had been some years dead, and Lucy now filled her place in the humble home. She did what she could to make it pleasant and attractive; but the girl's nature was an elevated and a refined one, which found no congeniality in the society of the few fishermen's families by whom she was surrounded, and nothing to gratify her taste in her humble home beyond her bit of flower garden, and the sea, always grand and beautiful, and, most of all, a box of books, which had years before been left in her father's care, and never reclaimed. It takes a solitary, pleasureless life, such as Lucy's, to enable one to appreciate the value of such treasures as Shakespeare, Scott and others, who have been to thousands, and shall be to millions more a blessing and a "joy for ever."

But Lucy was not thinking just now of her dearly loved books. Her mind was less pleasantly occupied in anxious thought of her father, who had left home at daybreak, on a fishing excursion, promising to return at sunset. She had watched for him till long after dark, and had then fallen into a slight slumber, from which she had been aroused, as we have said, by the premonitory sounds of the coming storm.

"I hope nothing has happened to him," thought Lucy, anxiously.

And, as if in answer to the thought, came suddenly the sound of her father's voice, borne toward her by the breeze. Leaning forward, she saw dimly two figures advancing swiftly upon the beach, and she stood still, wondering who could be her father's companion at this late hour. Nearer they came, and paused at length almost at her window, talking earnestly.

"I don't much like it, I must say," she heard her father remark; and in answer came some words in an eager, suppressed voice, at sound of which Lucy drew back with a short of shudder.

It was Martin Heriot, as he was called—a young man who had suddenly dropped into his quiet little fishing hamlet, as from the clouds, and concerning whom nothing was known, except that he was good-looking, clever, and very agreeable when in a good humor, but fierce and desperate when aroused.

He had fallen in love with pretty, modest Lucy Mott, and her father had only yesterday told her it was his wish and will that she should become the young man's wife. Heriot, he said, was a clever fellow, and could make her a fortune if he would. And so soon as they should be married, they would go, all three, away from this wretched place to another, the name of which he did not mention, but where, he said, their fortune would be secured. And the girl knew that when her father spoke in this resolute way, he was in earnest, and that, therefore, her fate was sealed.

Poor Lucy! It was not only that she instinctively shrank from and mistrusted Heriot, that this match was so distasteful to her, but that, almost unknown to herself, she had allowed her thoughts and her heart to become interested in another. She blushed when she thought of it, and remembered that this other was almost a stranger to her—a young man whom she had seen only as he rode past her father's cottage, and had spoken to once or twice as he had stopped and asked if her father were at home, and then, lingering, had remarked upon the beauty of the flowers in her little garden. And the last time she had seen him, he had glanced at the old leather-bound volume which lay open on the gate-post, whilst she was busily tying up her roses, and had inquired, with that look of pleased surprise in his deep blue eyes, whether she liked "The Lady of the Lake."

That had been only yesterday, and ever since Lucy Mott had been in a sort of vague, delicious dream, that startled herself—all born of something inexplicable which she had seen in the look of those blue eyes. But he was the rich young heir of Rockford estate—she could see the tall chimneys and Lombardy poplars rising miles away—whilst she was only a fisherman's daughter.

And now, in place of that sweet, half tender voice, the accents of which still haunted her, Lucy was listening to Martin Heriot's rough, energetic tones.

"I tell you, Mott, the thing must be done at once, or not at all. We have scarcely half an hour left."

"But if he shouldn't have the money with him?" said Mott, doubtfully, as if seeking an escape.

"He has got it with him. It was purposely for this money that he went to M—— yesterday, and, as I told you, he was seen to secure it in his wallet before he left the bank. Four thousand dollars! Think of it, man, and what it will do for us!"

"We may be found out—"

"We can't be found out. I have planned securely against every risk, and defy the devil himself to betray us. In the name of—"

And here followed an impatient burst of blasphemous language, in the midst of which Philip Mott, as if yielding to a power superior to himself, exclaimed:

"Well, come along! and if blood be spilt, let it be done by your hand, and rest upon your own head. Blood! and almost my own blood, too—for George Hazelton's father was my cousin—"

The voice died away in the distance, the rapidly retreating figures disappeared, and Lucy Mott stood, white and trembling, with clasped hands, and a heart the wild beatings of which seemed to suffocate her.

Suddenly starting from the stupor of horror, she threw up her arms, and cried, as in an agonized prayer:—

"Oh, my Father in heaven, what shall I—what can I do?"

What could she do, indeed? For, to save the man she loved, even could this be done, would be to convict her father.

Her first impulse now was to rush wildly out of doors, and, running in the direction in which her father disappeared, to shriek his name frantically in a half-formed design of pleading with him, of saving him from crime, and George Hazelton from violence, if not death.

But the two men, walking rapidly, were already beyond the reach of her voice, scarcely to be heard amid the uproar of the now rising storm. Then Lucy turned, and, scarcely conscious of what she did, ran swiftly across the sands, through the tangled gorse-bushes, and over the low marshy track, thick with reeds and rushes, which lay between her father's house and the road that ran a half a mile from the beach.

It was here that George Hazelton must pass on his return from the distant town of M——, whither she knew he had yesterday gone. She had heard a neighbor say something about his having purchased a tract of land adjoining his own, and that it would be paid for on the morrow.

For this purpose, doubtless, was the four thousand dollars intended, which was now, perhaps to cost him his life. The thought quickened the girl's steps, and she flew rather than ran, despite the now falling rain, and the violence of the wind, which was tossing her hair and her garments wildly about. Hoarse peals of thunder broke over her head, and vivid flashes of lightning nearly blinded her, but on she ran, never slacking her speed, or pausing to take breath.

Suddenly she caught, amid the roar of the storm, a sound which sent every drop of blood tingling to her heart—the sound of a horse's rapidly approaching tread. If she should be one moment too late! And again the girl pressed on, with a wild cry, which the wind bore away like the sound of a lost spirit in agony.

Faint was the sound, it reached the ears of young Hazelton. He slackened his horse's speed, and turned in the direction whence it came. And then, rushing across the dreary waste, with arms imploringly outstretched, and hair flying wildly behind her, he saw a form which had more the appearance of a spirit than of anything human. The next moment she had reached him, and the lightning revealed to him the white face of Lucy Mott, the fisherman's daughter.

In an instant young Hazelton had sprung to the ground, and caught the form of the almost fainting girl.

"Good heavens, Lucy, what has happened? Why are you here in the storm?" he questioned, anxiously.

And Lucy could only answer, in breathless, broken gasps:—

"No further!—no further! Danger—robbery—murder——" and then, utterly exhausted and overcome, she sank fainting in his grasp.

George remembered the money he had with him, together with certain warnings he had received from his friends and had laughed at, concerning the danger of carrying it with him on a lonely side, and he now instantly comprehended it all. He was armed, and trusting to this and his horse's speed, he would still have braved the threatening danger; but to ride on and leave the girl alone and helpless in the storm was not to be thought of, even had she been less dear to him than she was. Neither, considering the circumstances, could he take her home to her father's cottage.

He knew that Philip Mott, a relative of his own father, was not a very scrupulous character, and that he had of late been very intimate with the young man Martin Heriot, concerning whom grave rumors had but this day reached his ears in M——, in connection with mutiny and murder on the high seas. As this thought flashed across him, he instinctively divined the circumstances of the case, and the cause of Lucy's strange appearance and warning.

It took not a moment to decide upon what course he should pursue, and lifting the form of the still insensible girl, he placed her in front of him and the saddle, and turning sharply off from the road, struck across the low, marshy track, which extended some distance further between the road and his home. His horse floundered on rather heavily at first, for he was weary with his days' journey; but ere long, finding firmer ground beneath him, broke into a swifter pace. In an hour's time the young man had alighted at the door of his own house, and lifting his strange burden, he conveyed her within, and gave her into the charge of his mother and sister.

"Do all you can for her, mother. She has saved my life."

And good, motherly Mrs. Hazelton, and the warm-hearted Alice, prompted partly by kindness, and more by gratitude, did do all that they could for their fair though humble guest, both then and through the long illness that followed. For the excitement of that evening, together with her fatigue and exposure to the storm, had their effect upon Lucy, in fever and utter prostration of body and mind.

For three weeks she lay ill beneath the roof of the great house with the tall chimneys and Lombardy poplars, upon which she had so often wistfully gazed from the window of her own humble home. And yet—as they told her when she grew better—her own grandmother, who was also the grandmother of George and Alice, had once been mistress of that house.

Wherefore, said people, it was not strange and inappropriate after all, that Lucy herself should in time become its mistress. They would not allow her to go back to the cottage on the beach, but, won by her loveliness of person and disposition, insisted upon keeping her with them at Rocklands; and in less than a year after, she, as Mrs. George Hazelton, claimed it as her legitimate home. And no stranger who now sees her, beautiful, refined, cultivated, presiding at her husband's table, or driving with her two rosy children along the beach, toward the fashionable watering-place that has since sprung up in the neighborhood, could imagine that in one of the fishermen's cottages on the sands the elegant Mrs. Hazelton had once her home.

Martin Heriot was arrested the day after the designed robbery and probable murder of Hazelton, by officers of justice, who had long been in search of him. Philip Mott, who, though reckless, was not depraved, rejoiced that he had escaped the commission of the crime from which his daughter had saved him; and henceforth, through his own better convictions, and the exertions of Lucy and George, became an altered, and much more respectable character. The latter's money, and influence obtained him a good situation, which gratified his seafaring taste, and Lucy, in her prosperity, never failed in her duty as a daughter.

When you have an opportunity to praise, do with all your heart.

How little do we know that which we are; how less what we may be!

Power does not consist in striking strongly or often, but in striking justly.

There is only one objection to well-meaning people—that is, they have not time for "well-doing."

Never does a man portray his own character more vividly than in his manner of portraying another's.

Most men keep on hand a large assortment of evils while their stock of excellencies is ruinously low.

Whenever you find a man who hasn't done a stroke of honest work for years, who is in debt to all the grocers and butchers in town, who is the most prompt to step up to the bar when some generous individual asks the crowd to "take suthin," and who thinks it is the churches which are "ruinin this country," you will be sure to find a man who thinks he is thoroughly posted in political affairs and able to expound constitutional law after the most approved style.

WANTED TO WARM UP.

"Say, stranger, kin I git a fight in yere?" he asked, looking cautiously around and wetting his hand in a premonitory sort of way.

"What kind of a fight would you like?" asked the barkeeper, eyeing him gloomily.

"Pistol, knife, fist, tooth, anything. I want to live up to the prevailin' style. Suit yerself, pardner."

"Well," observed the host, picking up a base ball bat, "how'll this suit you? Like to try something in this line?"

"Haven't you got a sword, or a cleaver, or a buzz saw, or somethin' that yer can rely onto if we get close together? Ain't ther some weapon that goes more into the gore business?"

"This will do me," replied the barkeeper, waltzing over the bar and slamming the pugnacious visitor against the wall. "Don't need anything better than this," and he banged him across a beer table. "Got enough?"

"I ain't got started yit," said the stranger, as he lifted the barkeeper over the stove. "Don't git impatient. I'll warm up in a second," and he hoisted his antagonist over the bar. "Jist indulge these false starts; I'll go under the string for a heat in a minute," and he hauled the barkeeper out by the ear and broke half a dozen chairs with him. "I'll rouse up putty quick now. Gimme a little time," and he danced a hornpipe on his foe and then pitched him through the back door. "Now I'm feelin' the inspiration! Whoop!" and he kicked his enemy under the porch.

"Hi, stranger! Ain't this fruit? Talk about spring vegetables! What's lamb and peas to this," and he fired the unhappy barkeeper down cellar.

"What was your object in wanting to fight me?" asked the wallopped barkeeper, as he crawled out and set the bottle and glasses on the counter.

"Yer see, pardner," said the stranger, filling a glass to the brim, and holding it between his eyes and the light, "yer see, I've only been married a month, and I haven't been home for a week, and I wanted to be warmed up into trim for the matinee. There's four bar-rooms twixt here and my house, and by the time I git thar, pot lids and flatirons will only be an appetizer for me. Married man, pardner?"

"No," replied the barkeeper, shoving the bottle toward his late enemy. "I'm not, but my father was. I know how it is."—Brooklyn Eagle.

A DRINK FOR EACH.

"John White, did you ever hear of Christopher Columbus?" asked his Honor of a laborer who had the remnants of a big drunk still hanging about him.

"No, sir—never did."

"Well, he discovered America."

"Did he?"

"He did, but he wouldn't have discovered one end of Cape Cod if he had got on a tear instead of attending to his business. No man who drinks whisky can hope to become great. No man who falls down in a drunken stupor on a vacant lot can expect the world to revere his memory or erect monuments over his deeds."

"But I had trouble, your Honor."

"Wife run away?"

"Oh, no, sir; I only wish she had! I was working over on Brandy street yesterday when I got word that a strange woman was at my house, claiming that she was one of my deserted wives from Canada."

"Yes."

"And it wasn't twenty minutes after that before the wife I left in Indiana seven years ago went past in the direction of my house."

"Yes."

"Well, I could either drown myself or get drunk, and I thought it best to get drunk. I took a drink for each one, and the last I remember was trying to climb a lamp-post for apples."

"How is it about these wives?"

"Well, I was divorced from two, and I've got the papers to show for it, but I don't care about going home for a few days yet. My last wife has a tongue like a file, and a temper like a jack-knife."

"Shall I send you up?"

"If you please, give me thirty days, and by that time the three will have settled all disputes over me."

"Well, I'll make it thirty."

"Thanks. As I told you before, I've got my divorces all O. K., but them two women have come here with their claws sharpened for business, and I'll save my complexion by retiring from the arena for a few days. I've pulled hair with 'em and I know their best hold."—Free Press.

DEMOCRACY.

The Democratic party occupies a commanding and honorable position before the country at the present time.

Unlike the opposition, the jar of contending factions is not heard within its borders, but united and zealous, it stands behind the bulwark of the Constitution ready as ever to battle for the whole people and their welfare only.

The banner of Democracy floats as of old and is boldly inscribed with—

Equal and exact justice to all persons, irrespective of creed, condition, nativity or color.

Equal protection and encouragement for every legitimate industry and business pursuit, and for the small capitalist as surely as for the large.

No privileged classes.

A currency redeemable on demand in the legal tender of the Constitution—gold and silver coin.

Faithful observance of all public obligations.

Restriction and overthrow of the grasping and plundering spirit of monopoly under whatever guise it may appear.

No subsidies or legislative favoritism.

Strict economy in the outlay of public money, and the abolishment of all useless and extravagant expenses.

Reduction of debt and taxation.

Honesty and ability the required tests for filling every public office, from the highest to the lowest.

No political bosses and corrupt spoils system.

The re-establishment of ocean commerce and acquirement of world-wide markets for American products.

Practical enterprise, not gambling speculation.

Freedom of religion, of speech and of the press.

Equality of citizenship and its protection abroad as at home.

Freedom and purity of the ballot.

The civil authority superior to the military.

The defence of the rights of labor against every species of tyrannical exaction.

A dignified and efficient administration of public affairs, conducted for the good of the people and the honor of country, and not for mercenary individual gain or partisan ambition.

That is Democracy.

The same Jefferson made victorious in his day and which gave to the Republic power and grandeur and to the people genuine prosperity.

Democracy is unchanged and unchangeable.

Its triumph now means the safety of free representative government and the permanent enjoyment of attendant blessings.

Democrats! Press onward!

We have, at a great expense, ascertained who will be the next Senator and Sheriff from Union County, the certainty of electing them occurring next Fall. We are aware that diligent and faithful reporters of Republican dailies and weak-lies have told their readers whom the nominees will be, preferring to ferret out and announce the names of the same rather than bother their Democratic neighbors, or put them to any expense to announce the news to their readers, but we dislike that kind of courtesy and desire to not be behind in giving information. Therefore, we would say that the incoming officials above quoted will be of Democratic proclivities, and when the proper time comes their names will be announced through the columns of THE CONSTITUTIONALIST. We are very much obliged to our Republican friends for naming the candidates to be elected by our party, but we prefer to make our own arrangements for the funeral of the Republican candidates.

* * *

It would be really refreshing to find in one of the Republican exchanges that come to us, an allusion, however distant or delicate, to a "non partisan judiciary." But the idea, which they have, on convenient occasions, made the "prologue to a swelling theme," has apparently faded entirely from their mind. It is not that judicial appointments are not now in order as the subject of discussion. The fact is the other way. The Republican journals all have something to say about the death of Justice Clifford of the United States Supreme Court, and his probable successor, but they evidently regard his death as only another opportunity for aiding one more Republican to the long and unbroken line of judicial appointments from that party by Republican Presidents. If the Supreme Court stood seven Democrats to one Republican and one vacancy, instead of seven Republicans and one Democrat, as it now does, and a Democratic Executive were in office, it is not difficult to imagine the loud and ceaseless clamor that would be going up from the Republican press for a concession to the principle of "non partisan judiciary." There was never a better chance for a party to live up to its professions than is afforded by the opportunity to advocate the appointment of a Democrat in Judge Clifford's place. The Supreme Court would, were even such an appointment made, still consist of seven Republicans to two Democrats. But they evidently hope to illustrate their love for a "non partisan judiciary" by making the highest judicial tribunal in the country solidly Republican, if they have a chance.—Trenton True American.

The morning after a great storm twenty years ago, some Monmouth Beach fisherman found a water spaniel lying exhausted on the sand. Lashed on his back was a child that had died of exposure. Several vessels had been wrecked on the coast that night, and it was never known whence the dog and child came. The dog soon recovered, was named Gunner, and until the day of his death was a favorite with everybody. In the summer time he would lie on the beach or run up and down the sand during the bathing hours, always ready to dash into the water to the rescue of some weak swimmer who had ventured out too far. He saved a very large number of lives. He considered children under his special protection, and was a favorite playmate for them. Last Saturday he was told to drive some cows from pasture, and while doing his duty one of the animals drove her horns into poor Gunner's side, inflicting fatal injuries.

Coup's circus was announced to appear in Cohoes, N. Y., on the 20th proximo, but Mayor Thorne, the manager of the Harmony Mills, where 6,000 operatives are employed, bearing in mind the effect on mill hands at Paterson, N. J., when a circus appeared there recently, notified Mr. Coup that a fee of $250 would be exacted. Mr. Coup declined to pay it, and will pitch his tents just outside the city limits.

A STARTLING ENTERPRISE.

American ingenuity, stimulated to almost superhuman efforts of conception by the favorable results of the experiments recently made with a view to tunneling the bed of the British Channel, has put forth an amazing project for connecting Great Britain with the United States by a Transatlantic railway. Rejecting the notion of driving a tunnel under the ocean, as too tedious and expensive, the devisers of this scheme propose to sink upon the Atlantic bed an iron tube some three thousand miles long and twenty-six feet in diameter, through which two trains might travel simultaneously with perfect convenience and safety. As, however, this tube would be subjected to exterior water pressure equal to that of about one hundred and twenty atmospheres, its casing will have to be at least eighteen inches thick. The tube is to consist of sections, each a hundred and sixty feet in length, and it is to be laid down in the following manner: Five such sections are to be welded together upon firmly-anchored pontoons, both ends of the length thus prepared for sinking being hermetically closed, but in such sort that they can be opened from within. Then the entire compartment, eight hundred feet long, is to be lowered into the sea by steel chains, so that it shall reach the bottom in immediate proximity to the section it is destined to join. The juncture will, of course, be effected by submarine workmen; and these processes will be carried on with undeviating regularity, starting from the American coast, until the shores of Ireland shall be attained by the mighty tube. Meanwhile, the laying of rails, telegraph wires, lighting and ventilation apparatus, etc., will go on inside the tube as it grows longer and larger. Mr. Edison believes that he can perfect an electric locomotive to draw the train along through the tube in fifty hours, from shore to shore; and the cost of the whole line, rolling stock included, is not to exceed £160,000,000.—Exchange.

TARDY RECOGNITION.

In the issue of THE CONSTITUTIONALIST, of July 15, we referred to the fact that no recognition had been made by the citizens of Bound Brook to the firemen of Plainfield who assisted so materially in quelling the disastrous conflagration occurring in that village weeks previous. While no other journal, excepting the Bound Brook Chronicle, took part in the subject, the citizens generally of that village remarked on the justness of our remarks, which we are happy to state has culminated in an acknowledgement of the services of our firemen, as the following letter addressed to the officers of No. 2 Eng. Co., accompanied with a draft of $25, will attest:

BOUND BROOK, July 25, 1881.

SIR:—My attention has been called to the fact that no acknowledgement whatever has been made by the citizens of Bound Brook for the kindly and timely service rendered by your Company in the late fire. Though all my interests were at a safe distance from the scene of peril, still I plead guilty to the indictment, and hasten to make amends individually. Your services were greatly appreciated and will be held in everlasting remembrance—first, because of your labors put forth in quelling the flames, and second, because of the manly conduct of your Company by which you greatly assisted in the preservation of the public order and peace. Again thanking you for your invaluable services, I beg your acceptance of the enclosed as the practical mark of my individual appreciation.

Respectfully, &c.,
JOHN P. TALMAGE.

EXPLORING FOR THE BULLET.

Further tests with the induction balance, for the purpose of locating the exact position of the bullet in the President's body, were made on Monday. One account says the experiment resulted in finding the exact spot where the bullet lays, and that Dr. Agnew has merely to make a rapid cut with a lancet in order to remove the projectile. Prof. Bell, however, in his official report to the surgeons, after tracing the action of his instrument, says: "In our preliminary experiments we found that a bullet like the one in question, when in its normal shape, produced no audible effect beyond a distance of two and a half inches; while the same bullet, flattened and presented with its face parallel to the plane of the coils, gave indications up to a distance of five inches. The same flattened bullet, held with its face perpendicular to the plane of the coils, produced no sound beyond a distance of one inch. The facts show that in ignorance of the actual shape and mode of presentation of the bullet to the exploring instrument, the depth at which the bullet lies beneath the surface cannot be determined from our experiments."

It seems to us an unjust libel upon our Fire Department to insinuate through newspaper articles that the members of the Department are the cause of all false alarms and fires occurring within its limits. Because the firemen are always on the alert to answer to a call for duty in their line, and are prompt in obeying, is no reason why a particular company or member should be stigmatized as the originators of the alarm or fire. To be sure there is always more or less confusion and noise on the occasion of a "run," but as a rule the members of the Plainfield Fire Department are as orderly a set of firemen as will be found in a city of our size with a volunteer department. Give the devil his due, and "hunt the (other) rascal down."

The fire in the No. 9 slope of the Lehigh Coal and Navigation Company's mine at Landsford was caused by one of the bosses entering the slope with a naked lamp which ignited the gases. Powell, the boss who carried the lamp, was taken out of the mine nearly suffocated and unconscious for hours. Two hundred men and boys were in the slope when the fire broke out, but they were all taken out safely. The mules were also rescued. The fire is still raging fiercely, and measures are being taken to turn in the water and flood it.

At Peoria, Ill., on Monday, while Patrick W. Crowe, inventor of the infernal machines that were recently shipped to England, and which caused such a commotion, was walking up Main street in that city, he was arrested by the United States Marshal on an order from Wayne McVeagh, United States Attorney General. Crowe took his arrest as a matter of course. The news quickly spread throughout the city, and created the greatest excitement. A number of leading citizens gathered, and bail in the sum of $10,000 was tendered, but the Marshal simply replied to all inquiries that he could take no bail, and that Crowe must go with him to Chicago, where he was taken.

Perth Amboy and Somerville are about building water works. What is the reason that some report is not made from the Common Council Committee in reference to the proposed erection of fire works in this city?

The Democrats carried Kentucky by increased majorities.

LOCAL ANNEX.

The Saengerbund Picnic

and Summer Night's Festival, at Wooden's Grove, North Plainfield, Thursday evening, August 11th, promises to be one of the most enjoyable occasions ever held in this vicinity. A large dancing platform and inspiring music from eight pieces under the leadership of Prof. Sam. Franze, will be attractive features of the affair. Refreshments of all kinds may be procured on the grounds. The price of admission will be only 25 cents. In the evening the grove will be brilliantly illuminated.

The Best of the Season.

It was the universal remark of every one who attended the Excursion of "Plainfield Engine Co., No. 2" to Neshaminy Falls and Rocky Glen Groves on Tuesday last that it was the "best excursion of the season." The excursion train, consisting of seven well loaded cars, left this city at eight o'clock in the morning, and after making stops at Dunellen and Bound Brook for passengers, sped over the rails of the Philadelphia and New York new line to its point of destination, the time over the route being about one hour and a quarter. The excursionists speak in glowing terms of the beautiful groves and scenery where their day of unalloyed enjoyment was spent. Not a harsh word or unpleasant occurrence transpired during the entire day. The large dancing platforms at the Groves were covered the whole time the party were there with merry dancers who pronounced Prof. Banner's music fine. The Committee of Arrangements and in fact all members of the Company did their best (and succeeded in it, too) to make everything pleasant for all. The proprietor of the Groves, Mr. Wm. Griffith, made the flattering remark that the excursionists were the best behaved party that had visited him during the season. All speak in the highest terms of the advantages and beauty of Rocky Glen and Neshaminy Falls Groves as a resort for excursionists. The location of the Grove is about 18 miles from Philadelphia or 15 from Trenton. The entrance to the grounds are very near the station. Is is located on a hill which commands a fine view of the surrounding country. Adjacent is a beautiful lake, with a large number of boats on it. Fine croquet grounds, large pavillions, dancing platforms tables, stands, and every thing necessary for pic-nic purposes make this Grove one of the finest places in the country for excursionists to visit. The return train, bearing its freight of human happiness, arrived safely at the depot in this city about 9:30 o'clock in the evening.

We Wonder

When Plainfield will have water works.

When Plainfield will be Democratic in politics.

When our streets will be again lighted by gas.

When there will be no false alarms of fire.

When a law will be passed to stone the fellow to death who tells the biggest lie about fish.

When a newspaper can be run to suit every person.

When delinquent taxpayers will pay up without resorting to alias warrants served by Constable Moore.

When people will cease to go out of town for the necessaries of life, instead of patronizing home industries.

When dogs will become mad in Plainfield. (No Pound.)

When we will have music in our Public Park.

When the mud and filth will be scraped from our streets.

When the Common Council will have a quorum.

When the "Zeph's" will get their new truck.

When can be found a more efficient Fire Department than ours.

When our Council will have no more mandamus or judgments.

When better music can be procured for picnics, etc., than Sam. Franze furnishes.

When the weak fish will commence to bite.

When more courteous railroad officials can be found than those at our Plainfield station.

When people will desist from walking on elevated railroad tracks.

When we shall record the erection of an Opera House in Plainfield.

When we shall have a vacation. (Money furnished by delinquents.)

When our stores will close their doors at 8 o'clock in the evening.

When daily papers will pay in suburban cities.

Our City's Poor.

It will be cheering to those interested in the welfare of the poor of this city, to know that by means of the liberal contributions to the Relief Association, aid and comfort have been given to a number of very sick persons during the present season. This good result has been more readily accomplished by the hearty co-operation with the society of Mr. Vanderbeck, the Commissioner of Charities, whose ear has always been open to cases of real distress and whose advice and assistance has been most cordial and assistful. It is sometimes supposed that the work of the Association ceases during the summer months, which is a great mistake. It differs in character from that of the winter, but is no less important. In the winter its very marked feature, is the Employment Bureau, its object being by giving out sewing, to save those women from dependence and pauperism, who cannot obtain the house-cleaning and laundry work so abundant in the summer. At this season the Bureau is closed, and the few ladies of the society who remain in Plainfield devote its fund specially to the care of the sick poor. A touching case is that of a colored woman in Pruden's Lane, who died a few days since, her last days made comfortable by the united efforts of the city, the visitors of the Relief Society and her very kind neighbor Mrs. Warnock. An urgent desire is felt in this connection for the speedy completion of the Muhlenberg Hospital, which will prove a most valuable auxiliary to the work of the Association. The kind offices of our physicians avail little, where there are no appliances for proper nursing. Could our citizens visit these homes of suffering and realize how utterly inadequate they are in their appointments to meet the demands of the case; could they know the difficulty, (where the patient is homeless) of procuring a room and care for the sick person, we think the speedy opening of our Hospital would soon be an assured fact.

It may be sometimes wise to withhold charity where the need is the result of vice and indolence, in order to administer a wholesome lesson, but the moral status of the individual may not be questioned where real bodily sickness exists with its train of suffering.

We may not in this matter be wiser than the Master, who healed the body and then said: "Go and sin no more."

We ask you who are in health and the enjoyment of homes of plenty, to remember the sick poor, in their hot, confined quarters, and if your circumstances in life forbid your personal ministrations to them, place your money where it will be used judiciously for their benefit.

FIRE MATTERS.

Gazelle steamer went to the Fifth street fire well after the false alarm of fire on Monday night and indulged in a "wash." Dr. Utter, who resides on the Bache property, desiring the boys to wash off the dust from his house, they kindly accommodated him, although the powerful stream thrown burst open doors and smashed window panes behind blinds. The engine worked admirably, showing a water pressure on the hose of 150 pounds with 60 pounds of steam.

A false alarm of fire about nine o'clock, Monday evening, brought out the entire department, but about half past one o'clock the next morning there came an alarm that caused the firemen work in earnest. As a coal train, drawn by engine No. 540, was passing through the city, the crew discovered flames issuing from the old barn situated along side the railroad, at Madison avenue, and last occupied by Mr. S. C. Ryder as a kindling wood factory. The whistle of the locomotive continued to screech forth an alarm as it passed onward, which was taken up by the engine of the "owl train" just then arrived at the depot. Soon an alarm was struck from the tower, and the fire apparatus were quickly at the scene. No. 1 engine arrived first and took position on the fire well corner of Madison avenue and Second street, quickly followed by No. 2 steamer who took position on the same well. No. 1 soon had two streams on the fire. Finding that this well would not stand the working of two steamers at once, No. 2 was removed to the Second street well near Park avenue, on which No. 3 was located. Soon there was four streams on the fire and the flames speedily extinguished. The fire was first discovered by a colored man living directly across the street from the building, before the passing locomotive gave the alarm. He carried water and dashed on the flames but failed to extinguish them. The building belonged to Mr. Edward M. Holmes, and the loss is not very great. The fire certainly appears to have occurred from incendiarism.

FIRE BOARD MEETING.

The Fire Commissioners met in the Council Chamber on Wednesday evening last. President Van Winkle in the Chair. Members all present, except Treasurer Depew. Called to order at 8:30, P. M. Minutes of last meeting read by Sec. Gillies and approved as read. Zephyr H. & L. Co. presented the name of R. A. Mumford for membership of that Company, also name of James Farley, suspended for non-payment of dues; Alert Hose presented W. A. Rase as a suitable member for the Department. New members lay over for one month, and in case of Farley and any others suspended for cause to vindicate themselves within the same time or have their names stricken from the books. Com. on Repairs and Supplies reported progress on the new Truck, Department Badges and leasing of Alert Hose House.

The Board proceeded to ballot for the following new members: Gazelle, 1, Wm. Bachman, James Bird and Wm. Van Sickle; Warren, 3, John Harding, F. M. Whitely, Lewis Craig and A. L. Foote; Plainfield, No. 2, J. H. Wilson, Jos. B. Miller and Edward Mosher; all were unanimously elected.

Mr. Gillies reported that he had examined the records and found that Jacob Kriney and Eugene Zeiss had served their lawful time and were entitled to exemption papers. So ordered.

Mr. Morris had been informed that, as the Council had shut off the gas supply, the lamps in front of the engine houses could be lighted and half paid for by the Department, the other half to be raised by the residents in the neighborhood of the houses; the cost would be about two dollars a month, and if this arrangement could be made, would move, as a matter of safety in running out, it be done. Carried.

Mr. Morris moved that when the Board adjourn it be for one week from date, giving as a reason that in the absence of the Treasurer no bills could be paid. Motion carried.

Mr. Morris offered the following resolution, which was adopted, viz.: That at each regular meeting of this Board the Treasurer be instructed to furnish a statement of the exact condition of the finances.

Board adjourned at 8:55.

NORTH PLAINFIELD PARAGRAPHS.

The city tax case is set down for Monday next at Blatz Hotel, at 2:30 p. m.

While mowing on his "back lot" recently, Mr. Geo. Demler killed two enormous copperhead snakes. These poisonous reptiles are reported as quite numerous this season.

Isaac Coulter was awarded the contract for the wood work of the new bridge to be constructed over the Passaic river near Hon. David Smalley's residence. Parties from Morris County have the contract for the stone work.

Mr. Wm. Vantyle, a gentleman who came to Washingtonville for his health a couple of weeks since, stopping at the residence of Mrs. Smith, died on Wednesday. Mr. V. came from Jamesport, Staten Island, where he held the position of Postmaster.

Travelers passing in the vicinity of the Howard place complain of an intolerable stench arising from the carcass of a dead cow, which it is asserted was taken from the Wadleigh farm on Somerset Street after death and dragged through the highways to the point where it now lies without burial. It is also stated that the animal died from the cattle disease. There is a heavy penalty attached for such carelessness and neglect as above mentioned.

As a supplement to our last week's report of the proceedings before Justice McLoughlin in the cases of the State, &c., vs. Holmes and the State, &c., vs. Sullivan, we have to note that the defendant, Holmes, subsequently demanded a hearing, and the court set down the case for the 18th inst. A similar course was taken in the case against Sullivan, and the hearing was also appointed for the 18th inst. On the same day, the civil case of Sullivan vs. Holmes, for $200, will be argued. From the well-known character of one of the parties it is expected that the cases will prove very exciting. Mr. Holmes has retained eminent counsel from Jersey City, viz: Messrs. Ransom & Haines, and Miss Sullivan has retained Craig A. Marsh, Esq., of this city.

Since Wm. F. S. McLoughlin, Esq., qualified as Justice, many learned counsel have been engaged in cases in his court. Besides most of our local counsel among others, might be mentioned Advisory Master Gaston, Hon. A. H. Clark, R. V. Lindabury, Esq., and Messrs. Ransom & Haines; but the most persistent advocates yet before him were a farmer, his wife and son arguing their own case in the action of Keen vs. Wise on Monday last. Counsel for the plaintiff, Craig A. Marsh, Esq. not objecting, the court allowed defendants to present their defense in their own way, and this privilege they were not slow to accept, stalking vehemently in turn or simultaneously on the witness stand and at every stage of the proceedings until reiteration became painful. What was most remarkable was that upon the court giving judgement in favor of the plaintiff, the defendants, including the lady, were satisfied as to the correctness of the decision, and the judgment was at once liquidated.

SCOTCH PLAINS SCRATCHINGS.

Mr. Putnam has sold his residence to Mr. George Thomie.

It was James A. Baker who had a harness stolen from him a short time since, not James Baker. Sorry we omitted that A. "Jimmy."

Mr. Warren Ackerman is introducing water into his fine residence by means of pipes leading from a spring on the mountain side a quarter of a mile away from the house.

Quoit pitching still continues to be the leading pleasure of the denizens of the "Plains." Brittin's hotel is the centre of attraction for good grounds whereon to participate in the sport.

ONE of Ericson's Caloric Pumping Engines may be seen in operation at Mr. Wm. Addis' Plumbing Establishment this (Friday) evening. Attention is directed to the advertisement and cut of the engine in the columns of THE CONSTITUTIONALIST.

THERE will be a camp meeting held in Hyde's Grove, North Plainfield, on Mountain avenue commencing Aug. 13th, and continuing three Sabbeths, under the management of Rev. E. H. Chippey, Pastor and Rev. Joseph King, assistant. Hacks will run daily from Plainfield to the Camp at reasonable rates.

SEASON 1881.
IDOL!
[Formerly Peck's IDOL,]
By the great Mambrino Chief founder of the Mambrino family; 1st dam by American Eclipse, son of Duroc (founder of the Star family) by imported Diomed. Dam of American Eclipse, Miller's Damsel, by imported Messenger; 2d dam, Kitty Mate by Shakespeare; 3d dam, Ellen Jenkins, by Sir William of Transport; 4th dam by Orphan, son of Ball's Florizel; 5th dam by imported Bedford; 6th dam by Silvertail; 7th dam by imported Dove.
IDOL is a rich dark bay, weighs 1,200 lbs., with nigh hind foot white, full sixteen hands high, a horse of great substance, fine temper, elegant trotting action, record 2:41¼ as a four-year old, distancing his field, and at five years old showed 2:33, third heat, to wagon. As a six year old he made his first season in the stud, but the war prevented the development of his progeny. Few of his colts have been trained, but those few are mostly fast. Idol Girl, 16 hands high, won Beacon, Mystic, and Prospect Park stakes for four year olds during 1871, obtained a record of 2:36¾. This mare at that age could beat 2:30, and at Prospect Park trotted during her race a half mile in 1:13½, and a quarter in 35¼ seconds—a 2:21 gait. As a five year old she met with an accident which ended her turf career. Barbara Fatchen, in 1879, as a big 16¼ hand green 5 year old mare, won all her races in a jog, and the seventh heat, on a half-mile track, gained record 2:34¾. Ben, at Topeka, Kansas, won his race in 2:38. Wayco won colt stakes at Hartford. Nannette trotted, 3 years old, in 2:44. Ideal, same age, trotted in 2:45, and John H., in 1880, gained a record of 2:39 on a half mile track at Olean, N. Y., and won first money in all his races. There are others that will drop into the 2:30 list this year without doubt.
IDOL will be limited to 10 mares, besides those engaged, at $50.00 the season, money payable (or secured) at service.
Good care and pasture furnished at $5 per month. All accidents and escapes at owners' risk. IDOL and some of his colts can be seen at the grazing farm of D. F. CARLE, Stirling, Morris Co., New Jersey.
Breeders desiring an endurance should call and see IDOL, and after seeing him, judge for themselves.

LOCAL DEPARTMENT.

Official Paper of the State, the County and the City, and has the Largest Circulation of any Weekly in Union County.

Now the days grow shorter.

The year 1881 is pegging out fast.

Vennor hits the mark occasionally.

The welcome rain came on Monday.

Blackberries are plentiful and cheap.

A sales lady is wanted at White's dry goods store. See adv.

Numerous excursion trains pass over the Central Railroad every day.

The morning Sunday School services of Grace church are now held at 9:15 and the afternoon service at 3:30. No service in the evening.

The Bound Brook Chronicle has adopted the patent outside plan and reduced the size of its sheet. Both are good improvements to the Chronicle.

The heavy shower of Monday did not extend beyond Plainfield avenue, a distance of half a mile from the centre of the city, where the rain poured down in torrents.

Hunt, the photographer, has taken himself away to the sea shore for business and pleasure combined. His studio in this city will be [illegible] for a month to come.

The slight drizzling rain and showers the past few days have done more for suffering humanity in allaying the dust on our public streets than all the street sprinklers combined, with their weekly assessments.

Wm. Addis, the North avenue plumber, is out with his delivery wagon re-painted and lettered in a fine manner. Mr. Addis is agent for the celebrated caloric pump engine, several of which he has put up in private residences in this city.

Our gentlemanly railroad officials at the depot feel justly proud of the improvements being made about that institution by the Central Railroad Company, who have no more courteous employees on the line than those at our station.

A seven year old daughter of Mr. Frank Lougherty, a resident of the building termed the "Great Eastern," on East Fourth street, fell from a second story window to the ground below on Friday last, sustaining severe injuries.

John Goodwin, a young lad who about a year since suffered the loss of one of his legs by amputation, in consequence of white swelling, now hobbles along with one arm in a sling, the result of too careless handling of one of those dangerous firearms known as a "toy pistol."

While engaged in work where laborers are opening the raceway between the lands of Messrs. Johnston and Hyde, on Farragut avenue, on Saturday last, Mr. Thomas Roan fell over a heap of dirt, and before he could arise, a horse he was leading at the time, trampled on his person, injuring him severely.

Those desiring pure (and of course all who use the articles desire such) imported beers, ales, whiskies, wines and cigars, should give a trial of those advertised by Mr. Miller, proprietor of Laing's Hotel. His Kaiser Beer, imported by Fred Hollender is something very fine. Read the list in another column.

A great improvement is being made to the handsome residence of Mr. Lawrence K. Myers on East Front street, by the erection of a two-story brick addition to the rear part of the dwelling, 32x22 feet in dimensions. The work is being satisfactorily done by Isaac Milburn, mason, and Shepherd, Johnson & Godown, builders.

Frankey Concha, Esq., of North Plainfield, allowed himself to get under the influence of too much poor benzine one day last week, and was kindly taken care of by officer Randolph for attempting to drive a rack of bones and skin too fast through our public thoroughfares. Judge Runyon assessed Frank $3.00 for his indulgence.

There was no quorum present of the members of Common Council last Monday evening, and the consequence is—no report of Council proceedings in our columns this week. President Whiton announced that there would be a special meeting of Council held next Monday evening to transact any business that might properly come before it.

Considerable interest has been manifested recently by builders, regarding the pending suit brought against Mr. Isaac Pangborn, builder, on a charge of obstructing a public street with builder's materials. The case was to have been argued before Justice Wadsworth on Saturday last, but by consent of Counsel was postponed until September.

From compiled statements made by political "great heads" it appears that under the new regime laid out by our city fathers in the formation of wards for the city of Plainfield, that Wards No. 1 and 4 are of Democratic proclivities, and the 2d and 3d of Republican faith, with the three-at-large Councilmen to be heard from after the ballots are counted.

It is certainly a disgrace to the city that our public thoroughfares remain in such a filthy condition by the accumulation of mud and debris from grocery and fruit stores. Undoubtedly there are many farmers or huck-sters who would be glad to clear up and cart away the refuse if they were asked to do so. At all events the streets want a cleaning up.

No recent mandamus has been served upon the good and honest citizens of Plainfield by County Collector Sheridan, although "Sherry" says he has an eye upon our city's affairs. Go to Rahway—and Elizabeth, "Sherry," and leave us alone until we have some Democratic representatives in our city government, which will be next December.

Mr. George Kessicking came near meeting with a serious accident on Monday evening last while running to a false alarm of fire. When opposite Laing's hat store, he and a stout person running from opposite directions, collided, and both were thrown with great force to the sidewalk. Mr. K. had one of his fingers injured quite severely. "Py schiminy, dot was a narrow escape."

Fish are quoted as a brain-producing food. Whether this theory includes salt mackerel or not we are unable to state. But we do know that skeptics on the subject are testing the toothsome mackerel on sale at Martin Bros.' grocery, corner of Park avenue and Second street, which they are disposing of at two cents each to customers, who purchasing once return again to invest their small change in the same wholesome commodity.

There was a good attendance at the advertised sale of the Wetes property on Park avenue Thursday of last week, under management of A. J. Bleecker & Mumford, real estate agents. Failing to receive a satisfactory bid, the sale was adjourned. It is now announced that the property may be purchased at private sale, with 75 per cent. of the purchase money remaining on bond and mortgage for a term of 10 years at 6 per cent. interest. The property is a valuable one and a bargain for some one on easy terms.

Mr. R. H. Davis, a well-known former resident of this city, has opened an office in the building corner of Park and North avenues, (over Bondfellow's Grocery Store) in connection with his business as Architect, and will be pleased to receive calls from those desiring anything in his line. Mr. Davis has had considerable experience in this business and can proudly point to some handsome business and other buildings in this city as the result of his handiwork, among which is Mr. Vanderbeek's Chautauqua block, in which is located The Constitutionalist office.

Next Sunday morning, at 11 o'clock, divine services will be held in the new Union Chapel at Netherwood, Rev. Dr. G. W. French, of the Protestant Episcopal Diocese of N. Y., officiating. A bell of proper size has been presented the chapel by Mr. Jacob Hayes, a wealthy banker of N. Y. city, who is a guest at Netherwood Hotel. Besides this Mrs. Freeman and Mrs. McCune, of N. Y. city have presented a handsome communion service. It is expected that the new bell will be in position and call worshipers together at the chapel next Sabbath.

The funeral services of Charles Laing, nephew of John W. Laing, Esq., which occurred in this city on Sunday last, was very largely attended. The discourse rendered by Rev. Dr. Yerkes, was very impressive, Rev. A. V. V. Raymond assisting by offering prayer at the house and benediction at the grave. Floral emblems received from friends of deceased were suggestive of the early decline of one universally esteemed and respected. The pall bearers were six young friends of deceased, Messrs. We notice an item traveling through the columns of the State press, stating that the Lehigh Valley Railroad is about to change its course of route so as to pass by the Fair Grounds of the Union & Middlesex Counties' Mutual Agricultural Society near this city. There is no more foundation in the report other than given in the columns of The Constitutionalist over a year ago, when we stated that a survey had been made for a proposed new line of railroad which would pass near the above Fair Grounds. An over-worked reporter of some country daily probably re-hashed the statement made in his endeavor to secure a "local." Such a road as quoted is not in the near future; the blessing it would undoubtedly prove to the Fair Grounds.

It certainly is warm weather.

A New Street Commissioner.

In consequence of the deplorable and filthy condition of Park avenue from Front street to the Railroad, it became evident to citizens residing along the same to have something done to remove the cause of an intolerable stench arising from the streets after a day's hot sun had set. Mr. Gerome Pack took the matter in hand on Tuesday, and informed Street Commissioner Hand of the circumstances. That official, however, declared that he could do nothing in the matter, as he had no money awarded him by Council to do the work. Mr. Pack then asked permission to remove the filth, and was informed that he (the Commissioner) had nothing to do with the matter. Mr. Pack then saw Mr. Peter Osborn who stated that he would be glad to remove the material on the street for the sake of the same for fertilizing purposes. Immediately men were set to work and the street cleaned up in a neat manner. The question now arises will a mandamus be served on Mr. Pack for his sanitary efforts.

A Returned Wanderer.

Mr. Zebulon Compton and wife, old residents of this city, were surprised on Saturday last by the entrance into their place of abode, over Howatt's stationery store, on Front street, of a long absent son named Sylvanus. Mrs. Compton was quick to recognize her son, who has been absent from Plainfield some 20 years, and who is now about 40 years old. In his younger days, Sylvanus resided with his parents on Second street, on the present site of the engine and truck house, and at one time was drug clerk for Mr. Abram Van Neste, who kept a drug store next to Mr. John Schorb's clothing store. He afterward was in the employ of Wm. A. Brown, Jr., & Co., No. 41 Dey street, N. Y., dealers in cloths.

At the breaking out of the war he joined the navy and was transferred to United States sloop-of-war "Richmond," stationed in the West Gulf squadron, under Admiral Farragut, being about 21 years of age. Here he became attached to the surgical staff, and in June, 1862, his parents learned, through a letter from him, that he was on board a ship taking some sick soldiers to New Orleans. This was the last heard from him directly; but they found that he had landed safely in New Orleans and had been seen in that city. No further trace of him could be found, and after a few years had passed it was concluded that he was dead, and his family gave up hope of seeing him again.

Mr. Compton says that while in New Orleans, after arriving there on the ship from which he wrote his letter home, he fell in with a pleasant sort of man, who invited him to join in drinking a bottle of wine. After this he remembered nothing until he was aroused from the stupor cause by the drugged wine, and found himself at sea on board of the trader, Mary Emmet, Captain Gillespie, hailing from Maine, on an 18 month's cruise, when the vessel arrived at Rio Janeiro Compton deserted the vessel, remaining in hiding for three weeks. Capt. G. went to the American Consul and demanded that Compton should be found and delivered up to him as a deserter from the Mary Emmet. This the Consul, of course, could not do. After the Mary Emmet sailed, Compton went before the Consul and told him his story, and was informed by that official that he had been warned to arrest him as a deserter. The Consul advised him to take a ship and escape at some other port where there was no official to arrest him. Compton then shipped on a Dutch trading ship, the Captain of which said he was going North. Instead of that he sailed in a Southerly direction, putting in at Capetown, the seat of Government of Cape Colony. Here he left the ship and remained in the town for several years, marrying and settling down in business. One child was born to him, but both mother and child died before he left the Colony, which he did in 1877, on a vessel of the Orient line, landing at Plymouth and then making Liverpool his place of residence until 1881 when his yearning to once more visit the scenes of his childhood became so strong that he engaged passage on the steamer Lake Nepigon and came hither. During his absence Mr. Compton visited India and other foreign nations, finally making Australia his last place of business. He says he has written home three times during his absence, but neither failed to reach their destination. His parents were overwhelmed with joy at his return. Those who knew him before his sudden disappearance easily recognized him. He says the place has changed very greatly since he left home, but recognized many old schoolmates and landmarks.

Derelict Postmasters.

Forty-three postmasters at Presidential offices have failed to render their quarterly reports to the Post Office Department for the quarter ending, June 30, 1881, which under law they are required to do within one month after the expiration of the quarter. Failing to do this, both Postmasters and sureties are liable under the law to prosecution and to be compelled to pay double the amount of the receipts during the quarter unaccounted for. Third Assistant Postmaster General Hazen will address a letter to those Postmasters calling attention to their offense, and informing them that unless the accounts are rendered at once summary action will be taken by the Department to secure the fine imposed by law for such neglect of duty. The above mentioned list of 43 postmasters were published in Tuesday morning's N. Y. Herald, and among them appeared that of our Plainfield Post Office. A more astounded man than Postmaster Vail, when he was shown the announcement, could not be found in the city. He states that his quarterly statement was made to Postmaster Ward, at Newark, on July 20th, and the receipts for the quarter turned over to that official in accordance with Department orders. Furthermore, he holds and has exhibited to us the following receipt for the same:

No. 247. } Post Office, Newark, N. J., July 20, 1881.

I certify that Wallace Vail, Postmaster at Plainfield, New Jersey, has this day deposited in this office, to the credit of the Post Office Department, on account of the proceeds due the United States for the quarter ending June 30th, 1881, nineteen hundred and forty-three and thirty-nine one-hundredths dollars, for which I have signed duplicate receipts.

W. Ward, P. M.

Following this he states that the sworn quarterly report of the transactions of the office was forwarded direct to Department headquarters at Washington, and should have been received there by Aug. 1st, at which time the limit allowed by law for receiving such reports, expired. Mr. Vail is at a loss to understand the meaning of Plainfield's office appearing in the delinquent list, and is awaiting official notice from Washington, if such a notice is to come. The financial affairs of the office has always heretofore been of excellent standing.

The New York Herald, of Thursday contains the following which explains the matter to Mr. Vail's favor. It says: "On August 1st it was stated at the Post Office Department that forty-three postmasters at Presidential offices had failed to render their quarterly returns. Injustice was done to all or nearly all of those postmasters, as it has since been ascertained at the department that nearly all of them had rendered their returns before July 31. By omitting to comply with the postal regulations, which direct postmasters at Presidential offices to paste a green label on the envelopes, containing their quarterly returns, the envelopes when received at the department were assorted and placed with some forty-five thousand fourth class or small post office quarterly accounts, and only came to hand after the mass of fourth class office accounts had been opened."
